

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

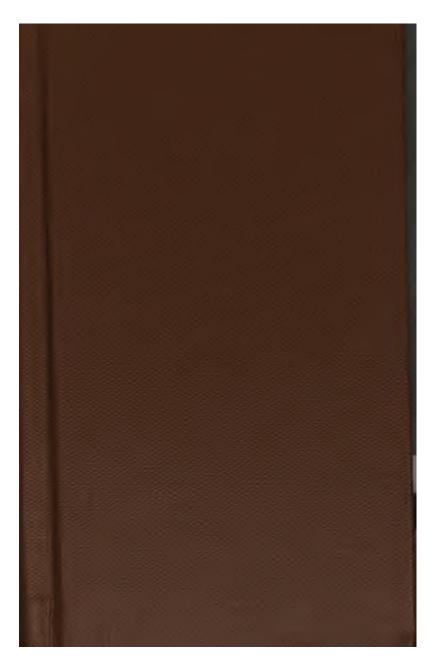

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

PETER the GREAT,

CZAR of Muscovy.

HISTORY

OFTHE

LIFE and REIGN

OF THE CZAR

PETER The GREAT,

EMPEROR OF ALL RUSSIA.

And FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY.

CONTAINING.

L. His Travels, Studies, and III. His Wars with the Sweder, Performal Fatigues, for the erraining of Knowledge in Civil and Military Affairs, and the Improvement of his Sub-

II. His Introduction of Arts and Sciences, Naval Force, and Commerce with Foreign Nanone: Alfo his many Reformations in Church and State, the Army, and the Customs and Manners of his People.

Turks, Tartars, and Persians; Victories by Sea and Land; Acquifitions of Territory, and Increase of Power.

IV. His Regard to Genius and Merit, with the furprizing Instances of his Favour to General Le Fort, Prince Menzikoff, and the Empress Catharine : And his fevere Juflice on Offenders, particularly in the Proceedings against the rebellious Czarewitz.

Faithfully abridged from the best Historians, by J. BANCKS, Author of Miscellaneous Works in Verse and Prose, in Octavo, adorned with Sculptures, and illustrated with Notes.

Thou, mighty CZAR, in that contracted Name, Shalt out-reach Cafar in thy Pow'r and Fame .-Form and Degrees let earthy Spirits need; The Soul, eccentric, moves with inbred Speed, Makes Nature Shake, and raises in a Day What, with lefs Eafe, in Ages shall decay. Mr. HILL.

THE SECOND EDITION.

LONDON:

Printed for J. Honges, at the Looking-glass on London-Brid MDCCXL.

DK131 B3 174U

CONTENTS.

The FIRST BOOK.

From the Birth of the Czar Peter in 1672, to the Battle of Pultowa.

CHAP. I. To the End of the Princess Sophia's Regen- cy, in 1689 Page 1 CHAP. II. To the Death of the Czar John, in 1696, when Peter became sole Monarch 24 CHAP. III. To the Grand Jubilee in 1700, when Peter corrected the Russian Year CHAP. IV. To the Battle of Clissian in Poland, An. 1702 65
CHAP. V. To the entire Reduction of Lithuania and Courland by the Czar Peter, in 1705 80 CHAP. VI. To the decifive Victory at Pultowa in 1709 99

The SECOND BOOK.

From the Battle of Pultowa, to the Detection of the Crimes of the Czarewitz.

CHAP I. To the entire Reduction of Livo bis Czarish Majesty, in 1710	nia under bis Czarish Majesty, in 1710	131
CHAP. II. To the Action and Peace at the Rive	er Pruth
in 1711	150
CHAP. III. To the rash Action between the	King of
Sweden and the Turks at Bender, in 1712	165
CHAP. IV. To the Death of the Czarina Down the Suppression of the Cubanski Tartars, at the	ager, and of the Year 1716	177
CHAP. V. To the Czar's Return from Gern	any and
France, towards the End of the Year 1717	203
CHAP. VI. To the Trial and Execution of th	e Confri-
rators at Molcow, in the Beginning of the Year	719 222
Tanta in motion, in the Deginning of the Itur	LA CT
	.7.1

CONTENTS.

The THIRD BOOK.

From the Conviction of the Czarewitz, to the End of his Majesty's Life and Reign.

HAP. I. To the Death of the Czarewitz, and the End of the Inquisition at Petersburgh against his Adherents, in 1718

CHAP. II. To the Banishment of the Jesuits, and the setting up of Assemblies at Petersburgh, in 1719 267

CHAP. III. To the Czar's accepting the Title of Peter The Great, Emperor of all Russia, and Father of his Country, after the Peace with Sweden, in 1721 285

CHAP. IV. To his concluding a new Treaty with the Porte, after his Persian Expedition, An. 1723 305

CHAP. V. To his lamented Death in 1725 333

Just Published,

Neatly printed, on a new Letter, and superfine Paper, in four Volumes, 12mo. Price bound in Cast 12s. the second Edition carefully revised and corrected, with large Additions, imbellished with great Variety of Copper Plates, representing the principal Subjects treated of, with a Table of Contents, and a compleat and copious Index to each Volume, ATURE DELINEATED: Being Philosophical Conversations; wherein the wonderful Works of Providence, in the Animal, Vegetable, and Mineral Creation are laid open; the Solar and Planetary System, and whatever is curious in the Mathematicks, explained. The Whole being a compleat Course of Natural and Experimental Philosophy; calculated for the Instruction of Youth; in order to prepare them for an early Knowledge of Natural History, and create in their Minds an exalted Idea of the Wisdom of the Great Creator. Written by Way of Dialogue, to render the Conception more familiar and easy.

THE

HISTORY

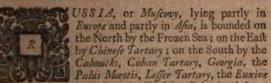

OF

PETER The Great, CZAR of Muscovy.

The FIRST BOOK.

CHAP. I.

A Description of Muscovy, Death of the Czar Peter's Father, and his elder Brother Theodore. A Rebellion raised by Princess Sophia, in Favour of her Brother John, who is proclaimed Czar together with Peter. Sophia's second Rebellion, and the End of her Regency.

and Cafrian Seas; and on the West by Poland and Saveden. In Length, from West to East, it is 1500 Leagues; and in Breadth, from the Euxine Sea to the known Parts of Nova Zembla, above 600; extending from 47 Degrees of North Latitude, beyond the Arctic Circle.

It is called Russia from the Rossi, or Russi, an antient People so named from the Word Rossia, which signifies Dispersion, because they lived without any Form of Government. Muscovy is supposed to be derived from Mesech, the Son of Japhet; but with little Foundation. The Muscovites place the Creation, which used to be their common Æra, above 1500 Years before all other Christians, without assigning any Reason for so doing. They began their Year with the First of September, which they kept with great Solemnity, till forced by Authority to do otherwise; because it was more likely, they thought, that God created the Earth with its Fruits in full Perfection, than covered over with Snow, as it is with them in our Spring Months. The longest Day in the South of Muscovy is sisteen Hours and a half; and in the North, they have continual Sun for two Months.

The Air in the Winter is fo exceffively cold towards the North, that many feel its Effects by the Lofs of their Hands, Feet, and Nofes: Which Misfortune is the more inevitable, if they come too haftily near a Fire; but Snow put upon the Part will prevent it. Water fprinkled upwards will freeze before it comes to the Ground : Birds will fall down and die, and Men, travelling in Sledges, come frozen to Death into the Towns. Snow and Ice are on the Earth generally o Months in the Year. The Ice in the Rivers is above ; Feet thick, and continues till fome Time after the Snow is gone. From August till May, during this cold Weather, every Body is wrapt in Furs. The Land is very barren, except towards Poland, where they have feveral Sorts of Grain in great Plenty; and from the extreme Heat immediately following the Cold, they have their Harvest in July. tho' the Land is not ploughed till May. The Soil needs no Dung, the Snow supplying the Place of Manure. They have fome very good Fruits. Authors mention an extraordinary Plant, found near Samara, Aftracan, and Casan, which grows in the Shape of a Lamb. They affirm, that the Grass withers near it, as if eaten by it; that when it is ripe the Stump grows dry, and the Fruit is covered with a hairy Skin, refembling Wooll, which being prepared, makes a good Fur Lining. The Wolves devour it, because it is like a Lamb, and it is used as a Bait to take them. The Muscovites name it Bonnaretz, that is Little Lamb.

M. Cornelius le Bruyn speaks of a kind of Gooseberry, with which the Woods about Moscow are full, called Costenitsa, of a very pleasant acid Taste, and which is eaten with Honey or Sugar, like Strawberries. There is a Sort of them, called Brusnitsa, larger than the other, great Quantities of which are carried to Moscow, where the Russians put them into Casks of Water all the Summer, and then draw from them a very refreshing and pleasant Liquor, especially when sweetened with Honey and Sugar. The same Author speaks of an extraordinary Sort of Turnips, of various Colours and surprizing Beauty; some purple, some grey and white, and some yellowish, streaked with Vermillion. These he found among the Samoieds.

Russia abounds with Forests, Lakes, Pools, and Defarts; affording Plenty of Wild-Fowl, Fish, and Furs There is a most prodigious Plenty of for Clothing. Wild Game, and in particular one Sort of Hares, which every Winter turn as white as the Snow on the Ground, and in the Spring become of the fame Colour with our Hares in England. Near Petzora, a Province in the North of Muscowy, they take a Fish, called Morfa, with the Teeth of which they make Handles of Knives and Scymetars. The Lakes in this Country are chiefly occafioned by the melted Snows: Those of Ladoga and Onega, near Finland, are two of the largest in Europe. The numerous Swarms of Gnats and Flies here produced, during the intense Heat, make the Summer Season almost as troublesome as the Winter. The chief Towns in this vaft Empire are, Moscow, Petersburgh, Wolodimer, Novogorod, Smolensko, Casan, Bulgar, Astracan, Wologda, Pleskow, Refan, Jereslaw, Pereslaw, Arch-Angel, and St. Nicholas.

Moscow communicates its Name to the whole Country, and is fituated on a River of the same Name, in 55 Degrees 30 Minutes of North Latitude, on a gravelly Soil, and in a wholsome Air, almost in the Center of the best Part of Russia. It is divided into four Parts; Cataigorod, where the Czar's Palaces stand; Gzargorod; Skerodum; and Strelitza Slaboda. In the last were formerly the Quarters of the Strelitzes, who were established Forces, like the Janizaries among the Turks. There were wont to be about 20,000 of them quartered in Moscow, for the Czar's Guard. These four Parts are separated and encompassed by three Walls, besides that of the Imperial Palaces; the first of red Bricks; the second of white; and the third of Earth, supported on each Side by Planks of Fir. This Wall, tho' 15 or 16 Miles in Circumference, is faid to have been raifed in four Days, on a Report of the Approach of the Cham of Crim Tartary. Moscoru was founded in the Year 1334, and once confilted of 40,000 Houses; but was taken, and almost burnt down by the Tertars, in 1572. The Polanders took it also in 1611. It was again burnt in 1668, and suffered greatly by Fire in 1699, 1701, 1707, and 1737. But it loft the most Inhabitants at the Building of Peterfburgh, by the great Numbers whom the Czar Peter obliged to refide there. From the vast Number of Churches, with Cupola's, Steeples, and Croffes, gilt and varioufly painted at the Top, and the Gentlemen's Houses, all with Gardens and Court-yards, Moscow has the Appearance, at a Distance, of one of the finest Cities in the World; but does by no Means answer the Traveller's Expectation when he comes within it, the Houses being built of Wood for the most Part very meanly. The Boyars, or Museovite Noblemen, and a few Persons of Condition, have some handsome Houses of Stone; but the Streets are laid with Fir Timber, and the Walls and Fences are likewife of Wood. These wooden Houses are moveable, and fold ready made; and indeed, from the many Fires that happen among them, often owing to their Drunkennels, and their Negligence in putting out the lighted Tapers about the Pictures of their Saints, not only here, but in every other Town in Russia, they have too frequent Occasions to go to Market. In the Year 1688, there were 3000 Houses burnt; but they were, in the Opinion of a French Author then on the Spot, little better than the Hogslies in France. Captain Perry says, " It is common in Moscow, when a Fire begins, especially in the Summer Season, to have it spread on all Sides, and burn on fo furious, that there is no standing before it. The Russes, in hopes to put a stop to it, pull down the wooden Houses and Fences, tho' they often have not Time to carry them off, but as they lie on the Ground, give a Train to the Fire; so that he has known it, in less than half a Day's Time, when there has been a Gale of Wind, burn above a Russes Mile in Length, and destroy many thousand Houses, without giving the Inhabitants Opportunity to carry off the tenth Part of their Goods. This has often brought many People to the last Degree of Poverty, and is one great Cause that the Houses appear so poor in Moscow, when they cannot raise Money to build them better."

B 2

There are at least 1500 Churches and Monasteries in and about Moscow, above 40 of which are within the Wall of the Imperial Palaces. There are two of these, one of Stone for Summer, and one of Wood for Winter; belides the Palace which was formerly the Relidence of the Patriarch; several Houses of the chief Lords of the Court; the Precauses, or Courts of Justice, and the publick Offices of the State. In the Midst of a great Court, furrounded with Buildings, is a lofty Tower called Irvan Welike, or Great John, in which is that monstrous Bell, reported to be the biggest in the World, weighing 336,000 lb. It is 19 Feet high, 23 in Diameter, 64 in Circumference, and two in Thickness. It lies where it fell in the Fire, in the Year 1701. It could not be raised by less than 100 Men, and that used to be only upon extraordinary Occasions, as when the Czars thought fit to shew themselves to their People, whose Ignorance made them imagine, that the Presence of their Sovereign caufed that Agitation they felt in their Bodies, which was the mere Effect of the Motion the Air was put into by this Bell. It used also to be struck upon formerly when the Czar went to Bed to the Great Dutchefs, to warn the People to pray for the Conception of a Prince; for they made but little Account of a Daughter.

The great Church of Saboor is 96 Feet in Length:
The Dome is supported by sour large Pillars; and here they shew a Picture pretended to be painted by St. Luke, and Christs Garment upon which the Soldiers cast Lots, concerning which they relate several idle Miracles. One

Church here was looked upon as so magnissent by John Basilowitz the Tyrant, that he ordered the Eyes of the Architect, who built it, to be put out, that he might never contrive such another. Moscow abounds no less in Brandy-shops than in Churches, there being at least 4000 Cabacs, or Houses where strong Liquors are fold.

The History of this extensive Country, which was a great Part of the antient Sarmatia, is so clouded with fabulous Relations, thro' the profound Ignorance of its People, in Times past, (who were forbad, on Pain of Death, to go out of their own Country, or even converse with Foreigners, without Leave of the Prince or Patriarch,) that it is almost impossible to arrive at any Certainty with regard to the antient State of it. We only know that they were formerly under the Government of several distinct Princes, and many petty Dukes, till reduced to the Obedience of one Monarch.

I shall go no farther back for an Account of the prefent Imperial Family of Muscovy, named Romanoff, than to the Grandfather of the Czar Peter I. His Name was Michael Feodorowitz Romanoff, the Son of Feodore Nikititz Romanoff, Patriarch of Muscovy, who married a near Relation of John Basilowitz the Tyrant, and had by her this Son. He was proclaimed Czar in the Year 1613, reigned 32 Years, and dying Anno 1645, was succeeded by his Son Alexis Michaelowitz, Father to the Prince whose Life we now give the Publick.

Peter the Great was born the 11th of June 1672, of Natalia Carilowna Naraskin, a second Wise. His Father, a little before his Death, when Peter was scarce five Years of Age, declared General Menesius, a Scotch Man, his Governor; a Person well qualified for that Employment, being thoroughly acquainted with the Affairs of Europe, and speaking perfectly well all the European Languages. But the Commotions raised, a sew Years after, by the Princess Sophia, obliged him to retire, and Peter thereby lost the Benesit of so able a Preceptor. Yet we shall see, that from the Strength of his natural Genius, unassisted by any of those Accomplishments which other Princes acquire by Education, he was able to surpass them all; to conquer foreign Countries; to new form his own; and, unpolified as he was at first himself, to polifi others, who were but one Degree removed from Savages.

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

The Inclination of this young Prince to Military Exercises began to shew itself very early: He was pleased, in his Insancy, with beating the Drum: He would not amuse himself, as a Child, with a vain Noise, but to learn one of the Functions of a Soldier, which he did effectually, in so much as sometimes to give Lessons to others.

Alexis Michaelowitz left 8 Children at his Death, An-1676. Two Sons, Theodore and John, and 4 Daughters, Sophia, Catherine, Mary, and Sediaffa, were by his first Wife; and one Son and one Daughter, Peter and Natalia Alexoguna, by a fecond Venter. Theodore, his eldelt Son, fucceeded him; but he being of a weak Constitution, every one believed his Reign would be of fort Continuance. The Princess Sopbia, a Lady of great Spirit and Penetration, forefeeing this, contrived Means to get out of the Convent in which the was placed; notwithstanding the settled Custom, at that Time, oblig'd the Female Islue of the Czarian House to pass their Lives unmarried, in fuch Confinement. She pretended a more than ordinary Affection for her Brother, and complained vehemently of her Unhappiness, in being refrained from vifiting a Perfon whom the loved fo tenderly: When he was in the Fits of his Distemper, she fent every Moment to enquire how he did; and let no Occasion flip of testifying the great Grief she felt, in being oblig'd to be absent from him. By these Methods, having prepared the Way for what the defigned, the left her Convent, under Pretence of administring to her Brother in his Sickness, which she did with great Assiduity, fuffering no one to come near him, or give him any Medicines but herfelf.

Thus the infinuated herfelf into the good Opinion of the Grandees; and won the Hearts of the People by her affable Behaviour. Being refolved never more to return to Confinement, the concluded the best Way would be to make herfelf absolute Mistress; which Design not being to be carried on without a considerable Number of Adherents, the pitched upon Prince Basil Basilerwick he proposed a Marriage between his Son and the Princess Catharine, younger Sister to Sophia. But this was looked upon as the Height of Insolence and Presumption. Sophia knew that such an Alliance would not only endanger the Sasety of the young Czars, but that her own Authority had more to sear from the Ambition of Couvanski, than from any of those great Men she had already caused to be murdered: She therefore thought it high Time that he too should be dispatched, and punished for those Crimes to which she herself had consented. To get him within her Power, she came to a Resolution of celebrating in the Troitsky Monastery, the Feast of St. Catharine, whose Name the Princess bore, by whom Couvanski statter'd himself with vain Hopes of fixing the Crown of Russia in his own Family.

B 4

Notice was given every where of the intended Feaft, and all the Boyars invited to Court, particularly Couvanski, who yet continued his Cruelties at Moscow, which the Princess artfully seem'd to approve of. In the mean Time, 200 Horsemen were ordered to way-lay him in the Road to the Troitsky Monastery, who seized on him, and carried him into a House that was at Hand, where his Sentence was read without any Examination or Delay, and both his own and his Son's Heads taken off at the fame Instant.

The Strelitzes, at first, were struck speechless with Astonishment; but recovering out of their Surprize, they grew furious, running up and down, and exclaiming against the Government, who had deprived them of their Chief and Father: They protested unanimously, that they would take Vengeance on his Murderers, and all. their Adherents, of what Degree or Quality soever. They possessed themselves of the Arsenals and Ammunition, and feemed to threaten a general Destruction. The Court perceiving the Danger, raifed the other Forces, who bore an implacable Hatred to the Strelitzes, and commanded all the German Officers to repair to the Troitsky Monastery. Every one readily obey'd his Orders, leaving their Wives and Children; notwithstanding they had Reason to fear their Families would be ill used by the Strelitzes, for their giving this Proof of their Loyalty. The Germans dwelt in the Suburbs of Moscow. whiwhither the Strelitzes immediately ran, in their Fury. to butcher all they met with; but were restrained by fome of the oldest among them, who represented, that if they should put the German Wives to the Sword, their Husbands would think of nothing but Revenge. The German Officers, tho' for the most Part raised from private Centinels, were by much the better Soldiers; for the Strelitzes were but an undisciplined Mob, and little able to fland against any regular Force; and their Hearts now finking, they began to make Offers of Peace, which they found the Court ready to grant. In order to obtain it, they first killed their Colonels and other Officers, and then fent Messengers to Court to implore Pardon. The Czars came immediately to Moscow, accompanied by the Nobility and German Officers: And the Strelitzes meeting them, proftrated themselves upon the Ground. and begg'd for Mercy. The Czars making a Sign that they forgave them, the penitent Soldiers conducted them to their Palace, pouring forth Tears of Joy, to fee their Sovereigns in fo mild a Disposition.

The fame Day Prince Basil Gallicain was created Grand Chancellor, and Wrenimienk, or Temporary Minister of State; in which Post never any Man before him governed with so great Authority. He was one of the ablest, and most polite Men in Muscowy; understood the Latin Tongue well, conversed much with Foreigners, and was the only Man of Quality who would entertain, without forcing his Company to drink to Excess. Brandy, which showed at every other Table, was seidom seen at his, who never drank any himself.

He had little Value for infignificant Men of great Birth, and preferred none but those he thought worthy of the Posts they were to fill; thus bestowing most of the principal Offices of State without consulting the Interests of particular Families. The Hatred this drew on him, did not hinder him from exerting his Authority, and ordering every Thing for the Advantage of his Country, which began to make a Figure among other Nations. He advised a general Peace with Sweden, whose Ambassadors being at Moseow, had all their Demands granted.

The Imperialists and Poles being engag'd in a War with the Turks, and the first having endeavoured, without Effect, to get the Muscowites to make a League with them, the Poles took Occasion to propose a general Peace, and, to bring over the Muscovites to their Side, fent an Embasiy to Moscow, where, after divers Conferences, they came to an Accommodation. The Poles gave up their Pretentions to the Ukrain, the Dutchy of Smolen fko, and other Territories conquered by the Muscovites; and the Czars obliged themselves to make War upon the Precops, and oppose their Incursions into Poland.

The Muscovites, upon this, fent Ambassadors to all the Courts of Christendom, to animate them against the Turks. They themselves prepared to take the Field, and enter the Crim. Prince Galliczin named feveral Lords, as fit for the Command in this Expedition; but was told on all Hands, that no one could be fo capable as himself. This Honour he would very willingly have declined, judiciously supposing he should find great Difficulties in the Enterprize, the ill Success of which would be laid at his Door : Knowing besides, that the Army he was to command, tho' formidable in Number, was only a Multitude of undisciplined Peasants, with whom he could never undertake any daring Action to come off with Honour. He forefaw too, that his Absence might be more prejudicial, than the Conquest of the Crim could be of Advantage or Glory to him; and that those who insisted most on his taking this Charge, did it only out of Jealoufy, and on purpole to ruin him.

The Crim is a very fruitful Peninfula, encompassed partly by the Waters of the Euxine Sea, and partly by those of the Palus Maotis. The Tartars of this Country have for many Ages been in strict Alliance with the Grand Signior, and tho' the Cham has the Title of Emperor, yet he is little better than a Slave to the Ottoman Porte. But as much as they are Vaffals themselves, they had formerly obliged the Muscovites to pay an annual Tribute to them, and inferted in the Articles of Peace these disgraceful Terms: "That the Czar should hold " the Stirrup of their Cham, and feed his Horse with " Oats out of his Cap, if they should chance at any " Time to meet." The The Muscovites determining to fend a numerous Army into this Country, and having provided Generals for all the Forces; in order to raife Provisions and Ammunition for them, every House was taxed at a Rouble* each, which amounted to an immense Sum. Prince Galliczin having obtained the Favour of making his Son Collegue with him in the Chancellorship, set out to join the Army.

The general Rendezvous was in the Ukrain, in the Country of those Coffacks who are independent of the Hettman, and commanded by Polkowniks or Colonels, The Hettman drew together his Troops at Cartlich, and on the first of May 1687, they took the Field with an Army of 300,000 Foot, and 100,000 Horse. Not being able however to pass farther than Kerchekesa, on Account of a prodigious Drought, which had burned up the Grass for 50 Leagues round, they returned to the River Marle, where they waited for Orders from Mofto difband their Army. Prince Galliczin, to excuse himfelf, threw the Blame of this Miscarriage upon the Hettman, Juan Samuelerrick, and accordingly wrote to Court for Orders to depose him: Which being come, Galliezin cauled the Hettman to be feized at Midnight, by those very Strelitzes which he had defired for his Guard. He was carried bound in Cords to a Place called Chatra, or the Tent of Justice, which in all the Russian Armies is pitch'd in the General's Quarters. The Prince fummoned all the Officers and Noblemen to attend him; who took their feats, and the unfortunate Hettman was brought before them. The Emperor's Orders being read they confronted him with the principal Coffacks, who accused him of holding Intelligence with the Cham. In a Word, he, who had been the Day before among the Rank of Princes, inflead of most Puissant, was now faluted by the Name of Scourweein, or Son of a Whore: His own Servants loft all Respect to him, and one of his Colonels, named Dimitrouki, drew out his Sabre to kill him; but Gallicain prevented the Blow, and reproved the Officer. The Council being broke up, and the

^{*}A Rouble is 190 Ross Copecks, worth about a Halfpenny Eglish each,

Hettman put under a Guard, a Courier was dispatched to Levanti Romanorrick, General of the Forces of Serene, with Orders to secure the Hettman's Son; but some faithful Cossacks got to him Time enough, to give him Notice to save himself. The Compachicks, however, or Cossack Cavalry, agreed to deliver him up; and tho' the Sardouchicks, or Infantry, would not at first permit him to be taken, they suffered themselves to be prevailed upon at length; and Romanorrick being pleased with this Opportunity of repairing his Credit, which he had very much hurt in a late Skirmish with Suhan Naradin, returned with his Prisoner to the Army.

While they were thus making fure of the Son, the Boyar Generals consulted how to punish the Father, and fet up another Hettman. Samuelerrick was fent into Siberia; and the Cossacks chose one Maxeppy, Pistacy or Secretary of State, and proclaimed him Hettman. "*He was a Polish Gentleman, born in the Palatine of Podolia, and had been brought up as one of the Pages of King John Casimir, in whose Court he had got some Taste of the Belles Lettres; but having, in his Youth, an Intrigue with the Wife of a Polish Gentleman, and being difcovered, the Hufband caufed him to be feyerely fcourged, and afterwards tied naked on an ungovernable Horfe, which was turned loofe to go wherefoever it would. The Horse being brought out of the Ukrain, returned thither, and carried Mazeppa with him, half dead with Fatigue and Hunger. Some Countrymen gave him Succour, with whom he continued a long Time, and fignalized himfelf on many Occasions against the Tartars. The Superiority of his Understanding made him much regarded among the Coffacks; and his Reputation encreasing daily, obliged the Czar to make him Prince of Ukrania."

A great Party of Coffacks, who were not invited to the Election, expressed their Dislike of it: Some Towns revolted, and some of the Colonels Houses were pillaged in their Absence. The new Hettman, to quell these Disorders, desired some Troops of Prince Gallickzin, who ordered 3000 Foot and 1000 Horse to attend him to Baturin, the usual Residence of the Hettmans.

The Order to disband the Army foon arriving, a Letter brought with it was read in the Presence of all the Officers, who, after having done nothing, were pleafed to hear themselves thanked for their good Services. Every General had a Gold Medal given him, with the two Czar's Effigies on one Side, and the Princes's on the other, fastened to a Chain of Gold, the whole worth about ten Ducats. Every Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, Major, and even every Soldier and Strelitz, had Gifts in Proportion. Prince Galliczin, by Means of these Prefents, which he obtained from the Princess, appealed the Murmurs that were raifed against him. He likewise gained the chief Nobility, by bestowing Employments upon them; infomuch that at his Arrival at Moscow, he found very few against him; and was received by the Prince's with all the Marks of Favour he could with.

and took into as much Authority as ever.

The Friends and Relations of the Czar Peter, being apprehensive of the Designs of the Princess and her Favourite, were concerting Measures how to counterplot them: They engaged on their Side Prince Borice Galliczin, who carried Peter to the Troit/ky Monastery, in the Time of Couvanski's Rebellion. He was Coufin to the other, but despised by him for his Debauchery. When they had made this Man the young Czar's Favourite, the next Bufiness was, under Pretence of doing honour to the Great Gallickzin, to allure him with the Command of a fecond Expedition: But he perceiving that Peter's Party gathered Strength, and thinking it might still increase by his Absence, endeavoured to transfer this Command on fome other: Which finding impracticable, he frankly offered himfelf, judging that this would be more to his Honour than to ftay till it should be forced upon him. Having obtained whatever he pleafed to demand against the Opening of the Campaign, it was refolved the Army fhould take the Field fooner than they had done before. and all the Forces were ordered to be at their Place of Rendezvous on the first of February 1689.

The Preparations for this Campaign were much greater than for the last; but the Taxes were no higher. The Troops were, for the most Part, commanded by the same Generals. They did not lie long in their first Quarters, but were all ordered to march, before the Frost was broke, beyond the River Marle, to avoid the Inundations which the Thaw would occasion. Prince Galliezin being arrived, pitched his Tent on the farthest Side of the River: The Generals did the same; and on the 6th of April they marched towards the Samare, where all the Forces joined.

The Hettman Mazeppa being come to the same Place. they all paffed the Samare without Delay, and, in a Month's Time, advanced as far as Precop. Every Soldier carrying with him four Months Provisions, their Baggage hindered them from making long Marches, which were likewife much retarded by their heavy Artillery. At Kairka, upon the Broifthenes, a Party having taken some Tartars, they learned that the Cham was at Bondgiac, and had no suspicion of so formidable an Army coming upon him. On May the 13th they had Word brought that the Enemy was at Hand, upon which they put themselves in order to receive them. The Tartars charged the Vanguard of Schein. From thence, after some Skirmishes, they wheeled on a sudden from Right to Left, and fell upon the Forces of Belgorod, who being over-powered, were quickly put to the Rout : The Horse fled, and the Enemy ran to the Baggage, which they had like to have carried off; but Prince Galliczin fending fresh Succours, the Tartars were forced to retire, and leave the Russians a free Passage to Thorna d'Oliva, five Leagues distant from Precop. On the 16th the Army decamped, and moved to Zelona Dolina, a League from Thorna: Hither came the Cham with all his Forces, which amounted to 30 or 40,000 Horfe, marching in feveral little Divisions, who having infensibly furrounded the Russians, they were obliged to halt.

The two Armies gazed upon one another without attempting any Thing; tho' certainly the Mulcowites ought to have begun the Fight. But they were glad to keep out of Harm, fenced in with strong Pallisadoes. The Foot and Artillery defended this Camp so strenously, that the Tartars could not break into it: But the Horse not being entrenched, three or sour Detachments of Tartars, of 1000 Horse each, ventured to charge them. They were no sooner attacked, but they fell into Disorder : However, the Cannon and fmall Shot from the Artillery galled the Tartars, and laid 3 or 400 of them upon the Ground, and with them feveral Muscovites. On the other Side, Sultan Naradin, with his Troops, charged the Coffacks of Sont and Akrerko, who were commanded by Emilian, the Russian Secretary of State. This Gentleman knew very little of the Art of War. and was fo frightened, that he could not fland before the Tartars, who breaking in among the Baggage, and killing the Horses, pierced in as far as the Center of the Waggons, and carried off twenty Pieces of Cannon. In fhort, if the Boyar Kouka had not advanced with his Troops, the Coffacks had been entirely cut off. Cheremittau, General of the Forces of Belgorod, was attacked at the same Time by another Body of Tartars, who broke in as far as his Baggage; but he defended himfelf much better than Emilian, and forced the Tartars to retire. In these Skirmishes the Tartars being repulsed, tho' the Advantage and some Plunder fell to them, the Muscovites moved forwards to get to some fresh Water: The Cavalry mixed with the Waggons and Carriages, and all the Army joined into one Body, and made a square Figure. The Baggage was furrounded with the Cannon and Infantry, who carried their Pallifadoes upon their Shoulders. The Tartars appeared again; but finding the Horse had fecured themselves, they forbore Action, and foon withdrew to defend Precop.

The next Day finding no Tartars to oppose them, several of the Muscovites ascended the Hill to discover Pre-having fet Fire to the Suburbs.

The Muscovites marched strait on to Precep, and sat down within Cannon-shot of the Town. They thought of attacking it in the Night; but were strangely surprized to receive Orders, in the Evening, to return: Which was occasioned by a sudden Treaty set on Foot by the following Accident.

The Army being encamped pretty near the Town, the Nogays and Calmuck Tartars skirmishing often with the Precopians, a Nogay, who serv'd the Cham, saw by Chance a Musicovite of his Acquaintance, and calling out to him, There would be no Occasion, said he, to fight, if your Boyar would make Peace with our Cham? The Muscovite replied, That if Galliczin believed the Cham was that Way inclined, he might perhaps come into Measures with him. Well, faid the Precopian Nogay, do you break the Matter to your General, and you may venture to affure him, that the Cham is willing to come to Terms. The Muscovite went immediately to Prince Galliczin's Tent, and acquainted him with all that had happened. The Prince liking the Motion, caused a Letter to be wrote, in the Name of this Muscovite, to the Precopian Nogay, to this Purpose: I have related to the General, Prince Galliczin, what paffed between us : He is content to come to an Accommodation: It lies upon you to get some Person to be sent to him with the Cham's Propofals. This Letter was carried to the Cham, who, being affured that it was wrote by the Prince's Order, fent a principal Person, Suilech Murza, and the Muscovites a Boyar, named Esmeyan, in Exchange for Hostages. In this Treaty, the Muscovites proposed the following Conditions: That all the Russian Slaves should be restored. That the Tartars should make no more Inroads into the Czar's Dominions. That they should quit their Claim to 80,000 Roubles, annually due to them from Muscowy. That they should not molest the Poles, nor assist the Turks. The Murza gave fome Hopes of an Agreement, and foun out the Conference to keep them in suspence; but the next Day he answered, that the Cham would accept of no other Terms than those he was already engaged in with the Czars; that he infifted upon the Payment of the yearly Tribute, and expected 240,000 Roubles, that were in Arrear for the three last Years.

Prince Galliczin had lost the Opportunity of forcing them to his own Terms, and his Army, no longer able to lie on the sandy Plain without Forage or Water, was forced to retreat. He took the Murza as far as Ralanfehek, and from thence sent him back, and received his own Hostage. Thus ended Prince Gallickzin's second Campaign in the Crim. Some of his Enemies gave out, that he was corrupted by a large Present of Ducats, which the Tartars sent to him in Barrels, but defrauded him of Part of their Contract, by putting Counters a mong them.

In about a Month they got to the River Marle; and Prince Galliczin, during the March, dispatched Couriers to the Czars, and to the King of Poland, boasting that he had beaten the Tartars. The Princes Sophia, upon this, ordered publick Rejoicings throughout the Kingdom, and sent a Letter of Thanks to the Army, with Rewards. These unfortnate Expeditions, far from gaining any Honour or Profit, produced the Ruin of the Muscowite

General, which happened foon after.

The Czar Peter, then in the 18th Year of his Age. was married during the Prince's Absence, to a young Lady named Ottokesa Feoderowna, Daughter of the Boyar Feoder Abrahamowitz. This bold Stroke, entirely against the Inclinations of the Princess Sophia, greatly increased the Party of Peter; and Galliczin, at his Return, found all his Measures broken, by the Pregnancy of the young Czarina. His Enemies had likewise learned the Truth of all that had passed, and rendered him so odious to Peter, that he could hardly be admitted to kifs his Hand. This Affair had just Time to subside, when the Princess began to raife fresh Uneasinesses, by proposing to distribute confiderable Presents among the Boyars, in Recompenfe of their good Services: But the Czars, Peter especially, would enquire first into the Merits of these pretended Services. The Princess could bear no Restraint, but found Means to get the Czars to comply with her Defires. Upon which she gave such valuable Presents, especially to Galliczin, as were very unusual in Muscowy; the Custom of the Czars, on these Occasions, having been only to bestow a royal Vest.

Prince Galliczin now began again to govern with the fame Power as before. Since the Hettmans had been under the Muscovite Dominion, they had never entered Moscow. But the Prince, upon the Pretence of doing him Honour, fo ordered it, that Mazeppa was brought into the capital City, with 500 of his principal Officers. The Defign of introducing this Number of Men was to affist a Plot, that the Princess and Galliczin were then contriving against the Life of Peter. The Princess foresaw that this Brother, if not timely prevented, would be one Day the Ruin of her Authority; and she had likewise terrible Apprehensions, that not only her Power would be abridged.

ed, but that she should be forced to return to her Convent: She therefore persuaded Galliczin, and all his Family and Friends, to consent to the cruel Scheme she had formed for securing herself and him, by the Death of her Brother.

She pitched upon Theodore Thekelavitan, President of the Strelitzes, to be her principal Instrument in the Enterprize. Peter was at one of his Country-Houses, called Obrogensko, a short League from Moscow. Theodore drew together 600 Strelitzes, and putting himfelf at their Head, commanded them to follow him thither: But two of the Company, shocked at his Defign, stole off privately, to advertize the Czar of the Danger he was in. He, jumping out of Bed in great Consternation, sent for his maternal Uncles, the Naraskins, and confulted with them what was to be done. The Refult was, that one of these Uncles, and Prince Borice Galliczin, should be fent immediately to the City, to enquire into the Certainty of this Intelligence. In their Way meeting Thekelavitau, at the Head of his Strelitzes, they haftened back to fave the Czar, who had just Time enough to get into his Coach, with his Mother, his Wife, and her Sister, and escape to the Troitsky Monastery.

The Conspirators, on their Arrival, searched every where for the Czar; but the Strelitzes, then on Duty at Obrogensko, knowing nothing of the Delign, told the Prefident that his Majesty was gone out a little before, with all the Speed imaginable. This Difappointment was no fmall Concern to the Princess: Every Body was aftonished, till in the Evening it was known that Peter had fent to the Princels, to reproach her with her Treachery. She abfolutely denied the Matter, and protested that they were much deceived in taking those for Confpirators who came only to relieve the Guard. But this Excuse of relieving the Guard, which was always done in the Day-time, was looked upon as a very weak one. The Czar Peter being fafe in the Troitsky Monastery, wrote to all the Boyars to repair thither. and to all the Gentry, in every Town, to raise the Militia. He published Thekelavitau's Attempt, and, in a Week's Time, had a numerous Body of Noblemen and Gentlemen about him, Galliegin excused himself on

Pretence

Pretence of being with-held by the Czar John: Notwithflanding it was faid they had also a Defign upon him, if their Plot had not miscarried on Peter.

The Princess, to get the Strelitzes on her Side, ordered fome of them to be planted at the Foot of the Stairs: The Czar John and she, coming from Mass, stood at the Top, from whence the Czar spoke to them to this Effect: My Brother is retired to the Troitsky Monoflery, for what Reason I know not: Doubtless he intends to dissurb the Peace of the State, and, as I am told, has commanded you to attend him; but we forbid you, upon Pain of Death, to obey his Orders. The Princess repeated the same Thing; but the Serelitzes, little heeding what either of them said, marched directly to the Monastery, where they assured the fame they assured Peter of their Fidelity. The Princess seeing this, resolved, if possible, to make her own Peace with him: In order to which she fent two of his Aunts, who, by her Example, had now left their Convents.

These Ladies being come into the Presence of the Czar, beseeched him not to give Credit to those Rumours, which had so much alarmed him. They affur'd him, that there was some Misunderstanding in the Affair, and that he might return to Moscow with great Sasety. The Czar answered them, that there was an apparent Conspiracy to murder himself, his Wise, his Mother, and Uncle; and laid so many Circumstances before them, that they could not deny the Truth of it. The Princeses, with Tears in their Eyes, appeared shocked at the horrid Design, and said they would never return

10 Moscow, but live and die with him.

Sophia, hearing of the bad Success of this Negotiation, applied herself to the Patriarch, and so wrought upon the good Man, that he offered himself for a Mediator: He went to the Czar Peter, and used the strongest Arguments to persuade him to a Reconciliation; but was trangely surprized when he understood that he himself was to have been taken off, and that the Abbot Sylvesser, who was in the Plot, was to have been made Patriarch in his Steed. Upon this new Discovery, he judged it might not be amiss for him to remain in the Troitrie Monathery, and publish a Proclamation to apprehend the Traitors.

The Princefs calling her Creatures together, it was refolved that Thekelavitau should be secured in the Palace, and that the Abbot Sylvefter should be faved; and then she herself, with Prince Galliczin, and the rest of her Friends, went towards the Troitsky Monastery, with hopes of appealing her Brother. She was not got above half Way, before a Boyar met her, by the Czar Peter's Order, who told her she would not be received. knew it would be dangerous to disobey, and so returned to Moscow. The next Day, the Strelitzes and Germans appeared at the Monastery, and the Boyars resolved to feize the Traitors wherever they could be found. A Colonel with 300 Men immediately marched to the Palace at Moscow, and there loudly demanded that Theke. lavitau should be delivered to him. The Princess made fome Reffistance at first; but seeing the Colonel resolute, the delivered up the Traitor and his Adherents; who, loaded with Chains, were carried to the Troitsky. Prince Galliczin at the same Time going to the Monastery with his Son, and several of his Friends, they found the Gates thut against them; and Orders were given to convey them back, and not fuffer any of them to stir out of their Houses.

As foon as Thekelavitau, or Fiska, as he was now called in Contempt, was brought to the Monastery, he was convey'd into the great Hall, and there kept four Hours under Examination: From thence he was carried to a Tower in the Monastery, and had the Knout given him. This Punishment is executed by the common Hangman, who is likewise called the Knoutavoit Master. The Criminal is fasten'd to a strong Man's Back, and there receives 2 or 300 Lashes on his bare Back, with a tough Thong, made of a wild Ass's Hide, and sastened to a Stick about two Feet and a half long, like a Flail. The Executioner seldom hits twice in the same Place, but running a Step or two back, and then springing sorward, at every Stroke draws Blood, or raises a Wheal as thick as one's Finger.*

The-

^{*}This is the moderate Know. When the Sentence orders the Knows between the moderate and the fevere, one may fee simall Pieces of Flesh taken off at every Stroke of the Executions.

Thekelavitau, after he had undergone a few of these Strokes, confessed that he was to have killed the Czar, his Mother, and her three Brothers. He wrote to the Czar Peter, and acquainted him at large with all the Particulars of the Conspiracy; pleaded that he was overpersuaded to this cruel Enterprize, and named the Perfons who put him upon it. The Czar, tho' satisfy'd of the Treason of his Sister, would not publickly expose a Princess of the Blood; but it was with great Dissiculty that young Galliczin could save the Prince, his Cousin, from being executed.

Several others were afterwards examined, to whom they gave the Question, or extraordinary Torture, a Punishment more severe than the other. The Offenders had their Heads shaved, and being then tied fast, boiling Water was pour'd Drop by Drop on their Skulls, which put them to fuch exquisite Pain, that they immediately acknowledged their Crime, and discover'd their Accomplices. Two Days were fpent in confulting how to punish the Criminals. Prince Galliczin, with his Son and Friends, being condemned to Banishment, he was brought to the Palace, and had his Sentence read to him aloud: "That he was order'd to go to Karga, a Town under " the Pole, and to remain there as long as he lived : "That his Majesty, of his great Goodness, allowed " him three Pence a Day for his Subfistance; but that " his Goods shall be forfeited to the Treasury."

The Prince being conducted to the Place of his Exile, a Secretary was dispatched to Moscow to seize upon his Palace, and made an Inventory of all the Riches he found in it. Among other Things, a Trunk was discovered, wherein were no less than 100,000 Ducats, which were thought to be the Spoils of the deposed Hettman, Juan Samuelerrick. Besides these there were 400 Vessels of Silver, weighing 40 Pounds each, and other Moveables of great Value. The Ladies of the Prince, and his Son, were banished with him, and allowed to take with them but 30 Roubles among them all. Thecutioner. When it is ordered to be given with the utmost Severity, it is often mortal; for then the Executioner striking the Flanks under the Ribs, cuts the Flesh to the very Bowels. kelavitau had his Head cut off the next Day. Two Strelitzes, who were to have been Affaffins, fuffered the fame Punishment. The Colonel that commanded the Detachment, was whipp'd, had his Tongue cut out, and was fent to end his Days in Siberia, with an Allowance of a Penny a Day. Five other Strelitzes had their Tongues cut out, and were fent into Siberia.

The Czar Peter, when these Executions were over, desired the Princes to retire into a Monastery which she had built at Dewitz; but she shewing some Reluctance to this, he commanded the President of the Strelitzes to conduct her thither, and suffer no Person to come to her. Two Days after Peter returned to Moscow, and made his Entry on Horseback, attended by 18,000 Strelitzes armed for his Guard. His Wise and Mother sollowed in a Coach. John stood to receive his Brother, at the Steps entering into the Palace: They embraced; Peter asked John to be Friends, who answering that he was so, they each retired to their respective Aparments.

Thus ended the Regency of the Princes's Sophia, who had governed the Ruffian Empire for some Years; but thro' a boundless Ambition lost not only that Authority she had, but her Liberty also, being from that Time kept in close Consinement till the Day of her Death, which did not happen till 1704, fifteen Years after.

CHAP. II.

The Rife and Charatter of General Le Fort, and Prince Menzikoff. A Description of Siberia. The Siege of Asoph. Death of the Czar John. Peter becomes sole Monarch.

PETER now feemed to be fettled alone in the Government. His elder Brother John indeed continued Czar; but his Name was little mentioned, except in the Beginning of public Acts. Naraskin, Peter's maternal Uncle, aimed at a Share in the Administration, and found no Obstacle to his ambitious Views, but the Favourite, young Galliczin. The Czar, at that Time, gave no Presages of being that great Prince he afterwards appeared. He took Delight in very idle and cruel Diversions.

verfions, and was wrought upon by Naraskin, to believe that his Favourite must needs have been concerned in some of the Enterprizes of his Cousin. Peter seemed very unwilling to fuspect a Person, who had no less than three Times faved his Life: But Naralkin, with Tears in his Eyes, declared, that if he did not remove this Favourite, he might as well recal the Great Galliczin from Exile: He yielded at latt, and promifed to confine the Prince to his own Estate; but Gallicain, being advertised of the Matter, withdrew thither, before any fuch Orders were fent him. The Czar difpatched Courier after Courier, to know the Caufe of his Retirement: To whom he only answered, that fince his past Conduct could not justify his Fidelity, he defired no more than to be allowed to live there, without ever coming to Court. The Czar was fo touched with this, that he fent two Boyars to visit him, and a few Days after defired him to return, which he did accordingly. This Turn fo much alarmed the Naraskins, that they endeavoured by all Means to be reconciled to him, For fome Time he made as great a Figure as ever, conferring Favours on all his Friends. He caused many Grandees to be difgrac'd, and gave their Places to his own Creatures; but then they were not fuch as his Coufin preferred, Men of Worth and Abilities, but Drunkards and Debauchees like himfelf. ralkins at length fo far prevailed, as to bring the Czar into an Opinion, that if he was trufted with the Place of the late Galliczin, he might attempt to release the Princess Sophia. It was therefore bestowed on old Naraskin, the Czar's Grandfather. This Place had been kept in Commission ever fince the Banishment of Basil Galliczin, and being thus disposed of, determined all Sorts of People to follow the Party of the Navalkins, Old Naraskin's eldest Son was made Great Chamberlain. and young Gallicain turned out in his Favour; which fo much incensed the latter, that he could not forbear expreffing his Refentment, and charging the Czar with Weakness. His Enemies having to good a Handle to accuse him, did his Business so effectually, that he was thortly after banished in a most ignominious Manner. The Naroskins now took upon them to govern with so. much much Arrogance, that most People began to deplore the Loss of the Great Galliczin, who had formed many Schemes for the Welfare of the Russian Empire, such as building and endowing a College, procuring Books, encouraging Learning and Commerce. All this was neglected by the Naraskins, who again forbad Foreigners to come into Muscowy, and were for reducing all Things apace to their antient State. But a new Favourite Peter made choice of, one Le Fort, began to make Arts and Sciences revive in Muscowy: To him was owing the first Fonndation of the true Russian Grandeur, and from him the Czar imbibed such Notions of Virtue and Propriety, as made him afterwards one of the most illustrious Princes that ever reigned.

This * Le Fort was a Gentleman of Genewa, who, from his Childhood, had a strong Inclination to military Affairs; but, at the Desire of his Father, was bred up in the Compting-House of an eminent Merchant in Amsterdam. With this Gentleman he behaved so well, that he obtained leave to go to Copenhagen in a Merchant Ship his Master was sending thither. He was entrusted with the whole Cargo, and discharged his Commission with Faithfulness and Advantage, beyond what could be expected from one fo young.

At the Sight of the Danish Troops, his Love of Arms began to revive. He got acquainted with several Officers in the Army, and was much loved and respected by them. At this Time an Ambassador from Denmark being sent to Moscow, Le Fort got a Recommendation to go in his Retinue. He soon made himself Master of the Russian Language, and served the Ambassador as an Interpreter; who, for his excellent Qualities, had a most extraordinary Value for him.

The Ambassador being highly esteemed at Moscow, the Czar Peter frequently did him the Honour to eat at his Table, and there first took Notice of Le Fort. Finding he spoke the Language of the Country, and answered several Qustions pertinently; he at last asked him, If he was willing to enter into his Service? M. Le Fort, in the most respectful Manner, reply'd, That whatever Ambition he might have to ferve fo great a Monarch, yet the Duty and Gratitude he owed to his Master, would not allow him to promife without his Confent. Well, faid the Czar, I will ask the Consent of your Master. The Czar, by one of his own Interpreters, M. Le Fort defiring to be excused, took notice that Le Fort spoke good Russian. The Ambassador answered, That he had a Genius to learn any Thing: That four Months ago he fpoke the German but ill; and he now speaks it, fays he, as well as the Germans in my Train: That he did not know one Word of the Sclavonian, when he first came into Courland, tho' his Majesty now owned, he stoke good Russian. Young Le Fort, when he heard the Co pmendations the Ambassador gave him, withdrew to a diffant Part of the Room; which modest Behaviour had a good Effect on the Czar. No more was faid on this Subject that Day; but the next Time the Ambassador came to Court, the Czar told him, he had a Defire to have Le Fort about him; and asked, if he would part with him: The Ambassador reply'd, That he wished Le Fort too well, and had too great a Regard to the Commands of his Majesty, not to consent to it.

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 27

Le Fort, the next Day, was made first Interpreter to the Czar, who took him into high Favour, and was pleafed in talking to him about the Courts he had feen. Discoursing one Day of the King of Denmark's Guards. he asked him What he thought of his, the Strelitzes? and commanded him to speak his Mind freely. Le Fort answered, That he thought they were fine well made Men, who wanted only to be well disciplined and properly cloathed; that the long Coats they wore were not becoming to Soldiers, and must needs be inconvenient. The Czar expressing a Desire to see some that were more commodious, Le Fort went to the Danish Ambaffador's Taylor, and made him take Measure of him for a Captain's Sute, and another for a common Man. Two Days after he appeared in the first at the Czar's Levee, who did not know him at his coming into his Chamber; but, when he did, was much pleased with the Dress, and greatly commended his Diligence. He appeared next in the other Sute, and the Czar was fo well pleafed with both, that he ordered the same Clothing for a whole Company, who were to be disciplined after Le Fort's Manner.

C 2

whole

M. Le Fort fent to all the Merchants fettled at Mojcow, and went to some himself, for Things necessary to clothe this Company. He took all the Taylors he could find at the Ambassadors Houses, and those who ferved the Merchants, and defired an Order from the Czar to measure those among the Strelitzes who were of the best Shape and Stature. He then gathered a Number of Strangers together, who had Knowledge in the Military Exercise, and were willing to enter into the Czar's Service; and had them clothed according to the Posts that were given them. Having completed and clothed a Company of 50 Men, and put himself at their Head, he marched, with Drums beating, before the Palace Gate. The Czar, coming to the Window, was much furprifed, but highly pleafed with the Spectacle. He came down from his Chamber as foon as the Exercife began, and faid when it was over, he would enter into the Company, and learn the Discipline himself, ordering a Sute of Clothes to be made for him, as a common Centinel. Peter, tho' he condescended to wear this mean Habit, was not displeased to find that the People, who had before been Strangers to all Kinds of Grandeur, were coming, by Degrees, to have fome Taste of it. He had indeed too exalted a Mind himself to give Way to Luxury; but from this Time led an active Life, continually labouring for the Good of his Country. He even took the Polt of a Drummer, forbidding his Captain to remember that he was Czar. He served with all due Submission, lived upon his Pay. and lay in the Tent of a Drummer, till promoted to the Degree of a Serjeant; which was not till he deferved it in the Opinion of his Officers, whom he would punish if they judged too favourably of him. By this Procedure, he gave his Nobility to understand, that Birth alone was not enough to entitle them to Military Preferments.

He frequently made Re-inforcements to this Company, having them disciplined in the German Way, and giving the Command to Foreigners, till he had a confiderable Body of well-regulated Troops, which he would engage in Parties against each other, and the Representation of Mock-Sieges and Battles. The Strelitzes looked on these Sights as the diverting Amusements of a young Prince, and little suspected how much their own Interest was concerned in them: For Peter, thinking those Guards had too much Power, and were too strongly attached to the Princess Sophia, resolved to furnish himself with Soldiers better disciplined, and more to be depended on.

And now, to the utter Extinction of all the Hopes of his Sister, his Wife was this Year, 1690, delivered of a Son, who, according to the Muscovite Fashion, having the Christian Name of his Father given for a Sirname, was called Alexis Petrowitz.

The Foreigners in the Czar's Guards fo highly pleafed him, that he was refolved to have a Number of fuch as were skilled in different Professions, that he might introduce Arts and Sciences into his Country. M. Le Fort observed to him, that it would be impossible to fucceed in this Defign without a Regulation of his Finances; that his Revenues were not fufficient to support that great Number of Foreigners he talked of, who would be brought into his Service only on a Prospect of Advantage. He made it appear, that the Reason of his Revenues being fo inconfiderable in ready Money, was the heavy Taxes on all Sorts of Goods, which made the Merchants contrive to defraud him of his Cuitoms. The Czar, convinced of the Reason of all this, lowered his Duties from 10 per Cent to 4 or 5, and inflicted severe Penalties on fuch as were guilty of Frauds. By this wholesome Advice, his Revenues, the very first Year after, were increased near two Millions of Roubles. There foon appeared in Russia an infinite Number of all Nations, especially Germans, Scots, and French, not only Officers and Soldiers for the Army, but Men skilful in every Profession. Le Fort was the first who built a Palace of Cut Stone in Moscoru; which raised an Emulation in others to do the like, for the Embellishment of that City.

This worthy Favourite of the Czar was beloved by all who knew him: He was difinterested to that Degree, that he never accepted of any Present from those he put into Employment; but yet, by justifiable and honourable Means, acquired immense Riches, which he possessed without Envy from the Russians. He saved the Lives of an infinite Number of Great Men, to whom the Czar would have given the Knout, or beheaded them with his own Hands, many times on triffing Occasions. Le Fort would present his own Head or Shoulders to his Majesty, bidding him cut or strike there, but spare the innocent Person. The Czar, being made fenfible of his Barbarity, would take him in his Arms, and kifs him, and fometimes the trembling and just-now devoted Victim. To take away all Jealoufy from the Russians against the Foreigners he had introduced, Le Fort would recommend fuch of the Natives for Preferment, whom he himself, or some of those Foreigners, had taken Pains to qualify for the most profitable Employments. His own Merit was fixed on fo folid a Basis, that he feared no Rivals: A Proof of which was, the Care he took to fit Menzikoff, who was just then taken into Favour, from the Dregs of the People, for the great Posts he afterwards enjoyed.

Alexander Menzikoff, when the Czar first took Notice of him, had no higher an Employment than finging Ballads, and crying a Sort of Puffs and Cakes, called in the Russian Language, Piragi Podovi, about the Streets of Moscow. His Parents were Vasfals of the Monastery of Cosmopoli, on the Western Banks of the River Wolga. They could give him no better Education than their own, and he could neither write nor read; but, being arrived at the Age of 13 or 14, he left them without saying a Word, and was taken into the Service of a Pastry-Cook.

One Day as this fortunate Lad was crying his Pastry about the Streets, the Czar being diverted with one of his Songs, sent for him, and asked him, if he would sell his Pies and his Basket? The Boy reply'd, That he had Power to sell his Pies, but for disposing of his Basket he must ask his Master's Leave: However, as every Thing belonged to his Majesty, he needed only to command it. This Reply so pleased the Czar, that he ordered Menzikoss to come to Court, and said he would make his Fortune. He had at first a mean Employment; but the Czar frequently talking to him, and observing his Wit, advanced him soon to be Groom of his Bedchamber. Being very handsome in his Person, tall and well shaped, he listed himself into M. Le Fort's Company of Soldiers, who instructed him in the Knowledge and Skill to command Armies, which he afterwards undertook with the greatest Success.

200

The Troops of Siberia, Subjects of the Czar, having been long engaged in War against the Chinese Tartars, in the Year 1691, a Treaty of Peace was set on Foot between them, and soon brought to a happy Conclusion.

Siberia, with the Provinces belonging to it, makes a confiderable Part of the Russian Dominions, extending towards the South-East as far as the River Argun, within a few Days Journey of the famous Wall of China. This Country was conquered, about 150 Years fince, in the Reign of John Bazilowitz the Tyrant. Jeremak Timofeiwitz, a Pirate, having much harraffed the Czar's Subjects, and hearing the Troops of that Prince were coming against him, implored the Protection of one Stroginoff, a very rich Russ Merchant, who had a great Number of flat-bottom'd Vessels, which he constantly employed in the River Wolga, maintaining Factors at all the great Towns on that River, and at several Places on the eaftern Rivers which fall into it, and thereby extending his Commerce to the River Oby. This Merchant, on the Pirate's Promise of subduing the Country to the Power of the Czar, supply'd him with Vessels. and what he wanted for the Expedition, and likewife promifed to procure his Pardon. With this Encouragement, he went up the River Serebrenkoi, possessed himfelf of a strong Fortress, slew all he met, and then returning to the Capital of Siberia, there killed the King, and brought his Sons away Prisoners to Moscow, where, not many Years fince, remained a Descendant of the Family, who had the Title of the Sibersky Czarewitz.

The Pirate, after this Success, going down the River Itis, was attacked in the Night by a Party of Tartars: In the Skirmish he lost the best Part of his People, and endeavouring to save himself by jumping out of one Vessel into another, was drowned. Stroginoss had sent to Court in the mean Time, and obtained his Pardon:

He likewise sent Troops to fortify the Places Jeremak had taken. Thus it was that this Country, before without a Name, sell to the Muscovites, who call it Siberia, a Word fignifying a Prison, because hither are sent many Criminals, some to perpetual Banishment, and some for a Term of Years, who are obliged to shoot for their Livings or starve, and to bring in a certain Quantity of Furs Weekly, or be severely punished. They must take particular Care that the Furs are without Holes or Stains of Blood, which make them very dextrous in shooting with a single Ball at the Head of the Creature. The great Number of Swedes sent hither after the Battle of Pultowa, exercising various Kinds of Trades, and some setting up little Schools, has rendered the Country somewhat less savage then formerly.

The River Oby runs quite thro' the Province, and, like the Wolga, is well stored with Sturgeon and Bellugas. The last is a Fish 12 or 15 Feet long, large, and resembling a Sturgeon: The Meat is whiter than Veal, and as delicious as Marrow. When the Floods come down from the Mountains, by the Melting of the Snows, these Fish swallow large Stones to make them the heavier, and better able to stem the Torrent, which they throw up again when the Waters abate. It is of the soft Roes of the Belluga, and the Sturgeon together, that the People of Astracan make Caviere.

In this Part of the Czar's Dominions are several Iron Works; and the Iron brought from thence is thought better than any other in Muscowy. There is also a Sort of Ivory, the Tooth of an amphibious Creature called a Behemoth, found about the River Lama, and the adjacent Lakes. This Province brings a considerable Revenue into the Czar's Treasury, maintains the Garrisons in the Country, and sends constant Recruits to the Army. By the Way of this Country also the Russians carry'd on a beneficial Trade to Chima, a considerable Caravan of Merchants going thither every Year, who barter'd chiefly the rich Furs of Siberia for Tea, and other Chi-ofe Commodities.

The Subjects of Siberia, during the War, had built ort on the River Amur; but this was relinquished to Chinese by Count Gallowin, in the Peace of 1691,

Chap. 2: PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

and the Bounds between each Country fettled to be at the Head of the River Argun.

Having thus made Peace with a foreign Power, Peter was not without some Trouble at home. A Suspicion of Difloyalty was raifed against his Wife, and on this Pretence, he put her away, and had her strictly confined all the rest of her Days; tho' the real Cause of this hard Treatment was reported to be fome reproachful Language she had bestowed on Menzikost, complaining, that he carried her Husband to visit lewd Women, who were formerly his Customers for Cakes: Which Reflection upon his old Calling, it is faid, raifed in him to strong a Refentment, that he pursued his Revenge upon the Son, even to his Destruction many Years after. But it will be found in the Sequel of this Hiftory, that the Czar had but too much Caufe to proceed as he did against this wicked Son. A more probable Reason of the Czar's ill Usage of his Wife, was the Dillike the thewed to the Alterations he was about to make in his Country, which was to him the greatest of all Offences.

In the Year 1692, Mr. Isbrant, a Danish Gentleman, was fent by the Czars John and Peter to confirm the Peace negotiated by Count Gollowin, and fettle Articles of Commerce with China. He took Leave of their Majesties in the Month of March, 1692, and left Moscow with a Train of 21 Persons, 12 Germans, and 9 Russians. These were followed by Carriages, with the necessary Provisions for fo long a Journey. He passed thro' the feveral Countries of the Syrenes, the Wogulski Tartars, the Siberians, the Offiacks, the Tungutes, the Burates, and other Vasfals of their Czarian Majesties; faw the Towns of Solikamskoi, Neujanskoi, Tobolski, Samoroski-jam, Surgut, Keetskoi, Jeneseskoi, Buratskoi, Jekutskoi, Udinskoi, Telimta, Nerzinskoi, and many others that were hardly heard of before, of which he gives an Account in his Journal. On the 8th of October, 1693, he arrived at the famous Wall, which separates China from the Mogul Tartars. This Wall far exceeds any of the 7 Wonders, fo much boasted of by the Antients. It is at least 300 German Leagues in Length; above 30 Cubits high, and from 12 to 15 in Thickness. It is C 5, extended on the Tops of Mountains, and forms many Arches for Rivers to pass under. It is entirely built of Flint Stones, so well cemented, that it has now lasted near 2000 Years. There are Towers on it at the Distance of two Bow-Shots from each other. A Million of Soldiers formerly guarded it, but it has at present only some Guards at the Avenues. The Chinese affirm, that when the Emperor Hoam-ti first built it, to stop the Progress of the Tartars, he ordered the whole Empire of China to surnish 3 Men out of every ten for the Work, and that this stupendous Wall was finished in 5 Years.

M. Isbrant made his Entry into Pekin on the 3d of November, and on the 14th had an Audience of the Emperor Cam-hi, who received him in a most distinguished Manner; which was chiefly attributed to the Jesuits about him, who by this Means were in Hopes of obtaining some Privileges for their Society in Russia.

M. Ibrant*, having executed his Commission, left Pekin on the 19th of Feb. 1694, and taking the shortest Rout to return to Moscow*, arrived within 5 Wersts of that Capital on the last Day of the same Year, making but 10 Months and 10 Days in his Return, whereas he had been more than 19 Months going from Moscow* to Pekin*. The Czar Peter* went to meet him, impatient to hear the Recital of his long Voyage, and especially to enquire after such Circumstances as might savour his Design of establishing the Trade of his Subjects to that rich Empire.

The Czar had by chance taken Notice of a Dutch Yacht, that lay disused in a Canal belonging to one of bis Houses of Pleasure, with which being wonderfully pleased, and having talked of it to his Favourite M. Le Fort, that ingenious Gentleman fo strongly laid before him the Advantages that the Maritime Powers of Europe reaped from their naval Affairs, that he, from that Instant, was resolved to turn his Views that Way, and immediately gave Orders to some Hollanders, who were then at Moscow, to build several small Vessels, and afterwards 4 Frigates of 4 Guns each, in which he would often divert himself upon the Perislausky Lake, and caused now and then Mock-Fights to be performed thereon, in which he acted as a Sea Captain, and from thence forward took that Title upon him. The

The Czar all this while had neglected the War with the Crim Tartars, who avoided all Occasions of drawing the Arms of the Russians upon them; and the Cham had made no late Demand of the 80,000 annual Roubles. On the other Hand, it was not for the Interest of the Czars to aggrandize the Poles, who were no fooner able to support themselves without the Help of their Neighbours, than they treated them with infufferable Pride. But the Tartars, having now nothing to fear in their own Country, committed many cruel Ravages in the Dominions under the King of Poland; upon which the Ministers of that Prince represented to the Czars how favourable an Opportunity they had to reduce the Tartars to fuch a Condition, as that they should be never able to molest them again. In fine, at the Instance of the Emperor of Germany, the Poles and Venetians, Russia declared War with the Turks and Tartars. Peter commanded feveral Vessels to be built on the River Veronis, which, with some open Boats of the Coffacks who inhabit on the Tanais, he employed next

Year in befieging Afoph.

The Year 169; beheld the first Campaign of the two most fordmiable Monarchs of Europe, Peter I. Czar of Mojcovy, and Mustapha II. Emperor of the Turks. This last succeeded his Uncle Achmet II. whose Conduct displeafing him as much as his Father's, he was refolved to take other Measures, and to know and do every Thing himself. He knew how, by the Severity of his Discipline, to re-establish Affairs, and resolved to march himself at the Head of an Army, he designed for Hunpary. He had nothing to fear from the Side of Poland, from whence an Envoy was just then come, to propose a separate Peace; but he was much alarmed at the Preparations making by the Czar against the Tartars, because this obliged them to refuse sending him the usual Succours: However, notwithstanding all the Cham could fay, he forced him to appear in the Ottoman Army, at the Head of 6000 Men. The Czar, in this Expedition, entred himself as an Ensign only; but he had an Army of about 80 or 90,000 Men, divided into two Bodies, one to attack Afoph, the other to support the Donfki Coffacks against the Tartars, if they should attempt tempt to throw any Succours into the Town. But this the Turks were able to do by Water; and, making frequent Sallies, held out a refolute Defence for above two Months. The Russians, whenever they skirmished with the Enemy, had the better of them, and began to play their Batteries with good Success: But the Progress they had made, was all rendered fruitless, by the Treachery of one Jacob, a Foreigner, employed in the Russian Artillery, who, having been ill used by his Officer, nailed up the Cannon upon his Batteries, and deferting to the Enemy, informed them of what he had done. On this Information, they made a bold Sally, and put the Muscovites into such Confusion, that they were forced to leave the Place for that Year, and turn the Siege into a Blockade. This first Campaign of the Czar Peter, and the Accounts of whatever he performed himself, were so advantageously related, as gave the World an Idea of him quite different from what had been conceived of any of his Predecessors, and began to raise those Hopes of him which were afterwards fully accomplished: But Fame was somewhat too speedy when the carried the News of the Reduction of Afoph, which Design miscarried at the very Instant that it was thought fecure.

Soon after his Majesty's Return to Moscow, in the Month of February, 1696, dy'd his Brother, the Czar John Alexiowitz. He was buried at Moscow, in the Church of St. Michael, where most of the Dukes and Czars of Muscowy have been deposited, with a Tomb more magnificent than any of the rest. He left 3 Daughters, one of which, Anne Joannowna, sways at present the Imperial Scepter of Russia.

Ma-

CHAP, III.

The Czar takes Asoph. Builds a Fleet. Determines to travel. A Conspiracy against him; discovered. His Journey to Holland and England. A Conspiracy while he is abroad. He returns to Moscow. Punishes the Rebels. Settles his Army and Navy. Institutes the Order of St. Andrew. Declares War with Sweden. Account of the Muscovite Religion. The Czar reforms the Abuses in his Revenues.

DETER, now fole Monarch of Russia, having employed several Foreigners to build more Vessels at Veronis, went in 1696 a second Time against Afoph, and acted with great Vigour aboard his own Fleet, when the Turks came before the Bar, laid an Ambuscade behind a small Island, and then making a Shew of retiring, fell upon them, took and funk feveral of their Vessels, and beat them back over the Bar. At the same Time his Majesty largely recruited his Army, which, under the Command of General Gordon, a Scotchman, carried on the Siege with great Refolution. The Enemy, every Way distressed by the Behaviour of the Czar and his Army, were obliged to furrender, upon Condition of being allowed to retire without their Arms, and to deliver up Jacob, the treacherous Engineer; who was carried to Moscow, where he was broke alive upon the Wheel, after having been three Times tortured on the Pine*.

His Czarish Majesty gave Notice to all the Princes of Christendom of the Success of his Arms; and his Minister at the Court of Vienna observed to his Imperial

This Punishment is executed in the following Manner: The Criminal's Hands being tied together behind his Back, he is drawn up by a Rope fastened to them, having a large Weight hanging at his Feet. His Shoulders being turned out of Joint, and his Arms coming over his Head, the Executioner is then to give him so many Strokes as the Judge has ordered: Between whiles a Writer examines the Offender, which being done, his Arms are put into Joint again, and he is either dismissed or fent back to Prison.

Majesty, that, after what his Master had done for the common Caufe, it would be very injurious to make Peace without him. The Czar himfelf likewife let the Emperor know, that the Cham of Tartary had fent Propositions to him, but that he had ordered his Ambassadors to be told, that he must apply to the Empefor of the Romans. The Sincerity of this Behaviour engaged his Imperial Majesty to enter into a Treaty of Alliance, offenfive and defenfive, with the Czar, for 3 Years. The Venetians also, being informed of the favourable Dispositions of his Czarish Majesty, sent full Power to their Ambassador at Vienna to conclude an Alliance, offenfive and defenfive, with the Minister of Russia ; and the King of Sweden, Charles XI. offered the fame, notwithstanding the Provinces of Sweden, bordering on Russia, were at that Time in a miserable Condition.

The Czar, when he returned to Moscow, received the Compliments of all the Boyars upon his Victory; and finding, by the Experience he got in this Action, the great Advantage of a maritime Force, he resolved to establish a Navy in the Black-Sea. He therefore commanded that Workmen should be fent for from Holland. Venice, and other Parts of Italy, to build Galleys and Ships, determining to have a strong Fleet built and equipt, with all Things ready to put to Sea, within the Space of 3 Years. Befides the usual Taxes paid for the Support of the War, he obliged feveral of his richeft Boyars to build each of them a Ship at his own Expence; but allowed them the Honour of giving their own Names to the Vessels so built. The Monasteries. Cities and Towns, the Merchants and Gentlemen in every District throughout his Dominions, were to pay their Proportion towards the Charge of this Undertaking; and every one's Proportion was to be doubled, if it was not completed by the Time he had fixed for it. But the Czar reflecting on the Inconvenience of having no Veffels but what were built by Strangers, refolved on a Way to remedy that for the future; and declared his Intentions to travel while his Fleet was preparing. He likewise appointed some of the Prime of his young Nobility, and the Sons of others, to travel into different Parts

Ri.

Parts of Europe; with Instructions what they ought to study, that was most suitable to their Genius. Some of these Gentlemen obeyed with a very ill Will, and it is said that one of them locked himself up in his House at Venice for 4 Years, that, at his Return, he might have the Satisfaction of not having seen or learned any Thing. The Czar, besides the Design of improving these young Gentlemen, had another View in thus dispersing them; which was to prevent any Dangers from their meeting together in his Absence.

The Muscovites were great Exemies to all Innovations, and this Ship-building was a thing entirely new to them; but, above all, their being put to the Expence of it, and their being forced to fend their Sons to travel, occasioned great Uneasinesses, which were not a little fomented by the Priests, who took care to infinuate among the People, that this would be a great Means of corrupting the young Nobility in the Principles of their Religion. Not even the Envoys fent to Foreign Courts, were allowed, in former Times, to take their own Sons with them. It is no Wonder that People with these narrow Notions, should murmur at the Czar's shewing so great a Regard to Strangers, and now preparing to leave his own Country. He had likewise form'd a Project, and actually employed a Perfon about it, to open a Communication with Afoph, by a navigable Canal between the Volga and the Tanais: But this Design, grand as it was, some of the indolent Russians represented as a Piece of Impiety, being to turn the Streams one Way, which Providence had directed another.

The Apprehensions of the People gave a good Opportunity to the discontented Boyars, who were in the Princess Sophia's Interest, to attempt something that might give a Turn to the Affairs of State. With these Views, it was agreed to fire some Houses near the Czar's Palace, and to affassinate him, when he should come out to affist in extinguishing the Flames. They resolved next to release the Princess Sophia out of Prison, and put the Crown on her Head: After which they were to restore the Strelitzes; who had been removed from their Posts, on Account of the Rebellion, headed by Convan-fki. And next they were to maffacre all Foreigners, and the Czar's new Favourites.

Three great Lords, one Colonel of the Don-Coffacks, and several Officers of the Strelizes, were engaged in the Plot, which was to have been put in Execution on the 2d of February, 1697: But the very Day before, two Captains of the Strelizes went and threw themselves at his Majesty's Feet, at the House of M. Le Fort, made an ample Confession of the whole Business, and gave in the Names of the principal Persons concerned in it.

The Czar immediately rose from Table, without discovering any Surprize, and, taking only a few Persons with him, went and seized on the Chiefs of the Confpirators, among whom he found one of his own Privy-Council. They were presently put to the Torture, and having confessed their Crimes, were soon after executed. The Heads of the Criminals were severed from their Bodies, and stuck on Spikes at the Top of a Column, erected for that Purpose, in the great Market Place before the Gates of the Castle, their Legs and Arms hanging about the Column, and their Bodies being left exposed in the Market Place till the Frost broke, and then slung into a Pit, among the executed Bodies of common Thieves and Malesactors.

Having punished the Heads of this Conspiracy, the Czar began to prepare for his Journey: He sent M. Le Fort, now a Lieutenant-General in his Army, and Admiral of his Fleet, with Count Gollowin and M. Wosrifetstyn, his Ambassadors Extraordinary to the States General of Holland, and went himself incognito in their Train. He likewise took with him some of his particular Favourites, whom he designed to have instructed in the Art of Ship-building.

During his Absence, he left the Administration of the Government to three Boyars; his Uncle Naraskin, Prince Galliczin, and the Lord Peter Procorofsky. He ordered 12,000 Soldiers, commanded by General Gordon, to be quartered about the Suburbs of Moscow; sent the suspected Strekitzes to the Frontiers of Turky, under the Command of General Schein; and in the Month of May, 1697, began his Journey with the Grand Embassy.

The first Place of any Note, that they came to, was Riga, the principal Town and Key of Livonia. This City, built at the Mouth of the River Duna, is large, having 9 Gates. At Carle-Port, the Chief, is a Range of Caserns, for Soldiers to lodge in, a hundred Paces in Length, which are Bomb-Proof. The Governor here paid great Respect to the Embassy but refusing to shew the Fortifications to Menzikoff and Le Fort, the Czar was so much incensed, that he said to his Favourites: He boped he should see the Day, when he should be able to resuse the said to his was afterwards, in a Manifesto he published, given as one Reason, tho' certainly no very good one, for declaring War with the Savedes.

His Czarish Majesty came next to Koningsberg, in the Dominions of the Elector of Bradenburgh: A City divided into three Parts, in all which are 9 Churches, besides Chapels. Here is an Academy, which has produced confiderable Men in every Science; and a Library well replenished with Books. The Town is defended by a good Castle, that commands the Harbour. The Elector fent M. Dankleman to compliment them in his Name, and accompany them into the City. After Dinner M. Beffer, the Master of the Ceremonies, arrived at the same Place, with a great Company of Nobility, who introduced them with great Ceremony. Their Excellencies were conducted to a magnificent Lodging, the Burghers being drawn out, and lining the Streets in a double File, all the Way. As foon as they alighted, they were conducted to their Apartment, which was guarded by 24 Soldiers; and then the Lords of the Court, together with M. Dankleman, and the Master of the Ceremonies, left them.

Four Days after, the Ambassadors had their Publick Audience of the Elector, to which they were conducted by M. Dankleman, and the Master of the Ceremonies, with a Train of 30 Coaches. The Ambassadors, richly habited, entered the great Hall of the Castle, where the Elector was seated on a Throne, attended by the principal Lords of his Court. After they had every ore in their Order complimented his Electoral Highness, they delivered him a Letter, in which the Czar told him, that he fent that Embassy to assure him of his Desire to improve the good Correspondence which had always subfisted between his Electoral Highness and himself, as well as between their illustrious Ancestors: That the fame Embaffy being to proceed to the Court of Vienna, his Czarish Majesty requested the Elector to assist them in their Journey. Withal returning his Highness Thanks for the Engineers and Bombardiers which he fent him the last Year, and which had been fo useful to him in the Siege of Afoph. To all which the Elector answered, That he was much obliged to the Czar for the Assurance of his good Intentions, and the splendid Embassy he had fent to him. And then M. Dankleman returned an Answer more at large, and very obligingly, to the Compliments of the feveral Ambaffadors; who were, the same Evening, entertained with a Show of Fire-Works, which lasted till Midnight.

In this City his Czarish Majesty had all the Respect paid to him that he desired, and, having discovered himself to the Elector, nothing was deny'd to him that he had an Inclination to see or have. He staid here some Time, and diverted himself with failing on the Hass, a Lake of about 30 Leagues in Length, lying between Koningsberg and Dantzick.

In his Way from hence to Koningsberg, his Majesty received Advice, that the Elector of Saxony was chofen King of Poland, but that the Cardinal Primate had protested in Favour of the Prince of Conti, who, with a Squadron of French Men of War, then lay before Dantzick; notwithstanding which, the Town declared for his Rival, King Augustus. The Czar, as soon as he received this Advice, fent Orders to his Ambassador in Poland to maintain the Right of Election; and to affure King Augustus, that he had 60,000 Men in readiness to support him. He likewise sent Orders to his Troops in the Ukrain, and about Smolensko, to advance towards the Frontiers of Lithuania, to keep that Dutchy in his Interest. He had good Reason for what he did; for France being in Alliance with the Turks, if their Party had prevailed, it was very probable that he would not only have made Peace with the Porte, but have turned his Arms against the Czar. The

The next Place his Majesty arrived at was Dantzick, the Capital of Polish Pomerania, distant 145 Miles from Warfaco. It lies about 4 Miles from the Sea, upon a Branch of the Weiffel, and is accounted one of the chief Hans Towns, and greatest trading Cities in Europe. It is encompassed by a Wall so broad, that Coaches can eafily go round upon it, and the Fortifications are of a vast Extent; but, being commanded by two Hills on the South-West, cannot hold out a brisk Siege. The chief Trade of the City is in Corn from Poland, which makes it the Granary of Holland and the Northern Countries. The Number of Inhabitants in this City were usually reckoned 200,000. Their constant Number of Soldiers in Pay is only 200, but they can eafily maintain 12,000, and have fometimes had an Army of 60,000 Men. One of the Suburbs here is called Scotland, and inhabited by Scots, all of that Nation being allowed to be Freemen of the City, in Confideration of the great Service they formerly did the Place, under the Conduct of one of the Family of Douglas. The established Religion of the City is Protestantism, but they tolerate Roman Catholicks. They have 24 Churches, generally magnificent: The chief of them is fo large, that it has 48 Altars, and 3722 Windows. The Harbour, tho' not deep enough to admit Ships of very great Force, hath fometimes received Veffels of 400 Ton and 40 Guns.

In this and most other maritime Places, his Majesty had very handsome Presents sent to him, under the Shew of doing it to the Ambassadors, who were complimented with all the Marks of Respect that could be imagined; but his Majesty would suffer no Ceremony to be paid to himself. He had so great a Desire to be in Holland, that he tarried not long at any of the Sea-Ports in the Baltick, and but a few Days at Hamburgh. He travelled not to satisfy a vain Curiosity, or to shew the Gaiety of his Dress and Equipage; so far from it, that he commonly went about in the Jacket of a Dutch Skipper, that he might the more easily mix with the Sea-faring People.

When his Majesty approached the Frontiers of the United Provinces, the States General appointed Deputies to receive the Embassay, with the highest Marks of Honour that could be shewn upon such an Occasion. The Streets and Windows at Amslerdam were crowded with Spectators, when the Ambassadors entered that City, conducted by a great Number of Persons, who went out with splendid Equipages to meet them. At Night there were Illuminations, and fine Fire-works before the House prepared for the Ambassadors, whose Expences the States took upon themselves to defray. The Dutch did all this, and a great deal more, to give the Czar a favourable Impression of their Country, and prevent his entering into Engagements with other Nations, who were their Rivals in the Russian Trade.

Before the Ambassadors arrived at Amsterdam, the Czar enter'd that City incognito, introduced only by a few Merchants, whom he had known at Moscow. The Magistrates also, having Intimation of it, deputed some confiderable Persons to wait upon him, and prepared a magnificent House for his Reception: But he was not to be perfuaded to accept of it, chusing a little House in the East-India Company's Ship-yard, where he enter'd himself as a common Carpenter, by the Name of Peter Michaelhoff. Here he lived several Months, with two or three of his Favourites; but was observed to work with greater Assiduity than any of his Companions, who had not any Motives comparable to his, which was to increase the Wealth and Glory of his Country. He worked for the greatest Part of the Day with a Carpenter's Broad Ax, wearing the same Sort of Habit as the Dutchmen; and at other Times he would divert himself with failing upon the Water. Strict Orders were given, that all Sorts of People should be forbid to gaze upon him, which, of all Things, was what gave him the greatest Uneafiness. Yet he would sometimes admit of private Visits, and go to private Entertainments; particularly to Burgo-master Whiston's, a Gentleman vastly rich in Shipping, and famous for his Love of Arts, having fent Perfons abroad, at his own Expence, to make Discoveries in all Parts of the World; and been at great Charge in fixing large Telescopes, for observing the celestial Bodies.

On the 27th of September, the Ambassadors made their publick Entry at the Hague, and, after having had an Audience of King William III. as Stadtholder, on the 5th of October they went to Utrecht, where they were introduced to a publick Audience of the States General. General Le Fort, the Chief of the Embassy, produced the Credential Letters, and made a Speech to their High Mightinesses. Count Gollowin spoke likewise. The Audience lasted above half an Hour; during which the Ambassadors, and the States General, contrary to the usual Custom, stood all the Time.

The Plenipotentaries of the Emperor, Spain, Sweden, Denmark, and Brandenburg, paid Vifits, which were returned by the Ruffian Ministers; but those of France, irritated by the Czar's having espoused the Interest of King Augustus, thought to revenge themselves by not paying the due Respect. The Embassy remained at the Hague till the 30th of October: But the Czar continued there till the 7th of November, that he might have a particular Interview with the King of England, on the Defign which he had formed of going to London.

During the Time that his Majesty was in Holland, he received the agreeable News of his Army's having obtained a Victory over the Turks and Tartars. General Schein being arrived before Afoph, and having joined the other Generals, their Troops together made up an Army of 70 or 80,000 Men. The Sultan Galga appeared on the 30th of July, at the Head of the Hordes of Crimea, Nogai, Edissanski, and Cuban, to attack the Army. They fustained the first Shock from General Schein with a good deal of Vigour; but after the Battle had lafted fome Hours, they were entirely routed, and drove as far as the River Halianka, which they endeavoured to cross in such Disorder, that the greatest Part of their Army was loft. This Battle lasted above 10 Hours, and was the more Glorious to his Czarish Majesty, in that he loft but very few Men. This Victory was preceded by another Advantage gained at Sea, over the Tertars, who had attempted to surprise Asoph with a large Number of Veffels full of Troops. The Body of Troops that were on the Side of the Nieper, made good Progress likewise, and became so terrible, even to the Grimea, Crimea, that the Cham was resolved to use his utmost Efforts to be delivered from them: For which Reason he hazarded another Battle near Kassikermen, in which the Russians and Cossaks had the same Advantages as in the First; and it cost the Cham the Life of one of his Sons, and ieveral of the Turkish Bashaws. These Advantages were followed by the taking many little Places belonging to the Tartars, which lest General Schein at Liberty to send a Detachment of Men to affist at the Canal that was now making, for a Communication between the Cassian and Black-Sea. This Year, in short, was every where stall to the Turks. The greatest Blow they selt was in the samous Battle of Zenta, where the Imperial Army, under Prince Eugene of Savoy, gave them a total Defeat.

At the fame Time that his Czarish Majesty received this News, he had an Account of the Death of Charler XI. King of Sweden, with whom he had lived in good Friendship. This Prince left but one Son, and two Daughters, the Dutches of Holstein Gottorp, and the present Queen of Sweden. He put off the Majority of his Son Charles XII. to the Age of 18, and appointed his Mother Regent of the Kingdom: But as the Laws of Sweden had fixed the Majority of their Kings to the Age of 15, the States thought proper to change this Disposition, and the King's Majority being declared, he was crowned the same Year.

In the Middle of January, the Czar embarked at Helwoetsluys, for London. While his Majesty was in Holland, he had feen feveral English-built Ships, whose Beauty and Proportion pleafed him much better than those of the Dutch Ships. He resolved therefore to come over hither, that he might improve his Knowledge in the Theory of Ship-building. Upon an Intimation of this Intention, King William fent him his Compliments, and feveral Servants were appointed to attend him and his Retinue, who were all honourably entertained at the King's Charge, the whole Time that he flaid in England, and also in his Passage backwards and forwards. A handsome House was provided for him at the Bottom of York Buildings; and he had several Interviews with the King, Princels Anne of Denmark, and VALEDI many of the English Nobility: But he was most pleased with the then Marquis of Caermarthen, afterwards Duke of Leeds, who like himself delighted in maritime Affairs, and gave him all the Information he could into the Knowledge of Shipping.

During his Stay in England, he went to fee the University of Oxford; was once to visit the Archbishop of Canterbury, and many Times to fee our Cathedrals, Churches, and Differiting Meeting-Houses, in the Time of Service. Bishop Burnet, who waited on him often, and was defired, both by the King and the Bishops, to offer him fuch Informations of our Religion and Constitution as he was willing to receive, describes him thus: " He is a Man of a very hot Temper, foon in-" flamed, and very brutal in his Passion. He raises his " natural Heat by drinking much Brandy, which he " rectifies himself with great Application. He is sub-" ject to convulfive Motions all over his Body, and his " Head feems to be affected with thefe. He wants not " Capacity, and has a larger Measure of Knowledge, "than might be expected from his Education, which " was very indifferent. A Want of Judgment, with an " Instability of Temper, appears in him too often, and too evidently. He is mechanically turned, and feems " defigned by Nature rather to be a Ship-Carpenter, " than a great Prince. This was his chief Study and " Exercise, while he stayed here. He wrought much " with his own Hands, and made all about him work " at the Models of Ships. He told me, he defigned a " great Fleet at Afoph, and with it to attack the Turkifb " Empire: But he did not feem capable of conducting " fo great a Defign, though his Conduct in his Wars, " fince this, has discovered a greater Genius in him, " than appeared at that Time. He was defirous to un-" derstand our Doctrine, but he did not seem disposed to " mend Matters in Muscovy. He was indeed resolved " to encourage Learning, and to polish his People, by " fending some of them to travel in other Countries, " and to draw Strangers to come and live among them, " He feemed apprehensive still of his Sister's Intrigues. " There is a Mixture both of Passion and Severity in his "Temper. He is resolute, but understands little of " War s "War; and seemed not at all inquisitive that Way." Matters of Fact contradict Part of this Character, a Part the Bishop has contradicted himself, and the rest may be true.

His Majesty, while he staid at London, went to view the Tower, where he seemed much pleased with our Armoury, and the Manner of coining Money. He was shewn the two Houses of Parliament, when sitting; and was prevailed upon twice or thrice to go to the Play. It was whisper'd about, that Miss Cross, one of the Actresses, had found the Way to please him, and had been once admitted into his Company. His Majesty used to dress after the English Fashion, sometimes like a Gentleman, and sometimes like a Sailor. He went abroad with little Attendance, and when the Mob began to gaze at him, he would always quit the Place where he was.

A House in London, especially above Bridge, being neither agreeable to his Humour, nor the Design of his coming to England, a very neat one was sitted up for him at Deptsord, where he would often take up the Carpenter's Tools, and work with them. Seeing with how much more Skill our People worked than the Ship-Builders in Holland, he thought he had mispent all the Time he was there, and used to say he should never have learned his Trade, if he had not come to England.

The King fent Admiral Mitchel along with him to Portfmouth, on Purpose to entertain him with a Mock-Engagement, which he had feen also in Holland, but not near fo much to his Satisfaction as this: Which gave him fo great Pleafure, that he declared he thought an English Admiral a happier Man than a Czar of Muscowy. In fhort, he approved fo well of all he had feen in England relating to our Shipping, that he took feveral English Ship-Builders and Artificers into his Service, to be employed in the Navy he was about to establish. He likewise took other ingenious Workmen of different Kinds to be fent into Muscowy, among the rest Captain John Perry, who was recommended to him, as a Person capable of ferving him in feveral of his Defigns, particularly that of making a Communication between the Rivers Volga and Don. The Distance of this Communication nication is about 140 Russ Miles, by way of two other small Rivers, upon which Sluices were to be placed, to make them navigable. When the Russians are in Possessian Possessian Possessian tage to their Country. The Work was first begun by one Colonel Breckell, a German, who understanding very little of this Business, the first Sluice he placed blew up; whereupon he escaped out of the Country. The Czar had an Account of this in England, and sent Captain Perry, to examine if the Work was practicable or not; which proved fo, and is fince finished.

While the Czar was here, he entered into a Treaty with some considerable English Merchants, for a free Importation of Tobacco into his Dominions, upon this Condition, that it should be first licensed by, and pay 5 seper Hogshead to, the Marquis of Caermarthen. This great Advantage he procured as an Acknowledgment of the Kindness he had received from that Nobleman, and in Return for his obliging Conversation. At a Meeting which the Merchants had with the Czar, the late Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Master of the Eastland Company, observed to him, that he feared the great Aversion the Priests had to Tobacco, would be a great Impediment to their Trade: To which the Czar answered, That he avoiled do well enough with them when he went home.

When the Czar left England, King William gave him leave to take any of his Subjects into his Service that he should have occasion for; and made him a Present of a fine Yacht, called the Royal Transport, the best them in England. He took with him one Mr. Fergharson, an ingenious Mathematician, and two young Mathematicians out of Christ-Church Hospital, who, with the Ship-builders and several other Artificers, were sent to Arch-Angel, the greatest Part of them in the fine Yacht.

His Czarish Majesty from hence went back to Holland, and from thence to Vienna, where the Day after his Arrival, he had a private Audience of the Emperor Leopold at the Palace de la Favorita. Nobody was prefent at this Interview, but the Count de Vallenstein, Grand Chamberlain to the Emperor, and the Count da Diestrichstein his Grand Equerry, with General Le Fart, who served as the Czar's Interpreter. A sew Days after Count Starenberg gave the Czar and his Ambasiadors a magnificent Collation, accompanied with a Concert of Musick, and after that a noble Ball, where were present the principal Lords and Ladies of the Court. On the 9th of July, being the Festival of St. Peter, he himself gave a great Feast and Ball in Guntersdorf House, where the Ambaffadors were lodged. The Emperor fent him his Mufick, and ordered large Fire-works to be made ready, which were played off in the Evening. The fame Day his Imperial Majesty sent a Present, of all Manner of Mathematical Instruments, to the Czar, who two Days after went to fee the Armoury, the Library the Pictures, and all the other Rarities of the Imperial Palace. About a Week after this, a great Feaft was prepared at the Favorita, which began with a Ball and a Concert of Mufick; afterwards a splendid Collation was given to the Company, and then followed another Ball, which lasted till Break of Day. Every Masker was in the Habit of a different Nation; fo that almost all the Countries of the World were there represented; and every Prince or Lord had a Lady by his Side, in answerable Habits. Mutual Compliments here passed between the Emperor and the Czar in their Masquerade Dreffes. Upon the 29th of July the Grand Embaffy had their publick Audience; to which they were conducted in a very magnificent Manner, and were treated very fplendidly at the Emperor's Expence.

 \mathbf{D}

Whilst the Czar was thus on his Travels, conciliating to himself the Affections of the greatest Powers of Europe, Intelligence coming to Moscow that he intended to make great Alterations in his own Affairs, as soon as he came home, the discontented Party took a Handle from thence to insuse Jealousies into the Minds of the People, which were greatly somented by the Priests, that his Majesty would subvert their holy Religion. Upon which a Conspiracy was formed to declare the Throne vacant, by his Absence, and to set his Sister thereon in his Stead.

About to,000 of the Strelitzes, who knew they had loft the Czar's Favour, had agreed to join the Conspirators; and the better to colour their Design, they were to make some Complaint concerning their Pay, and march

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 51

away directly: But the Regency hearing of their Motion, fent several Persons to endeavour to pacify them by fair Means, who used all Methods to prevail with them to return and join the other Forces. They would listen however to no Proposals, till they had been at Moscow to see their Friends, as they pretended, from whom they had been so long banished.

Upon hearing an Account of this ill Success of the Deputies, the whole City was in a great Consternation: Many Perfons of Condition left Moscow, and retired into the Country, dreading what might happen upon the Approach of these Troops, and the Revolt of others. General Gordon was ordered to march against the Mutineers, with his Army; which had been many Times in Action with him, and which, for the most part, consisted of old Soldiers and foreign Officers. They came up with the Rebels near the Jerusalem Monastery, from whence the General fent fome noble Voluntiers, and feveral Officers, to offer them honourable Satisfaction: But they obstinately perfished in their first Resolution, and declared, that if the General led his Army against them, they would oppose him at all Hazards. General Gordon, upon this, ordered some Cannon to be fired over their Heads, and fummoned them to furrender: But the Shot doing no Execution, the Priests declared it was a Miracle, and that the Shot had no Power to hurt them, who were going to fight in Defence of their holy Religion. Thus, puffed up with the true Spirit of Enthufialm. the Rebels ran furiously upon the General's Army; whereupon a very sharp Engagement enfued, that lasted near two Hours. The Rebels now found that Miracles were ceased, and having 2 or 3000 Men killed on the Spot, furrendered themselves Prisoners. The General hanged up every tenth Man, and brought the rest Pri foners to Moscow, where several of the Ring-leaders confessed their Crimes, and discovered the principal Persons concerned with them.

When the first Account of this Rebellion came to the Czar, he was at the Court of Vienna, and from thence preparing to go to Venice, in which State, as well as at Rome, great Preparations were making for his Reception: But this News made him alter his Refolution, and

D 2

Let out directly for Moscow, by the Way of Poland, where he had a short Interview with King Augustus. His Majesty having concerted Measures with that Prince for the War that was foon after declared against Saveden, proceeded with fo much Expedition and Secrecy. that he arrived at Moscow, before it was known in that City that he was on his Journey. The very next Day he ordered handsome Rewards to be given to those Soldiers who had been stedfast in their Loyalty; ordered the principal Agents of the Rebellion to be brought before him; and having fully examined them, before his Boyars, they were all fentenced to Death. A great Number of the Conspirators were beheaded, some broke upon the Wheel, and others buried alive. Above 2000 of the Strelitzes were executed; fome had their Heads taken off in the Market Place, and others were hanged upon Gallowses erected for that Purpose, at the Gates of all the Walls that encompass the City. Those who were beheaded were laid in Ranks upon the Ground, with their Heads by them, where they were left all the Winter. Other Gibbets were fet up in the publick Roads leading to Moscozu, upon which a great Number of the Rebels were hanged, and large Monuments of Stone were erected near the fame, with an Account of their Crimes. The very Houses in which they lived were razed to the Ground, and the Name of Strelitzes commanded to be abolished, and changed into that of Soldatee, or Soldiers. Such of the Strelitzes as were judged the least guilty, were only banished to Siberia, Astracan, Asoph, and the farthest Parts of the Empire.

His Majefty, having punished his Enemies, turned his Thoughts on reforming his Government and People. He put his whole Army on a new Footing, and directed a new Manner of disciplining them, agreeable to what he had seen abroad. He ordered an Account to be brought him of all those Nobility and Gentry of confiderable Estates, who had no Employments, out of whom he made choice of a great Number, and commanded them to serve as Voluntiers in his Army, or go to reside in the Frontier Garrisons. He went down to Vermis to view the Ships and Gallies himself, and to hasten the Equipment of his Fleet for the Black-Sea.

Roubles

The City of Veronis is fituated on the West-Side of a River of the fame Name, having a Citadel on the other Side, joined to it by a large Bridge. It stands upon a high Hill furrounded with a Wooden Wall, and is divided into three Parts, in one of which the chief of the Rustian Merchants have their Abode. Upon the Side of the Hill, along the River, there are several Houses, the chief of them belonging to the Rullian Admirals. Behind these are Streets for those employed in Ship-building. The Ditches about it are full of Water. The Citadel is the chief Magazine, wherein are about 150 Pieces of Cannon. It is defended with Pallifadoes in feveral Places, and filled with a pretty good Garrison. The Conveniences for Ship-building are on one Side, and the Store-House on the other. Here are many Places full of naval' Stores, even to the Sailors Clothes. It is computed that there are 10,000 Souls in this Town.

As foon as his Czarish Majesty came hither, he made the English his chief Master Builders, and ordered that no Ships should be built but after the English Models. He put a 50 Gun Ship upon the Stocks, from a Draught he had made himself, and so contrived, that if the Keel should be knocked off, the Vessel would keep tight, He left Orders with Vice-Admiral Crufs, Rear-Admiral Para and fome other Officers at Fermis, whom he had taken into his Service in Holland, to get those Ships and Gallies that were now built, rigged, and ready fitted to be carried down to Aloph.

His Majetty had scarce settled Affairs at Veronis, before he was hastened to Moscow, by the Death of his Favourite Le Fort: A Man who highly deserved all the Honours that he had, or could confer upon him. The Czar was femfibly touched with the Lofs, and ordered the most magnificent Pomp to attend his Funeral, at which he affifted himself, crying with a loud Voice, That he had loft his Father. The Guards, the great Officers of State, the foreign Residents, and the Chief of the Rusfan Nobility, attended this Solemnity, which far furpasted any Thing of the Kind that ever had before been feen at Mofester. This great Minister left, at his Death, which was but in the 46th Year of his Age, near a Million of D 3

Roubles, all acquired without Oppression or Corruption. He married into a very rich Family, the Head of which he had saved, as he had several others, from the Rage of his Master. He was disinterested, humane, just, sober, generous and brave. Never was Servant more beloved by his Prince, or more deserving it: And, what is not very common with Favourites, he gained his Master's Esteem by his Merit only. The Czar himself was present while the Funeral Sermon was preached, in one of the Reformed Churches, and afterwards went with the Body to the Place of Interment, where it was deposited in a Vaulted Tomb, under a Discharge of forty Pieces of Cannon, and the Muskets of all the Regiments, followed by several Pieces of solemn Musick.

This melancholy Office over, his Majesty chose a new Set of Lords to be of his Council: And, that he might do honour to some of those who had faithfully served him, he instituted the Order of St. Andrew, which was the first Order of Knighthood ever known in that Country. The Collar is a blue Ribband, to which there hangs a Cross with the Image of that Saint, and these two Letters, S. A. surmounted by an Eagle, and the Sovereign's Name engraven thereon. Prince Menzi-koff was the first on whom he conferred it.

The Cvar's Ministers, at the Treaty of Carlowitz, had concluded a Truce with the Turks for two Years: But the Emperor, the King of Poland, and the Venetians, having agreed on Preliminaries for a perpetual Peace, the Czar wrote to King William, who was Mediator at the faid Treaty, to get the Truce prolonged for him. He, accordingly, fent Orders to the Lord Pager, his Ambassador at the Porte, to take the same Care of the Czar's Affairs as of the rest of the Princes of Christendom; by which Means the Czar's Truce was prolonged for 25 Years: And the very next Day after the Ratification of it, he declared War with the young King of Sweden: As, about the fame Time, had the Kings of Poland and Denmark, who were in Alliance with the Czar. The true Motive of this Declaration was, the Hopes he had of recovering Ingria, which had formerly belonged to Muscovy, till taken by the great Gustavus By possessing this Province, the Czar would Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

be enabled to have a Port on the East-Side of the Baltick, to complete his great Design of opening new Ways between that and the Euxine and Caspian Seas, and from those to the Northern Ocean. He had likewise Pretentions to the Province of Livenia, which though he would not have liked to have seen in Possession of the Pales, yet he was willing to assist them to take it from the Savedes.

While the Czar was preparing for the ensuing War, he began his intended Reformation in the Church and State; and even in the Manners, Customs, and Dress of his People.

The Muscovite Religion is properly that of the Greek Church. They receive the Eucharist in both Kinds; observe four Lents, and have Service daily in their Churches. The great Devotion of the Muscowites lies in affifting at Maffes, which the Priefts begin at Midnight. They repeat the Miserere a hundred Times over, and the Priest who can fay it oftenest in a Breath, is looked upon as the best Man among them. Before the Time of Peter I. it was very extraordinary to meet with one among the Clergy, who knew any Language but his own; the Russians never regarding from whence they took their Priests, which they did sometimes from the most mechanical Trades. Such Enemies were they to Learning, that a Prefs with Letters being fent once from Poland to Muscow, a Printing-House was erected by the Approbation of one of the former Czars: But the Building was fet fire to in the Night, and burnt to the Ground, by the Procurement, as it was generally fuppoled, of the Priefts, who looked upon all Books, but such as treated of their own History, and the Miracles their Saints, as dangerous as Witchcraft.

The Muscovites love to build Churches, and whenever a Boyar built an House, he used to raise a Chapel, and maintain in it as many Monks as he could afford. They had many large Monasteries, which had considerable Revenues belonging to them. They paid Adoration to many Saint, had a great Number of Holidays, and much of their Religion consisted in Ceremonies. Of all their Saints, St. Nicholas was in greatest Veneration among them. To him they paid Divine Respect, often crying, A Thing will happen fo or fo, if it please St. Nicholas. But the most absurd of all Miracles that ever was invented, was what they attributed to St. Anthony, who, they faid, came from Rome to Novograd, by Water on a Mill-Stone; of which Voyage they gave a circumftantial Account. One of the Miracles he wrought, as foon as landed, was to order a Company of Fishermen to cast their Nets into the Sea, which having done, they immediately drew up a great Quantity of Fish, and a large Trunk containing feveral Church Ornaments, facred Utenfils, and prieftly Vellments for celebrating the Liturgy. The People tell you farther, that he built himself a little Cell, in which he ended his Days. In this Place there now flands a Chapel, in which they fay he was buried, and that his Body remains as uncorrupted and entire as at the Instant of his Death. Over the Door of the Cell the Monks shew a Mill-Stone, which they make the ignorant People believe is the very fame, that the Saint failed upon from Rome. Pictures and Images of their Saints, they used to have in great Abundance in their Houses; and were so superstitious, that if any one had to do with a Woman, they would cover the Images, that they might not be Witnesses of their Actions.

4 crying

Easter is a Festival of great Joy to the Muscovites, as it puts an End to their longest and severest Lent. On Easter Sunday, and for a Fortnight after, they present Eggs to one another, which are coloured, some red, some blue, some green, and others finely painted, and fold for two or three Rixdollars a piece. When two Friends meet in the Easter-Hollidays, they prefent each other with these, and, joining Hands in a solemn Manner, one fays, Christ is rifen; and the other answers, Year he is truly risen. Some of their Eggs have the same Words written on them, which, when offered, are always accepted. But the most pompous of all their Ceremonies was that of Pabn-Sunday. A hundred Men were then ordered to clean the Streets, before the Procession began. The Czar himself marched on Foot, richly diessed in Cloth of Gold, the Train of his Robe borne up by Princes, and all the Court waiting on him, in their respective Functions. In this Order they proceeded to the Church.

Church, called Jerusalem, performing certain Ceremonies by the Way. He used to stay in the Church an Hour, and then returned to his Palace, holding on his Arm the Bridle of the Patriarch's Horfe, carparifoned with white Linnen, on which the Prelate rid afide, like a Woman, carrying a Cross in his Hand, and giving his Benediction to the People. The Reins of his Bridle were 3 Ells long, supported by three Gentlemen marching behind the Emperor; and the Head of the Horse was held by a Boyar. Instead of a Mitre, the Patriarch wore a flat Cap on his Head, adorned with Diamonds and Golden Loops, edged round with Ermine. A Band of young Men carried feveral Pieces of Stuff before him. of various Colours. The Metropolites, the Protopopes, and the Popes, had all of them Chasubles on. Of these and other Priests above 500 marched in the Procession, every one carrying fomething in his Hand. Part of them had great Croffes richly adorned, and fo heavy, that some were forced to be carried by four Priests. Then came those who carried the Gospels, which were vaftly magnificent; for a fingle Leaf has cost 6 or 7000 Pounds. The Gentlemen and Lawyers had Boughs of W.llow. intend of Branches of Palm, in their Hands. The Czar's Guards, and the People, profrated themselves flat on the Ground, and a triumphal Arch was borne along with a Tree on it, from which feveral Boys in the Machine endeavoured to reach Apples that were hanging on it. When the Ceremony was over, the Patriarch fometimes fent the Czar a Purse with 100 Roubles init; at other Times the Czar went home to Dinner with him. There is a Niche in the Jerusalem Church, where the Patriarch used to stand to give his Benediction to the People; after which he repeated these Words: Go, and eat nothing thefe three Days.

The patriarchal Dignity was introduced in Ruffia by mere Chance, by one Hieronimo, who was deposed by the Clergy from the patriarchal See of Conflantinople, which he had very unworthily filled for fome Years. He was one of those wandering Greek Prelates, who pretended to have been unjustly persecuted by the Turks. To revenge himself on his own Clergy, and fill his Purse, he proposed to the Czar Theodore Ivanowitz, among other Projects, to make Muscory, which had formerly been fubject to Constantinople, the patriarchal See of all the Greek Church, and refign his Dignity to whomever his Majesty should cause to be elected. He brought that Prince the more easily into this Design, since by it he would fave a great deal of Money: Upon which he affembled his Council, and the principal Members of the Russian Church, who all applauded the Proposal; and the 15th of January, 1588, was appointed for the Ceremony. Hieronimo went in great Pomp, with the Russian Clergy, to the Metropolitan Church of Our Lady, where he made an Oration, and delivered his patriarchal Staff and Tiara to the Metropolitan Jacob, who was immediately installed with great Solemnity. He afterwards drew up an Instrument of Refignation, and received, before he left Moscow, which was foon after, a prodigious Number of valuable Prefents from the Czar, the Nobility, the new Patriarch, and the Clergy.

[&]quot; De la Morraye, Vol. III. p. 140, 141. D 5

Upon the Death of the last Patriarch, soon after the Czar returned from his Travels, his Majesty resolved to have no other elected; but to make himself sole Head of the Church. However, he appointed the Metropolitan of Resan, a Pole by Birth, and the most learned among the Clergy, to take upon him the Administration of Ecclefiastical Affairs; of which, from Time to Time, he was to make a Representation to the Czar himself, and receive his Directions therein. The Clergy were not a little diffurbed at this great Alteration; and one Bishop having spoke too freely of it, was immediately ordered to be degraded. None of the other Bishops, however, would readily comply in executing this Order. but offered Remonstrances to his Majesty, to shew, that it was a Thing unknown for a Person of that high Rank and Dignity to be degraded; and alledged, that they, being all but Bishops and of equal Rank, had no Power to do it. But they were willing to give up their Brother for the Interest of the Church; for they proposed, that if his Majesty would allow them to elect another Patriarch, they would proceed upon the Degradation

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 59

dation of the Bishop who had offended him. Peters who would not suffer any of his Subjects to expostulate with him, refenting this mean Evasion, obliged the aforesaid Metropolitan of Resur to take away the Mitre of the degraded Prelate.

As to their Marriages; the Day appointed being come, the Bride used to put on her Head a Sort of Hood, made of fine Linnen, Lawn, or Knit-work, that veiled her to the Middle, and fo, with her Friends, and the Bridegroom with his, went to Church on Horseback, though the Church was never fo near. They married with a Ring, and the Words of the Ceremony agreed much with ours. The Ring put on, and the Contract pronounced, the Bride's Hand was delivered into the Hand of the Bridegroom, who stood on one Side of the Altar or Table, and the Bride on the other. The Bride then came about with the Bridegroom to the End of the Table, and falling down at his Feet, knocked her Head upon his Shoe, in token of Subjection; and the Bridegroom used to cast the Skirt of his Gown over her, fignifying his Duty to protect and cherish her. After this the Bride's Father and Friends bowed to the Bridegroom, and his Relations to the Bride, in token of Love between the two Kindreds. A Loaf of Bread was then broken, and the two Families eat it amongst them, to teftify their true and fincere Meaning to become of one Family.

When they made love, the Man fent Presents to the Woman, which if she accepted, the Match was agreed on; but if they were returned, it was a Sign he was disliked; and among other Presents there was sometimes a Whip, to let the Woman know what she was to expect if she proved disobedient. They used Divorce among them, and it was often practised on slender Pretences; for a Man might go into a Monastery and shave himself, in a pretended Fit of Devotion, and by such Means free himself from his Wife, and leave her to shift for herself; which was frequently occasioned by the ill Behaviour of the Women, chiefly among the common Sort: For Women of Quality always were very obedient to their Hufbands.

The Burial of their Dead was performed with much Ceremony. They used to put new Shoes on them, and give them a Letter in their Hands, directed to St. Nicholas, intimating, that the Deceased was a Ruls, dying in the true Faith. When the Ground was frozen, they laid them up in their Dead-Houses; and when the Ground became fit to be dug, they buried them in their · Clothes, caufing Prayers to be faid over them. Befides the Relations, there were other Women Mourners hired on that Occasion to make a great Howling and Noise. It was likewise the Custom for the Relations of the Deceased to visit their Graves, on particular Days in the Year, there to cry and howl for some Hours, and then leave Branches of Trees, Flowers, Bread, Meat, Brandy, Mead, Beer, and other Liquors, which they imagined the Dead had occasion for; but which were constantly taken by the Priests, as soon as they were gone.

The Muscovites had a great Veneration for Holy Water; and once a Year their Rivers were hallowed, with much Ceremony, by the Bishops. There was great struggling then among the People for the Water: Some would leap into it, though in the most rigorous Season of the Year; Women would dip their tender Infants all over; and oftentimes it was given to the Sick, in order to recover them by its wonderful Efficacy. They had likewise a Custom of sending Prayers in a Cap to Persons at a Distance. And many would result to work on a Friday, under a Pretence that the Panitza was angry, and would punish those with Missortunes, who did not observe this Feast in Honour of her.

In the Neighbourhood of several Monasteries, the Monks used to erect Oratories in the Highways, with I-mages in them, before which Passengers used to bow down, while the Brothers held forth a Box to receive their pious Contributions. Many of the Russians thought it a great Crime to eat a Pigeon, because the Holy Ghost is painted in that Shape. They had a Tradition of the Monastery of Pekersky in Kiow, that whoever was "uried therein, should be saved, although he died in his is. These, and many other superstitious Abuses, the Czar took care to abolish when he settled the National Synod, as we shall see hereafter.

The large Dominions of Ruffia were formerly divided into four Parts, called Chetfirds, or Tetrarchies, every one containing divers Shires, and was annexed to the feveral Offices from whence they derived their Names. 1. The Pofolky Chetfird, or Jurisdiction of the Office of Embaffies, and foreign Affirs. 2. The Roferadn Chetfird, belonging to the Roserade or High-Constable. 3. The Pomestenoy Chetford, appertaining to that Office where was kept a Register of the Lands given by the Prince to his Boyars, Gentlemen, and others. 4. The Caffansky Desweerts, appropriated to the Office which had the Jurisdiction of the Kingdoms of Aftracan and Casan, with the Cities and Towns lying on the Wolga. Very few Places were exempted from the Jurisdiction of these Offices, except the Czar's Inheritance or Vachin, which belonged to the House of Beala, including 36 Towns, with their Bounds and Territories, and some other particular Royalties. These great Officers resided commonly at Court, and carried their Offices with them wherever they went. They were generally Favourites of the Czar, and acted as fovereign Princes under him, in all Provinces they were to govern. A Bench of Diacks, or Secretaries, fat as Judges in every one of these Courts pt Moscoru; who were to hear and determine Matters relating to the Treasury, as well as all civil and military Affairs: and to report their Proceedings to the principal Lords under whose Power they acted, from whom there was formerly no Appeal. These Lords had also the fole Power to fend Governors to each Province, and every Governor had a Diack, or petty Chancellor, and an Office of Justice called a Precause, erected under him, where they fat as Commissaries for the Czar's Revenues, and as Judges to determine all Caufes, without either Jury or Counsel for them. Only in Cases of Life, they were obliged to make a Representation by Letter to the Lord of the Province in Mafcow; but that was done in fuch a Manner, that the Bufiness always went as they would have it. The Commissions to these Governors were usually granted for 3 Years. They had no Salary; but when they were put into their Governments, a Present was made them of about 3 or 4000 Reubles, according to the Ability of the People where they were fent: Yet would these Governors commonly make themselves rich in the aforesaid 3 Years. It was remarkable all over Ruffia, among the common People, that the first Step they took in any Trial was to bribe the Judge, and that Party which bribed the highest, carried the Caufe. And befides this grand Article of Bribery, the Gevernors had other Opportunities of enriching themselves; as the Power of affesting the Taxes, and appointing Collectors under them; and to return the Sums into the grand Precause at Moscow, where what account they thought fit was made out of the Money collected.

The Czar found that a more faithful Account might be made of his Revenues, and that the Oppressions of the Governors ought to have a Stop put to them. He therefore called a grand Council of all his Boyars, and proposed that there should be one general Office erected at Moscow, called the Rate-bouse, after the Model he had feen in Holland, for the better collecting and managing his Revenues; and that a certain Number of reputable Men should be chosen, and be called Burgo-Masters, to fit daily, to appoint Officers and Clerks, and to account for his Revenues. The Land-Tax and Poll-Tax only were left to be raifed by the Governors, or Waivodes. as before. These Matters, though so useful, were not at all pleasing to the Council. The Boyars did not like to have so considerable a Branch of their Power lopp'd off: They remonstrated to his Majesty, that, as the Honour and Trust of levying his Revenues had always been lodged in the Care of the Nobility, it would be looked upon as a publick Dishonour to them to have it taken away. and put into the Hands of Boors and Slaves. They therefore proposed several other Schemes to give him Satisfaction, and begg'd at least that some Lords or Gentlemen of the best Families might be commissioned in the general Office at Moscow: But finding it in vain to contend, and that fome of their Heads might pay for this Shew of Disobedience, they acquiesced, and the Defign was put in Execution, which was purfued for fome Years to great Advantage, till some of his Favourites relapled relapted into oppressive Measures. His Majesty, about the same Time, gave Orders to the Precause belonging to the Monasteries, that Money should be levied on these throughout all Russia, they having a great Part of the best Lands and Villages belonging to them. He likewise ordered, that no Man under the Age of 50, should, for the Future, be admitted into any Monastery; wisely observing, that so many young People being shat up in Cloisters, greatly prevented the Increase of his Subjects.

63

In the Year 1700, a Grand Jubilee was celebrated at Moscow, which, by the Czar's Order, began on the 1st of January, and continued for a Week, with firing of Guus and ringing of Bells; Colours flying all Day, and Illuminations in the Streets and Houses at Night. The Czar ordered that no Person, under a severe Penalty. should thenceforth date any Writings according to the old Ruffian Way; but begin the Year on the 1st of Jawhich was before begun on the 1st of September. The Czar would fometimes take a Map in his Hand, and shew the Boyars about him, that Muscowy was but a Part of the World, and that the Winter with them was Summer on the other Side of the Line, in order to ridicule their abfurd Opinion of the Creation's being in Autums. But such was the Ignorance of these People, that not many Years before they were going to commit the Secretary of a Persian Ambassador to the Flames, as a Sorcerer, for his having foretold an Eclipse of the Sun.

There had been no Schools to teach even Arithmetick before-the Reign of Peter. The Russians reckoned by the Help of Beads strung in Wires, which they placed as Units, Tens, Hundreds, and Thousands, and by tossing them backwards and forwards, could multiply and divide, after a tedious Way, liable to gross Mistakes; yet this was used in all their publick Offices. But about this Time the Czar erected a large School, in which a great Number of Boys were not only taught Arithmetick, but had a Subsistence in Money. Some of the most ingenious among them were taught Mathematicks by Mr. Ferg barson, and the two young Persons out of Christ's Hospital; and of these about 100, who had learned Navigation, were fent to England, Holland, and Italy, to qualify themselves for the Service of the Czar's Fleet. He also employed Mr. Fergharson to teach Astronomy, allowing him all Kinds of Mathematical Instruments and Books, and ordered him to calculate all the visible Eclipses, and how they would appear in his Country.

One Method which the Czar took, to keep Arts and Sciences among his People, was certainly very cruel; and that was to confine the Professors of them in his Country, by denying them Paffports, and by keeping them out of great Part of their Stipends which were agreed to be given them. Captain Perry, who had fuffered thus, fet forth his Cafe at large in a Memorial. which he delivered to the Lord Apraxin, when he had been about 12 Years in the Country. He complained of being long kept, not only out of the Rewards that were promifed him upon the performing fuch and fuch Contracts, but even the 300 1. Sterling per Annum Salary, which he had agreed for; that when it was paid, very unreasonable Deductions had been made; and that he had been hindered by the Czar's Ministers from proceeding in his Works. Probably their fuperstitious Aversion to altering the Course of Rivers, which has been already mentioned, (Captain Perry being chiefly employed in Undertakings of that Nature) might contribute to the latter Part of this Complaint. But however that might be. Captain Perry was at last obliged to come away without his Money, by putting himself under the Protection of Mr. Whitworth the English Ambassador. This Rigour would be without Excuse, unless we consider that the Czar practifed it for the Improvement of his Country, which he had more at Heart than any other Confideration.

The Case of Mr. Fergharson was likewise very hard. An Agreement was made with him, that he should have his Charges defrayed to Moscow, and a handsome Allowance for his Subsistence when there, until he had learned the Language of the Country: And that then, as often as ever he should instruct any Scholar, particularly in the Art of Navigation, he should have the Reward of 100 Raubles, in ready Money, given him:

300

but though he had, when Captain Perry came away, made perfect and discharged above 70 Scholars, yet he had not received one Penny of the said Money. The two Mathematicians taken from Christ's Hospital, to assist Mr. Fergharson, were also very unfortunate. One of them was attacked by a Company of Rogues, as he rode out from the School, and murdered in the Streets. Mr. Fergharson, another Time, very narrowly escaped the same Fate: And Mr. Guin, the other Assistant, had not above half the Allowance given him per Annum, that was allowed to Mr. Fergharson for his his bare Subsistence.

If we may give credit to the Account given by one, who stiles himself an Italian * Officer of Distinction, this Sort of Cruelty is, in some Me sure, still exercised in Raska: But we have a very late Instance to contradict what this Italian says; that is, the Leave given, by Her present Imperial Majesty of Russia, to Mr. Noy, one of the Ship-builders who went over in King Wil-Earl's Reign, to return to his Native Country, where he arrived in the Year 1737, and is settled at Portsmath, with a very handsome Pension, given to him for Life by that generous Princess.

CHAP. IV.

Siege and Battle of Narva. The Muscovites shaved, by the Czar's Order. Regulations in the Dress, and several Customs of the Muscovites. Interview between the Czar and King Augustus. Battle of Clissaw. Rumour of the King of Sweden's Death, of Service to Augustus.

IT was on the first of October, 1700, that the Czar sat down before Narva, with an Army of 100,000 Men, in hopes, by taking this Town, to open a Passage to the Baltick. Peter, who would make nothing in these cold Climates of riding Post 100 Leagues in the midst of Winter, to fee a Mine or a Canal, was willing his Troops should forget all Distinctions of Seasons, as he feemed to do himself. In this Army, commanded by the Duke de Croy, a German, and in which his Majesty himself acted as a common Lieutenant, there were only 30,000 Men, who were the Soldatee, formed out of the old Strelitzes and Germans, that were worth any thing: The rest were a rude Multitude drawn from the Foreits and Wilds, covered with Skins, and armed with Clubs and Arrows; but sew of whom understood the Use of Fire Arms, or had ever seen a Battle, or regular Siege.

^{*} Letters from Muscovy, printed in 1735.

The King of Sweden was the more enraged at this Procedure, as there were still 3 Muscovite Ambassadors at Stockholm, treating of Peace. This young Hero, who had already reduced the King of Denmark to fue for Peace, croffed the Sea with 200 Transports, and landed at Pernaw in the Gulf of Riga. The King of Poland, the Czar's Ally, was at that Time belieging Riga; but as foon as he heard of Charles's landing, he abandoned the Place, and made a Merit of it to the States-General, who had defired him, by their Ambaffadors, to spare a Place where the Dutch had considerable Effects. Riga being now opened, the King of Sweden marched directly to Narva, with about 4000 Horse, and the like Number of Foot. The Czar was gone in Person to hasten the March of 40,000 Recruits from Pleskow, defigning to have hem'd the King of Sweden in, between these and his great Army. He had ordered 30,000 Men from before Narva to be posted at a League distant from the Town, in the Rout of the King of Sweden; 20,000 more were placed farther off upon the same Rout, and 5000 more made up an advanced Guard, through all which Troops Charles was to force his Way before he could arrive at the fortified Camp. This King continued his March, through Ways that were thought impaffable, till he found himfelf in Sight of the Enemy's first Posts. He did not give them Time to know the Number of his Men, but attacked their Posts one after another. They could not imagine but the whole Swedish Army was coming upon them, fo the advanced Guard fled immediately upon his Approach. The next 20,000 fled likewife, in Confusion, BUONE among the 30,000, who retired in the greatest Consternation to the main Body of the Army. Charles lost no Time, but with his Men, fatigued as they were, appeared before the whole Camp of the Muscovites. The Duke de Croy had made the best Dispositions that were possible, posting the Infantry in the Intrenchments, with a fecond Line to strengthen them, and the Cavalry to support them behind. He had scarce done this, before the King attack'd them with 8 Battalions, having General Rebinder, an Officer of great Experience and Valour, at their Head.

This was on the 30th of November, 1700. As foon as the Swedish Cannon had made a Breach in the Intrenchments, they advanced with their Bayonets at the End of their Fusees, affisted by a violent Snow which drove full in the Faces of the Muscovites, who endured Slaughter for half an Hour without quitting their Posts. Charles himself attacked the Czar's Quarters, which lay on the right Side of the Camp, where he hoped to have encountered him in Person, not knowing that he was gone to Pleskow. Upon the first Discharge of the Muscovite Shot, the King received a Ball in his left Shoulder, which grazed flightly upon the Flesh; but his Activity prevented his feeling that he was wounded. His Horse was immediately after shot under him : He mounted a fecond, which had his Head taken off: but in less than three Hours, he carried the Intrenchments on all Sides. The Muscowites, not animated, as the Savedes were, by the Presence of their Prince, gave way in great Confusion : The King, with the left Wing, purfued near 50,000 of them as far as the River Narva, where the Bridge breaking under them, the River was immediately covered with the Dead. The Horse made off in tolerable good Order towards Pleskow, and, meeting the Czar fome Leagues on this Side the City, gave him an Account of the Defeat of his Army. Above 20,000 Muscovites were flain, and between 2 and 3000 of the Swedes, among whom were the Generals Rebinder and Rubbingben. The rest of the Russians, in Despair, with their Generals de Croy, Dolhoruky, Gollowin, and Federozvitz, furrendered themselves to the young Conqueror, and laid their Arms at his Feet. The Number, of Prisoners was so very great, that it was thought proper to keep only the chief Officers, and difmifs the rest, who were entirely difarmed, and having their Breeches flit, that they were forced to hold them with both Hands, they were drove along like a Flock of Sheep, to the Diftance of a League from Narva.

This is one of the most extraordinary Actions that can be met with in History; and the King of Saveden, this Year, tho' but 18 Years of Age, led an Army himfelf against 3 confederated Monarchs, and not only proved fuccessful in all his Attempts, but gave wonderful Proofs of his personal Courage and Conduct. The Czar. thinking it would be to little Purpole, with his 40,000 undisciplined Men, to engage a young Victor just flush'd with the Conquest of 100,000, retired to the Place from whence he came, and from thence went back to Moscow, which was terribly alarmed at the News of this Battle. But Peter was so far from being dispirited at it, that he often would fay, I expected to be beaten by the Swedes, and may again; but they, in Time, will teach us to beat them.

The Muscovite Populace, imagining that their being beaten, when they had fuch Odds on their Side, was owing to Witchcraft, put up a Prayer to St. Nicholas, to protect them against the horrid Crew of Sorcerers, that were leagued against them. Mean while the Czar, having loft half his Army, and all his Artillery, applied himfelf with great Diligence to repair thefe Loffes, by raifing Recruits, bringing more foreign Officers into his Service, and feeing his Regiments exercifed and provided with all Things necessary. For want of Metal for his Artillery, he ordered the great Bells in feveral Churches to be taken down, and cast into Cannon: But while he was making these Preparations, he wrote an Answer to a Letter which he had received from the King of Great-Britain, and to another from the States of Holland, to diffuade him from entering upon a War with Sweden at all.

His Britannic Majesty, in his Letter, had reminded the Czar of the Care he had taken of his Interests at the ty of Carbwitz, in order to give his pacific Propohe greater Force. The Czar very obligingly acknowledged knowledged his Friendship, and professed his own Inclinations for coming to a Peace. And in answer to the Butch, who had offer'd themselves for Mediators between him and the King of Sweden in the present Quarrel (the chief Subject of which was the Affront the Czar had received in Livonia, when he set out on his Travels) he concludes with the following Passage: "According to our antient Amity, We cannot refuse your High Mightinesses's Demand, and We wish, that, by your Mediation, a happy Peace may be re-established with the Crown of Sweden, to which Effect We shall with Impatience expect your Ambassadors."

Notwithstanding the Impatience with which he expected these Ambassadors of Peace, he lost no Time in making Provisions for the War; and while these were getting ready, he continued with great Vigilance the Reformation of his People and Government.

The Ruffians had a great Veneration for long Beards. which they were hanging on their Bosoms comb'd out with great Pride, and kept very smooth. The Hair on their upper Lips grew fo long, that it would dip in the Cup whenever they drank; fo that they were often obliged to wipe them. They valued their Beards the more, because in that they differed from Strangers, whom they generally hated. But the Czar laid a Tax of 100 Roubles per Annum, on all Gentlemen who wore Beards, except the Priefts. The common People were to pay a Copeck at the Gate of every Town they entered, and Perions were there placed to collect it. Such was their Regard however, for what they foolishly thought an Ornament to their Faces, that when the Czar found he could not overcome their Prejudice without using Force, they would offer large Bribes to those who came to execute his Orders. It must have been a diverting Scene to behold the Executioners scampering after these venerable Grey-Beards in the Streets, who fled from them as from fo many Hangmen. His Majesty would order Persons to be shaved at his own Table; and sometimes so roughly, that fome of the Skin of the most Obstinate was taken away with the Beard. The Fear of being thus handled, made abundance comply, many of whom faid their Beards up carefully to be buried with them, that they might be able to give St. Niebolas an Account of them in the other World. This shaving their Beards was looked upon in the Czar as a great Breach of Religion. Libels were wrote against him on this Account, and dropp'd about the Streets of Moscow, charging him with Tyranny and Atheism.

His Majesty resolved next to alter the Fashion of his People's Drefs, which he thought troublefome to the Men, and ridiculous in the Women. An Order was published, to prohibit all Russians to appear out of their Houses, but in a Coat of the Polish Fathion, which was much the fame with the French and English. The Servants of Strangers were the first on whom this Order was executed, who, upon Disobedience, were made to pay a Fine, or fent to Prison: But this not affecting the common People, they took no Notice of it, till feverer Means were used with them. Their former Habit was a long Vest, reaching down almost to their Feet, and plaited on the Hips like a Woman's Petticoat. His Majesty obliged all his Boyars, and whoever should come to Court, to provide themselves with English Dreffes, and fuch as could afford it were to trim them with Gold or Silver. He commanded a Pattern of the English Coat to be hung up at the Gates of Moscow, and that every Body should conform to it in making their Clothes; and if any one should prefume to disobey his Orders, except the Peasants who brought Provisions to the Markets, they should be obliged to pay two Grevens, (about twenty Pence English) or kneel down at the Gates, and have all that Part of their Clothes cut off, which then lay on the Ground.

The Women, and especially the Court Ladies, were ordered to reform their Dress likewise according to the English Fashion. They had some Things in the antient Habits very odd, particularly Shift Sleeves 4 or 5 Ells in Length, which, when they saluted a Stranger, they used to sling out almost cross a Room, and when the Stranger had taken the End up and kissed it, they used to gather it again about their Arms. Another Alteration which the Czar made in Favour of the Women, the more easily reconciled them to that of their Dress. It had been the Custom, at all Entertainments in Russia, for the Women not to be admitted into the Conversation of the Men. In all the Houses of Gentlemen of Fashion. there was a particular Entrance made for the Women. and they were always kept in separate Apartments: Only when the Master of the Family had a Mind to do Honour to an extraordinary Guest, he would bring his Wife by a back Way from her Apartment, attended by her Maids. She was then to pay the Compliment of her Shift Sleeve, and present the Company with a Bumper of Brandy round; and afterwards to retire by the fame Way she came, and to be seen no more. But the Czar, to flew his Gallantry, ordered that from henceforth, at all Weddings and publick Entertainments, the Women as well as the Men should be invited, and entertained in the same Room with the Men; but they were to appear in English Dreffes. He ordered, that the Evenings at these Entertainments, should conclude with Musick and Dancing. There was no Wedding of any Distinction, especially among the Foreigners, but the Czar would honour it with his Presence, usually making a Present to the Bride fuitable to the extraordinary Expence.

Wo-

It had been the Custom in Russia for Matches to be made up by the Parents of each Side, without the Confent of the young People, or their hardly feeing one another. This unacceptable Way of joining young People together, was in a great Measure the Occasion of that Discord which was shewn to one another afterwards; it being a common Thing for the Men to beat their Wives in fo barbarous a Manner, that they often died of the Blows; and none of them suffered for the Murder, it being interpreted in the Law there, as done only for Correction. The Wives, on the other Hand, being thus many Times made desperate, would murder their Husbands, in revenge for their ill Usage; But the Sentence on fuch Occasions was, that the Woman should be baried alive, flanding upright, with the Earth filled about her, and only her Head above Ground, with a Watch fet over her, to fee that no one relieved her, but that the flould be flarved to Death. It was a very common Sight in Rullia to fee Women thus executed, who have been 7 or 8 Days in dying. These sad Spectacles made the Czar, in Pity to his People, do all that was polfible to remove the Occasion of. He ordered, that no young Couple should marry, for the future, without their Consent; and that all Persons should be admitted, at least 6 Weeks before Marriage, to visit and see one another. This new Order was so very agreeable, especially to the younger Sort, that they began to conceive much better of Foreigners, from whom the Czar learned these Customs.

His Majesty took notice, in answer to those who disliked these Alterations, that the Customs of the Country had already been much improved in the Course of Time, and that there was no more ill in doing it at once, than in the Course of 500 Years. As a Proof of this, in the Year 1701, when one of his Jesters was to be married to a very pretty Woman, he ordered all that were in his Favour, with feveral Foreigners, to be invited to the Wedding; and that every Person should provide themselves with the same Habit that was worn in Russia about 200 Years before, and the whole Ceremony be performed after the Manner of that Time. The Boyars had a Cap on their Heads at least a Foot higher than was then the Fashion, and were inan aukward gaudy drefs, not easy to describe. Some of them. of the first Rank, had for the Reins of their Bridles a Silver Chain, the Links of which were an Inch and a half or two Inches broad, made of thin Silver beat out flat; and the Breast-Plate and Crupper were dress'd with little fourre Pieces of the same thin Silver, which fruck against each other as they rode, and made a Kind of Jingling like Bells. Among these was his Majesty in the same Habit, one of the old Boyars being appointed to represent him for the Day, in a mock Drefs. Perfons of a meaner Rank, who could not have their Horses Furniture adorned with Silver, used Tin. The Women, who were invited to this Wedding, were dreffed also after the old Rushan Fashion: Their Shift-Sleeves were at least 12 Yards long, contracted into a Ruff, as much as would lie between their Shoulders and their Wrifts, with their upper Vestment only covering their Bodies, and the Heels of their Shoes or Slippers near five Inches high. They rode in Machines fet only upon Axletrees and Wheels, without any Swing to make Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

them eafy, and there were fhort Ladders ty'd on the Side of each Waggon, like those of the present Tartars, to get up. The Waggons were hooped over at one End, where the Women sat covered with red Cloth.

There were feveral Tables spread in a large Hall, according to the Degrees of the Gueffs, and at the upper End there was one Table placed upon a Throne about 3 Feet higher than the rest, at which fat the mock Czar with a mock Patriarch, to whom the Company advanced by gradual Steps, and bowed their Heads to the Ground at feveral proper Distances as they advanced, and then being called by their Names, every one kifs'd, first the mock Czar's Hand, and then the mock Patriarch's; upon which a Dram of Brandy was prefented to each Man, both by the Czar and the Patriarch. This last Name, after he had abolished the Office, he always gave to a Buffoon, who, inflead of the patriarchal Crofs, was obliged to wear the Figure of a Gibbet on his Breatt. When the Company had received their Cups of Brandy, they retired backward from the Throne to about 20 Feet distance, and all the Way made their Bows as they went back: And a splendid Entertainment was prepared for them after the old-fashion Way.

It had been a Custom among all the great Boyars, to retain a great Number of Superfluous Servants, who, when they went abroad, walked fome bare-headed before them, and others followed in a long Train, in all Sorts of Dresses and Colours. When the Boyars rode on Horseback, or in their Coaches or Sledges, even in the utmost Severity of the Winter, it was thought the more flately to go a flow Pace, that these Attendants might keep up with them on Foot. The great Ladies were wont to have the fame numerous Retinues. But the Czar always rode fwift himfelf, with a few Servants on Horseback, clothed in an uniform Livery; and ordered his Boyars, and all other Perfons of Distinction, to do the fame. That these Orders might be the more effectual, he had a Lift taken of all the loofe Attendants that hung about the Boyars Houses, and commanded them to be fent to the Army. This went much against the Grain, and great Intercessions were made, especially for such of them as were really Gentlemen: But the Czar's Orders were to be obeyed, and a Draught was made of feveral thousand of these supernumerary Attendants.

E

In order the better to concert Measures for the enfuing Campaign, an Interview was agreed upon between the Czar and his Ally Augustus, which was held at Birsen, a small Town in Lithuania. They remained here 15 Days together, and spent a great Part of the Time in that Excels of Drinking, which is the common Vice of the Muscovites, and was one of the greatest Failings in the Czar Peter. At this Interview King Augustus promised the Czar 50,000 German Troops, which he undertook to hire of the Princes of the Empire. The Czar was to pay them, and to send a like Number of Muscovites into Poland, to be trained up in military Discipline. He was also, in two Years Time, to supply King Augustus with three Millions of Rix-Dollars.

When the King of Sweden was informed of these Defigns, he hastened into Livonia, and arrived at Riga, over against the Saxon Army, who lay encamped on the other Side the Duna, and with whom he was to dispute the Passage. He caused Boats to be made after an Invention of his own, the Sides of which were moveable, and made to cover the Troops in their Passage, and favour their Descent when they came to land. Having likewise observed that the Wind blew savourably, he fet fire to a large Heap of wet Straw, the Smoke of which spreading cross the River, prevented the Enemy from feeing his Troops.

The King of Poland being ill in Bed, Marshal Stenau, who commanded the Saxon Army with the Duke of Courland, fell upon the Saxon Army with the Duke of Courland, fell upon the Saxon Battalions with his Horse, before they were quite drawn up, and drove them into the River: But being soon rallied by the King, they advanced with such Fury against the Marshal, that they obliged him likewise to retreat. The Duke of Courland made his Troops retire very dexternously into a dry Place, slanked with a Morass and Wood, where his Artillery lay. The Saxons, by this Advantage of Ground, began to recover their Courage; but after an obstinate and bloody Battle, the King of Saxoden having 15,000 Men, and the Duke of Courland

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

but 12,000, Charles obtained a complete Victory. It was with much Difficulty that the Duke was carried off, all over Bruifes and half dead. The King of Sweden, upon this Victory, haftened to Mittaw, and took that City, the Capital of Courland: All the other Towns in that Dutchy yielding to him at Difcretion. He passed on with Expedition to Lithuania, conquering wherever he came. At Birsen, where the Czar and the King of Poland had met to contrive his Ruin, he first formed the Scheme of dethroning Augustus.

The King of Poland was compelled to hold a Diet at Warfaw, on the 22d of December, 1701, in which his Subjects taking Advantage of his Misfortunes, openly opposed him, under Pretence of the Publick Good. The chief Men of this Country, proud of their Freedom, may be faid to be Tyrants over their King, whom they chuse rather to increase than restrain their own Authority. And that Prince's Conduct had loft him many of his Friends, and greatly exasperated his Enemies. Some of the Palatinates indeed made him believe, that he might arm the Polift Nobility against the Savedes: But he foon found that he had very little Authority in the Diet, most of the Members making no Scruple to own themselves in the King of Sweden's Interest. They charged Augustus with being the Author of all the Ills that had befallen the State, and talked of fending an Embassy, in the Name of the Republick, to the King of Sweden; but before this Point was carried, the Diet broke up, by the Retreat of one of the Deputies.

Augustus, in these Straits, called together a Council of the Senate; the Members of which, tho' somewhat better Courtiers than those of the Diet, under a Pretence of reconciling his Interest with the Security of the Republick, gave his Authority a yet deeper Wound than the other had done. They concluded to send the Embassy debated upon in the Diet: But Augustus resolved to be before-hand with them in this, and chose rather to receive Laws from his Conqueror than his Subjects. He made choice of the Countes of Koningsmar, a Swedish Lady by Birth, and who had an Estate in Charles's Dominions, to be his Ambassadres. Her Wit and Beauty made the King of Poland imagine, that the young Victor would be able to deny her nothing, but be as much subdued by her Charms, as he had been himself. Having received her Instructions, she went to the Swedish Camp in Lithuania; but Charles obstinately refused to see her. Augustus afterwards sent his Chamberlain Wiczdum, with fresh Instructions; but they having neglected to demand a Passport for him, he was seized and thrown into Prison.

E 2

made

The King of Poland was now forced again to have recourse to the Senate. He offered to call in 12,000 Saxons, to put himself at the Head of the Army of the Republicle, and pay them two Quarters before-hand out of his own privy Purie. The Senate answered him. that the Republick would fend an Embaffy to the King of Sweden, to procure Peace; and as for the Saxons, his Majesty could not introduce them into Poland without difobliging the whole Nation. Gharles treated the Embasiy of the Republick with no mreo Respect than that of the King; for fuch was the implacable Temper of this young Hero, that having once taken a diflike to Augustus, he was never to be brought to hear any Terms concerning him. He answered the Senate, That they should know what he thought of their Proposal when he came to Warfaw: And fet forward the fame Day for that City, having fent before him a Manifesto, in which he declared himself the Protector of the Republick. The Senators published this Manifesto, in View of Augustus; and, upon the Approach of the King of Sweden, none remained with that Monarch, but the Ambaffadors of the Emperor and the Czar, the Pope's Nuncio, and some few Bishops and Palatines, who were attached to his Fortune. Being thus deferted by his Subjects, and driven from Warfaw, he brought 20,000 Saxons into the Country : And the King of Sweden, on his Part, prepared to give his Enemy a warm Reception. He let the Cardinal Primate into his Intentions at Warfaw, who was a fecret Enemy of Augustus: A Man full of Artifice and Referve; entirely governed by an ambitious Woman, whom the Swedes called Madam Cardinale. The Primate's Talent lay chiefly in making his Advantage of the Conjectures which fell in his Way, Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Mulcovy.

Way, without endeavouring himfelf to bring them about. He would appear unrefolved when the most determined in his Projects; going always to gain his Ends by those Ways, which seemed the most to oppose them. He tried all his Interest on the Death of John Sobieski, the Author of all his Fortunes, to place James on the Throne: but the Torrent of the People's Hatred ran fo firong against the Father, as great a Man as he was, that it bore down the Son. The Victories of Charles XII. the Protector of Prince James, the Civil War in Lithuania, and the general Difaffection of the Poles to King Augustus, now gave the Cardinal Hopes that the Time was come when he might be able to fend Augustus back into Saxony, and pave a Way for the Son of King John to ascend the Throne. This Prince, formerly the innocent Object of the Polanders Hatred, was, fince Augustus had disobliged them, become their Idol: But he durst not conceive any Hopes of fo great a Revolution. Nevertheless the Cardinal, infensibly, had laid the Foundation of it. He seemed at first to endeavour to reconcile the King and the Republick. He fent his circular Letters, dictated, in Appearance, by that Spirit of Concord and Charity, which, tho' ufual and known Snares, feldom fail to entrap. He wrote a moving Letter to the King of Saveden, befeeching him in that Name which all Christians equally adore, to give Peace to Poland and her King. Charles answered more to the Intentions of the Cardinal than to his Words. These Letters and Answers were for the Publick; but the Emissaries that continually went between the Cardinal and Count Piper, and the private Assemblies at the Cardinal's House, were the Springs by which the Diet moved.

The ill Fortune of Augustus had already made him do what the Diet would have exacted from him: The League secretly concluded between him and the Czar at Birsen, was become as useless as at first it was thought formidable. He was far from being able to send the Czar the 50,000 Men he had promised: And the Czar was under no Concern to assist a divided Kingdom, but contented himself with sending about 20,000 Men into Lithuania. While the Saxons were coming in Troops, and Augustus himself going from one Palatinate to another.

E 3

ther, to get together the Nobility that adhered to him, the King of Saveden arrived on the 5th of May, 1702, at Warfanv. The Gates were opened to him upon the first Summons. King Augustus was at that Time assembling his Forces at Cracow, and could not but be furprised to see the Cardinal Primate one of the Company. This Man, whose Heart burnt within him to finish the Work he had begun, was willing to keep up the Decency of his Character, and to dethrone his King with all the respectful Behaviour of a good Subject. He told him that the King of Saveden appeared to be difposed to a reasonable Accommodation, and humbly begged leave that he might attend him. King Augustus granted him what he could not refuse, the Liberty of doing him a Mischief. The Cardinal saw Charles for the first Time at Praag, not far from Warsaw, but without Ceremony. The King advanced fome Steps to meet him, and they had a Conference together of about a Quarter of an Hour; which Charles put an End to, by faying aloud, I will never give the Poles Peace, till they have elected another King. The Cardinal, who waited for this Declaration, immediately gave notice of it to all the Palatinates, affuring them, that he was extremely concerned at it, but laying before them the Neceffity of complying with the Conqueror.

The King of Poland now faw plainly, that he must either lofe his Crown, or preferve it by a Battle. His Saxon Troops were all arrived from the Frontiers of his Electorate, and the Nobility of the Palatinate of Crarow, where he yet remained, came in a Body to offer him their Services. On the 19th of July, 1702, the two Kings met, in a large Plain near Cliffau, between Warfaw and Cracow. Augustus had near 24,000 Men, and Charles not above half that Number. The Battle began with playing the Artillery. Upon the first Volley, which was discharged by the Saxons, the Duke of Holstein, Brother-in-law to Charles, and a Prince of great Virtue, received a Cannon Ball in the Reins. The King of Poland behaved like a Prince that was fighting for his Crown: He led his Troops up thrice to the Charge in Person. But Fortune was on Charles's Side, who obtained a complete Victory. The Camp, Colours, Ar.

Artillery, and Augustus's War Chest, were all left to him and Augustus himself fled before the Victor to Cracow, where the Citizens shut their Gates against the Conqueror. He caused them to be burst open; took the Castle by Asfault; and made them pay sufficiently for their Rashness, by laying them under a heavy Contribution.

The King of Sweden left Cracow, with a full Refolution of pursuing Augustus: But an Accident happened. which had like to have given a new Turn to Affairs. As he was marching from Cracow, his Horse falling under him, broke his Thigh, which confined him to his Bed for fix Weeks: Upon which a Rumour was fpread all over Europe, that he was trampled to Death under his Horse's Feet. This Piece of false Intelligence, for a while, gave new Spirits to the Followers of King Augustus, and threw his Enemies into Despair. He took Advantage of the Occasion, and assembled all the Orders of the Kingdom at Marienburg, and then at Lublin. There were but few of the Palatinates which did not fend their Deputies, and what with his Prefence, his Promises, and his courteous Behaviour, he regained the Affections of almost all of them. The Diet was foon undeceived concerning the Report of the King of Sweden's Death, but they had before been determined to fwear Fealty to their King; the honest Cardinal among the rest. They agreed to maintain 50,000 Men for his Service, at their own Expence, and were to give the Swedes fix Weeks Time, to declare whether they intended War or Peace.

CHAP. V.

Defeat of the Swedes in Livonia. The Czar takes Notebourg and Marienbourg. Birth and Rife of the Empress Catharine. The Czar enters Moscow in Triumph. Builds Petersbourg, Augustus King of Poland deposed. The Czar takes Narva. Builds Cronslot.
Battle of Gemaurthoss. The Czar enters Poland.
The Swedes Attempt on Petersburgh and Cronslot in vain. The Czar subdues Courland, and Lithuania.

HARLES, now recovered of his Wound, called together an Assembly at Warsaw, to oppose that of Lublin. He continued fo firm in his Resolution of dethroning Augustus, that he said, If he stay'd 50 Years, be awould not leave Poland till be bad accomplished it. His Generals, at the same Time, represented to him the Mischiefs the Muscovite Troops were doing in Livonia, Esthonia, and Ingria, where they daily engaged with his, and oftentimes with Disadvantage to the Swedes. The Velt-Marshal Czeremetoff first entered Livonia in the Month of July, 1702, with a numerous Army, and advanced as far as Erestferet. General Schlippenbach, as foon as he had Intelligence of this, detached a Party of 300 Horse, to observe their Motions; which meeting with a Body of 1000 Muscovites, attacked and drove them to the main Body of the Army: But being furprifed at their Enemies Numbers, the Savedilly Cavalry retreated in Confusion, and were pursued by the Muscovites, losing several of their Men. General Schlippenbach, upon this, rode himself to reconnoitre the Enemy, and perceiving they had a Defign to environ his small Body, he judged it convenient to cross the River Emback, which was done in View of the Enemy, over two Bridges that were immediately after broke down: But the River being then very low, and the Muscovite General making Use of Pontoons to wast over his Artillery, he foon forced the Swedes to a Battle. The Advantage was at first on the Side of the latter, Chap. 5. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 81 fome of the Musicuites having thrown themselves into the River: But the rest facing about on a sudden, put the Finland Cavalry into such Disorder, that they fell foul upon their own Infantry, and betook themselves to Flight; so that the Swedes lost their Artillery, and had their Infantry, after a stout Resistance, almost all cut to Pieces. This Action began at six in the Morning, and lasted ten Hours. The Swedish General sinding it impossible to stand his Ground, was forced to retreat to Pernau; having lost 7 Captains, 30 Lieutenants and Enfigns, 25 Subalterns, 37 Drums, and 1916 common Men. The Loss was likewise great on the Side of the Russians, but amidst their Number was hardly perceptible.

His Czarish Majesty himself, when he had made all necessary Dispositions in the frontier Places, marched at the Head of his Army, and took the Fortress of Orescheck, or * Notebourg, the Capital City of Ingermania, situate upon an Island, a little below where the Neva runs out of the Lake Ladoga. This had been taken from the Russians by Gustavus Adolphus in the Year 1614, tho strongly fortisted by Nature. The Czar asterwards gave it the Name of Slutelbourg; Skytel in German signifying a Key, and indeed it proved such to his Majesty in his Conquests over the Swedes.

About this Time the Czar published an Edict to encourage all Sorts of Artificers, Workmen, and Manusheturers, and other Persons professing Trades and Sciences, to come and settle in his Dominions; promising, That as soon as they were arrived upon the Frontiers, they should be conducted, at his Majesty's Expence, where they should deem it most convenient to settle: That they should have the free Exercise of their Religion: That they should employ themselves in whatsoever they thought most for their Advantage, without being subject to any Duties or Offices: That those who shall find themselves capable to undertake any Trade, and had not wherewithal to follow it, should be supplied with Money out of the Treasury, without any Interest. And that such as were unwilling to stay in his Dominions, should have Licences to depart. But how much these Promises were to be relied on, we have already shewn in the Cases of Captain Perry, Mr. Fergbarfon, and others.

E 5

^{*} This Town was built above 400 Years ago, by a Princels of Novegood, named Marfa.

His Czarish Majesty's Forces, under Lieutenant General Baur, next made themselves Masters of Marienburg, which was but meanly defended by a few Swedish Troops, and of itself no very strong Place. Among the Prisoners taken in this Town, was Catherine, who afterwards became Empress of Russia; of whose Birth and Rise M. see la Motraye gives a very curious Account, which I here infert from the 3d Volume of his Travels.

"The general Voice of the Country fays, it was on the Banks of the Lake Worthly, in a Village called Rungban, that the Heroine drew her first Breath, and not in the Neighbourhood of Dorpt, as those who have wrote her Life, in divers Languages, would make us believe. These Writers, to make her Life more illustrious, have fome of them given her for her Father a Lieutenant Colonel of the Family of Abendiel, others Colonel Rosen: But the common Report is, that the was a Vassal of this Colonel, who, dying when she was but 4 or 5 Years of Age, as her Mother did foon after, there was nothing left for her Subfistence; for it is rare that the Vassals of the Livonian and Russian Nobility leave any Thing to their Children. The Parish Clerk, who kept a School, took her as his own, till Doctor Gluck, Minister of Marienburg, happening to come to that Village, liked the Girl; and being willing to ease the Clerk, whose Income was very fmall, carried her home with him. Our Writers agree pretty well as to this Circumstance, which is suitable to that of a Vaffal, fuch as her Father was; but not of a Lord of the Manor, as they would make him: For is it natural to suppose, that, if she had been the Daughter of M. Rosen, or was acknowledged by him as such, he would have left her nothing in his Will when he died? or, that his Heirs and Relations, if he had married her Mother, would have taken no Manner of Care of her? Is it not better, and more agreeable to Truth, to let Catharine owe her Greatness to her own Merit, and to the Czir Peter the First? The Meaner her Birth is, the more glorious and honourable is her Elevation. M. Gluck

Chap. 5: PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 83

M. Gluck treated her almost in the same Manner that he would one of his Daughters, and his Wife, finding her endued with good and virtuous Inclinations, loved her as much. As she seemed naturally to hate Idleness, she was employed in Works fuitable to her Age, as Spinning, Sewing, &c. She did every Thing well that she undertook, and many Things in the House of her own Accord, which could only be expected from the very best Servants. She had learnt to read of the Parish-Clerk at Runghen. When the left that Place, the spoke only the Language of the Country, which is a Sclavonian Dialect : But at M. Gluck's she learnt the German Tongue to Perfection, of which she knew only a few Words before, and employed all her vacant Hours in reading. A Livonian Serjeant in the Swedish Army fell passionately in Love with her; and she liked him so well, that she agreed to have him, if he would ask the Confent of M. Gluck, without which she would do nothing. He followed her Advice, and M. Gluck, who was not very easy in his Circumstances, gave his Consent more readily than otherwife he would have done. This Serjeant was of a pretty good Family, had a fmall Estate of his own, and was in a fair Way to Preferment, being already known to be a Man of Bravery and Sobriety. It is reported as a certain Truth through all Livonia, that M. Gluck perform'd the Marriage Ceremony himfelf. The next Day the Muscovites taking the Town of Marienburg, the commanding Officer, General Baur, perceiving Catherine among the Prisoners, and observing, notwithstanding the Tears that fell from her Eyes, a certain Jane sçai quoi in her Face, that ftruck him very much; he asked her feveral Questions concerning her Condition, to which the made Answers with more Sense than is usual in Perfons of her Rank. He bade her fear nothing, for he would take care to fee that she was well used: Accordingly he that Instant ordered some of his People to conduct her to the Place where his Baggage was. There were fome Women who washed his Linnen, and did other Works agreeable to that Sex : And finding her afterwards very proper to manage his Houshold Affairs, he gave her a Sort of Authority and Inspection over these Women, and the rest of his Domesticks, by whom the was very much beloved from her Manner of using them. when the instructed them in their Duty: And the General had faid himfelf, he never was fo well ferved as when she was with him. It happened that Prince Menzikoff, who was his Patron, having feen her one Day, observed something very extraordinary in her Air and Behaviour; and for that Reason asked him, Who she was, and in what Condition she served him? The General told him what has been before related, and, at the fame Time, took care to do Justice to the Merit of Catharine. The Prince faid he was very ill ferved, and had Occasion for such a Person about him. General Baur replied, that he was too much obliged to his Highness to have it in his Power to refuse him any Thing he had a Mind to. He immediately called Catharine, and told her, That was Prince Menzikoff, who had Occasion for a Servant like herfelf; that he was able to be a better Friend to her than himself; and that he had too much Kindness for her to prevent her receiving such a Piece of Honour and good Fortune. She answered only with a profound Curtefy, which shewed, if not her Consent, that it was not then in her Power to refuse the Offer that was made her. In short, Prince Menzikoff took her with him, or she went to him, the same Day. He kept her in his Service till the Year 1703 or 1704, when the Czar faw her one Day as he was at Dinner with him, and fpoke to her. She made a yet stronger Impression on that Monarch, who would likewise have her to be his Servant.

It is very uncertain what became of her young Hufband, as well as the Character and Post he had in the Swedish Army, from the different Accounts that we have of him. One, for Example, printed at Jena, a small Town and University of Thuringen, in 1724, tells us, that he was a Cadet; that, after he was married at Marienbourg in 1702, the Muscovites attacking that Town, he gave such fignal Proofs of his Bravery, that he was made a Lieutenant Colonel, and some have thought that if every one had shewn as much Courage as he, they could never have taken it. If this be true, which Motraye says he heard nothing of in the Country, he had, besides besides the Preservation of the Town, a particular Interest which his Companion had not, the Liberty of a beloved Wife; and it is well known, what Love is capable of undertaking. But this Account fays nothing of what became of him after his Advancement, or whether he made any Attempt to recover his dear Spoufe. Some will have it, that he was only a Corporal; others, a Dragoon; and added, that the Marriage was never confummated, he being obliged the fame Day to rife from Table to go to Riga, with a Detachment that was ordered to secure that Place. Others will have the Marriage to have been confummated, and fend him eight Days after with other Dragoons, to reconnoitre the Enemy; and fay, that the next Day after his Departure the Town was invested, and taken the Day following. M. de la Motraye could be affured of nothing from the common Report of the Country, concerning the Fate of this newmarried Man, it being fo variously related. One while he was told, that he was killed in the first Attack of the Town; another, that he was in the Number of those, who not being able to hold out against the Efforts of the Enemy, retired to Riga. Those from whom he heard the last, added, that he was inconfolable for the Loss of his beloved Catharine, whom he despaired of ever seeing again; and that he faid to some of his Friends, that he would never go to that Place, where, for a few Days, he had been the happiest of Men, as he was now the most unfortunate; but would feek for Death in Poland, where his Master would give him Opportunities enough to meet with it: For the King of Sweden, despising the Muscowites after the Battle of Narva, went into Poland to find Enemies, who, in his Opinion, were more worthy his great Courage.

Perhaps the Husband of Catharine had less Hopes of feeing her again, as he had heard that the Muscovites had already sent many Families Prisoners into Russia, and sole several young Girls of the Swedish Nation, in their Markets, for Slaves to Turkey. The Swedes redeemed some of them; and M. de la Motraye himself bought a Girl of the Janizaries, who knew Catharine, and told him several Particelars relating to her, which were confirmed to him in the Country afterwards.

Altho'

Altho' the taking of Marienburg was a Misfortune to the young Husband of Catharine, yet it was to her the Epoch from whence she was to date the greatest Happiness that a Mortal could aspire to. By her Complaisance and engaging Behaviour, the made herfelf Miftress of the Heart and Affections of the Czar; she accompanied him every where, and shared with him in all the Dangers and Fatigues of the War. It has been observed, that Enjoyment, and even Marriage, which often prove the Grave of Love, ferved only to augment his: She had in fome Sort the Government of all his Passions, and even faved the Lives of a great many more Persons than M. Le Fort was able to do. She inspired him with Humanity, which, according to the Complaints of his Subjects Nature feemed to have denied him.

This Monarch, among his other excellent Qualities, was very judicious, and would willingly receive good Advice. A Scotch Officer, who had a great Share in his Favour and Confidence, one Day making his Remarks to him, with his usual Familiarity, upon his bloody Executions, and fome Exactions which to him feemed oppressive; and telling him, that he had always observed, that those Princes who used their Subjects with Humanity, by that Means made themselves Mafters of their Hearts and Purses: He answered him, that that was true in Respect to his own Nation, to Germany, and perhaps every other European Nation, but not to his: For, if he had not treated them with the Severity he did, he should long before that have lost the Russian Empire, or never have made it what it was.

One Word from the Mouth of Catharine, in Favour of a Wretch just going to be facrificed to his Anger, would difarm him: But, if he was fully refolved to fatisfy that Paffion, he would give Orders for the Execution to be done when she was absent, for fear she should plead for the Victim. She acquired the Love and Esteem of Soldiers, Sailors, and every one elfe. She would often go herfelf, before or after an Engagement, followed by some of her Servants, with Bottles of strong Liquors, and fill out feveral Glasses to give them with her own Hands,"

land 3

To proceed: On the 20th of September 1702, News was brought to Moscow, that Notebourg was taken by his Majelty's Arms; for which Te Deum was fung three Days after in the principal Church. In December fol. lowing, the Czar arrived at Nikool/ky, the House of the Governor of Siberia, but seven Wersts from the City. While he was here, every thing was got in Readiness for his making a public Entry. Most of the Foreign Merchants had Orders to provide themselves with a greater Number of Horses than usual, and with a Servant dreft in the English Fashion, to conduct the Artillery that had been taken from the Swedes. The Day he was to make his Entry, the Foreign Ministers, the English Conful and Dutch Refident, and some of the Merchants. went to pay their Compliments to him at Nikoollky. Against his Approach, triumphal Arches were erected of Wood, in the Street of Meesnits; the first near the Printing-House, which the Czar had lately ordered to be built, tho' an Attempt of that Kind had formerly been fo unfuccessful; the second near the Admiralty Office, about four hundred Paces from the other. The Streets and Fields were filled with People to fee the Procession, which was made with the utmost Magnificence. But as I shall describe one in the second Book, made on a greater Occasion, I omit the Particulars of this.

A very few Months after this Triumph, his Majesty took the Town of Nie-schantz in Ingria. Observing here, that about a German Mile lower down, the River Neva, dividing itself into several Branches, formed a Number of little Islands, this first inspired him with the Thoughts of building a City there, which should give him a Footing in the Baltick Sea: He went himself to found the River, and view the Islands. Spying feveral Swedish Ships cruifing in the Gulf of Finland, he ordered a Detachment of about 1000 Men to be posted in the Island of Retufari, where Cronflot now lies. The Swedes, endeavouring to diflodge the Ruffians, fired upon them continually from one of their Ships, which made the Russians retire, and hide themselves behind a great Quantity of Stones lying on the Shore: Upon which the Savedes, believing they were gone to the other Side of the Illand, and made off in their Veffels, ventured to land; but the Russians, issuing from their Coverts, received them fo warmly, that they were glad to retire to their Ships, having loft feveral of their Men. The Czar. after this Skirmish, kept Possession of the Island, made a Harbour there, and a Fort with a Borough, now called Cronflot. More and more pleased with the Situation of the neighbouring Country, he purfued his Refolution of building the City of Petersburg, and in the Month of May 1703, where, at that Time, were only four or five Fishermens Huts, he raised the first House, which was only a low Hall, made with Planks and Joifts, to fecure himself from the Weather, and rest in: But in Memory of this great Undertaking, it hath been preserved ever fince, being inclosed with a wooden Gallery, raised on a Wall three or four Feet high. The Place he pitched upon is inaccessible, from the Depth of the River Neva. and from the Country's being a Morass all round it. His Resolution being thus taken, and the Work begun, he issued forth Orders, pursuant to which many thousand Workmen, Russians, Tartars, Cossacks, Calmucks, and Peafants of all Sorts, were foon brought thither; and thefe made a Beginning of the new Fortress. He was obliged to break through Forrests, to open Ways, to dry up Moors, to raife Banks, before he could lay the Foundation of this new Town. The Whole was a Force put upon Nature: But the Czar aspired higher than only to the Destruction of Towns, like ordinary Heroes: There were no Difficulties that he would not furmount, no Toils but he would undergo, to raife the Grandeur of his Nation. When this Work was first undertaken, the Men had neither fufficient Provisions for fubfifting them, nor even necessary Tools; no Houses or Huts to dwell in: and yet they proceeded with fuch Expedition, that in five Months Time the Fortress was raised, though the Earth thereabouts was fo scarce that the greatest Part of the Labourers carried it in-the Skirts of their Clothes, and in Bags made of old Rags and Mats. It is computed that no less than 100,000 Men perished in this Undertaking; for, as the Country had been made desolate by War, and the usual Supplies by the Lake of Ladoga were often retarded, no Provisions could be had even for ready Joney. While the Fortrefs, the Plan of which was grawn

AL-

drawn by the Czar himfelf, was going on, the City began by degrees to be built. His Majesty obliged not only the Nobility, but Merchants and Tradefmen of all Sorts to go and live there, and to trade in fuch Commodities as they were ordered. This at first was not at all agreeable to the Nobility and Persons of Distinction, who in Moscoru had very large Buildings within the City, and Country Seats and Villages about it, where they had Fish-ponds, and Gardens with Plenty of Fruits, that were not to be expected at Petersburgh. However, as the Place was agreeable to the Designs and Humour of the Czar, he paid little regard to the Complaints of those who considered their own Luxury more than the Advantage of their Country. The Boyars brought hither great Retinues, and the Merchants and Shop keepers found their Account in this new City, where every Thing bore an excessive Price. Several Swedes, Finlanders, and Livonians, not being able to subfift in their own Towns, depopulated by the Wars, continued here. Artificers, Mechanicks, and Seamen, were invited hither to encourage Shipping, and the Affairs of the Navy. These Workmen, having worked the Time out that was appointed by his Majesty, were hired to build for the Boyars, and some of them even built Houses for themselves, and settled at Petersburgh. They were greatly encouraged to this, by every Man's being allowed to pitch upon the Spot that pleafed him best. In one Year's Time, about 30,000 Houses were erected, and now there are above double the Number. It is true, there are some but mean, which may be taken to Pieces in two or three Hours Time; but these are chiefly in the Slabodas, or Suburbs. The King of Sweden, when he was told in Poland of the Buildings the Czar was about. answered, " That he might amuse himself if he pleased. with fuch an Employment : He should foon take them from him, and, if they were worth it, he would keep them: if not, he would fet them on fire". So little did he confider the growing Power of the Prince who was to oppose him; which, without doubt, he might have much retarded, had he known how to follow his Victory at Narva. Augustus, daily driven every where before the Swedes, fent an Embaffy to the Czar, to conclude a Treaty of Alliance, offensive and defensive. This was disliked by the Senate: But he had done fo many other Things against the Inclinations of the Poles, that their Affections were quite loft, and most of them favoured the Affembly held by the Primate at Warfaw; who, after many specious Pretences, at last threw off the Mask, and on the 14th of February 1704, declared in the Name of the whole Assembly, Augustus, Elector of Saxony, uncapable of wearing the Crown of Poland: Upon which it was agreed that the Throne was vacant, and that a new Election should be made. But before this Resolution was taken, a long Letter from the Czar was read in the Assembly. It was superscribed "To the Primate and Senate," and fet forth, 'That tho' his Majesty had often heard of the wicked Defigns of many of their Nation against their lawful Sovereign, he paid no regard to it till he found the Evil more and more increasing: That he then thought it his Duty, in regard to the Dignity of Princes, the common Rights of Mankind, and his Engagements with the King of Poland, to interpole. He charges them with Perfidy in very high Terms, and vindicates his prefent Resolution. Towards the Conclusion are these Expreffions.

" However, we shall continue the necessary Preparations, that in Case the disaffected Party persist in their wicked Defigns, we may be able to exert the Power God has given us, to support and maintain his facred Majesty on a Throne he is lawfully posses'd of. As to those who shall side with the King, or shall, in due Time, return to their Duty, we shall grant them our special Fayour, and shew them as much Affection, as if they had done fomething for ourselves, and promoted our own Advantage, promising to affift them with all our Power for pacifying these Troubles. But for such who oppose the most serene King of Poland, their Sovereign, and will not defift from their pernicious Defign, we declare them our Enemies with all their Adherents, and shall punish them as fuch every where, and shall not forbear our Hostilities against them, till those Disturbers of the publick Peace, and Enemies of their Countrymen, have been feverely punished, made an Example to others, and are plucked out like a Weed of the Kingdom of Poland, and and Great Dutchy of Lithuania, and till our Neighbourhood is cleared of those wicked Men."

This Letter had no great Effect upon the Nobility, though fome of them represented, that it deserved to be maturely confidered : But prudent Confideration being inconfiftent with their Deligns, they refolved to proceed to a new Election, which would have fallen upon Prince Tames Sobieski, recommended by the King of Sweden, if a Letter fent from Prince Alexander Sobieski had not informed them, that his Brothers, James and Constantine, being hunting not far from Breflaw in Silefia, a Party of Horse, sent privately by Augustus, had, by his Orders, surprized and carried them off to Leipsick, where they were put under Confinement. Prince Alexander Sobieski and the Prince of Conti were then named; the first favoured by the King of Sweden, and the fecond by the Primate, almost alone. Alexander, pressed by Charles to accept the Crown, absolutely refused it while his elder Brother lived. This Moderation of Prince Alexander. and the few Friends that appeared for the Prince of Conti. made way for a new Candidate, Stanislaus Lescinsky, the Palatine of Pofnania, a young Lord, endowed with great Virtues and Merit; who had almost every Voice in the Republick, and was foon declared King of Poland and Grand Duke of Lithuania.

When Augustus heard of his Election, he assembled a great Council at Sendomir, and got Stanislaus declared a Rebel and Traitor to his Country: But while he was contending with his Rival by vain Declarations, the King of Sweden every where routed his Saxon Troops. The Czar, in the mean Time, grew every Day more formidable. He had trained up his Soldiers in military Discipline; had good Officers, skilful Engineers, and a ferviceable Artillery. He had made himfelf Mafter of Dorpt, and on the 21st of August 1704, took Narva by Affault, after a regular Siege. When his Soldiers were possessed of this Town, and committed numberless Outrages, the Czar himfelf ran from Place to Place to ftop their Diforders, and even killed fome of them with his own Hand, that would not liften to his Commands. His Conquests here confirmed his Footing in the Baltick Sea. For when he had reduced this Town, and Iwanogorod, he used all his Endeavours to make the Place impregnable, and to complete the Fortress of Petersburgh. Having himself founded the Waters about the Neighbouring Islands, he found that Retufari might be made a fafe Harbour for his Fleet, and a great Defence to Petersburgh, the only Passage to which was on the South Side of this Island. Senfible of the Advantage of this Situation, he made it a Port for his Fleet. and built a Town there, which he fortified with a flrong Caftle called Cronflot. This last stands on a Sand-Bank in the midft of the Sea, about a Cannon-Shot from the Island, and a Mile from the Coast of Ingria. The Foundation of it was laid in Winter, upon the Ice, with Boxes made of Timber and fill'd up with Stone, on which the Rest was afterwards built with Timber filled up with Earth. This Castle is round, with three Galleries about it above each other, and well furnished with Cannon. There are two Batteries on the Island over-against it, of 10 or 12 Guns each, and, in Case of Necessity, the Piers, of the Harbour may be mounted with 40 or 50 more.

The Savedes were not a little uneasy to see the Works of Petersburgh and Cronslot go on in this Manner. Major General Meydei, who commanded in Carelia, took upon him to interrupt them: He fent a Party thither under the Conduct of one Arnfeldt, whose Guide carrying him beyond the Fort upon the Ice, he was discovered by the Russian Soldiers. These latter kept on their Guard, but could not hinder Arnfeldt from ravaging the whole Isle of Retufari. However, the greatest Loss of the Muscovites was two Vessels of 20 or 30 Guns, that lay on the Ice, and to which they fet fire. But the greatest Danger to the Czar was from the naval Armament at Carelferoon, which feemed to threaten his new City with inevitable Ruin. This Squadron was to confift of 12 Ships of the Line of Battle, and 28 Frigates, Denmark indeed was more uneasy at it than the Czar, who depended upon the Impossibility of the Swedes palfing by Cronflot. Ankersteirn, who commanded the Swedillo Fleet, transported 6000 Recruits to Revel, and having joined the Squadron of Vice-Admiral Spar, they went in fearch of the Russian Flotilla, commanded by Vice-Admiral Vander-Kruys.

On

On the 4th of July the Russians discovered the Enemy's Fleet, confisting of 22 Men of War, that took the Road to Cronslot. On the 6th in the Afternoon, they gave the Signal, and presently Ankerstein and Spar drew up their Squadron in Batalia. Spar, by the Help of the continual Fire from the Admiral's Vessels, passed towards the Point of the Island of Retusari, attacking the Russians incessantly with Bullets and Bombs, whilst a great Number of Grenadiers, in slat Boats, attempted to land on the Island: But they were received with so much Order and Bravery, that after they had lost almost all their Soldiers, they were obliged to retreat. In this Action the Russians had but one Man killed, and three wounded.

The Czar, having put every Thing in Order, and reviewed most of his Troops, now prepared to open the Campaign of 1705. Mareschal Czeremetoff marched before, with 18 or 20,000 Men, and his Majesty followed, at the Head of his Army, into Lithuania. Nothing floot the Velt-Mareschal till he came into Courland, where, in Spite of Lieuwenhaupt, at the Head of 7 or 8000 Men, General Baur, with about 2000 Russian Horse, penetrated as far as Mittane, surprized the Town, made all that were in it Prisoners, and took a great Booty. Knoring's Regiment, in garrifon here, were most of them put to the Sword, or taken Prisoners; and the Colonel himself escaped by a private Gate, after having more than once run the Rifque of his Life. The Russians, having given this Blow, retired to their Camp at Nepten.

The Defign of the Velt-Mareschal was not so much to conquer Courland, as to harrass the Enemy, and drive a way the Troops, commanded by Leuwenhaupt, that he might sit down quietly before Riga. Lieuwenhaupt penetrated into his Design, and as soon as he heard of this March, gave Notice of it to the Governor of Riga, who re-insorced him with 1000 Men. He also sent for the Regiments of Horn and Schreitenfelt, and put himself in a Posture to receive the Russians. He was busy in giving his Orders, when a Groom escaped from Mittary, inscrinced him of the Musicovites having seized on that Place. He instantly went a full Gallop with his Cavalry, towards that Capital, where he found nothing but the melancholy Footsteps of the Enemy's Passage. Having reposed here a while, he was rejoined by his Insantry, and resolving to seek a Post, which would not be easy to force, he chose a very narrow Spot, where his small Number of Men might make head, without being obliged to extend themselves. Here, rightly judging that the Russians would come in Quest of him, he made all the necessary Dispositions.

Czeremetoff had 14,000 Horse and Dragoons, 4000 Foot, and 2000 Coffacks, with which he went to attack the Swedes. He found them drawn up in two Lines, their right Wing covered by a Morass, and the left by a River: The Cannon was in two Lines, between the Wings and the Centre; and the Baggage in the Rear. As foon as Lieuwenhaupt had Notice that the Russians came towards him, he order'd three Colonels, with four Squadrons, to advance about 1000 Paces, and observe the Motions of the Russians, retiring as soon as they faw the Army approach. But a Wood on the left of the Savedes, over the River, favouring the Motion of the Muscovites, this Detachment was no fooner perceived by them, but it was furrounded by the Russians, who had passed the River. This Cavalry, tho' at first attacked with much Fury, supported the Shock, and at length retreated to the main Body of their Army: And Leuwenhaupt, perceiving the Russians Front very much extended, refolved not to give them Time for new forming themselves; in which his Commands were so readily executed, that both Armies foon came to an Engagement. The Russians first fell on the left Wing of the Swedes; and the Velt-Mareschal, dismounting the Foot which were brought behind the Horsemen, they attacked the Savediff Cavalry with Fire and Sword. But they were received with fo much Vigour, that there was a great Slaughter on both Sides. At length fome Russian Squadrons having croffed the River to attack the Enemy in Flank, the Swedish Cavalry were pushed so warmly that they fell back, and put the whole Order of Battle into Confusion. The left Wing began to lose Ground, and Victory feemed to declare for the Russians, when the Infantry of the fecond Line took the Place of this

Chap. 5. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 95

Wing, and gave it Time to rally. Then the Russian Foot found themselves encompassed by the two Lines. and were cut to pieces, the Swedes facing about on all Sides. In this Action the Ruffians loft 5 or 6000 Men, and the Velt-Mareichal was wounded: But the Victory was dearly purchased by the Swedes, who lost several brave Commanders, and near 2000 Men. And the Swedilb General, in giving an Account of this Battle, faid, the Russians all along behaved like brave Soldiers.

The Czar was now at Vilna, with his Army, which he reviewed before many Grandees of Poland, who admired in how short a Time that Monarch had disciplined his Troops. His first Design was to march along the Duna, and form the Siege of Riga; but this Check that he received, and an Account that Leurwenhaupt had put Garrisons into Mittaw and Bautske, so as to be always fure of a Retreat to Riga, made the Czar change his Resolution. And as the King of Sweden and King Stanislaus had convoked a general Diet at Warfaw, to put the last Hand to their Grand Design of crowning the latter, it was necessary for the common Cause to endeayour to trouble that Asiembly.

The Citizens of Dantzick, who had put themselves under the Protection of the King of Prussia, maintained a Conduct fo equivocal, as to fatisfy neither Party. They gave an Afylum to the Primate, and Protection to the Party of King Augustus, who were both equally defirous to have them absolutely in their Interest. This made Count Piper write a very pressing Letter to the Magistracy, the Menaces in which determined them to the Interest of the Swedes. The Czar, who was attentive to all that passed, wrote also to these Magistrates, not only to make his Complaints of their Behaviour, but to inform them of the Motives that brought him into Poland, and to let them know, that if they perfifted in favouring his Enemies, the Citizens themselves must expect to be treated as fuch. He also published a Manifefto, fignifying the Reasons of his coming into Poland with 100,000 foreign Troops; the Chief of which was the Election of Staniflaus to the Crown, in prejudice of Augustus. He declared himself an Energy to all the Enemies of the latter; but protefled that he had no Views therein to his own Advantage, regarding only the Peace of the Republick, which he would endeavour to preserve, and not suffer his Soldiers to commit any Diforders. This Manifesto was dated the 23d of June, 1705. His Majesty had been received on the 19th at Vilna, the Capital of Lithuania, by the Referendary of the great Dutchy, in the Name of King Augustus and all the State. This Lord made a long Speech to give him Joy on his Arrival, and felicitate his Country on having so powerful a Protector: Which Prince Menzikoff in a few Words answered, and his Majesty renewed the Promifes he had before made, that he would not fuffer his Troops to commit any Disorders. They marched divided in three Bodies; that of the Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoff went through Courland; the Hettman Mazeppa, with 50 or 60,000 Coffacks, entered into Black Ruffia, to join the Party of King Augustus; and the Velt Mareschal Ogilov led a third, as strong as the fecond, and in which the Czar was in Person, into Lithuania.

After the Action of Gemaurthoff, General Leuwenhaupt was in no Condition to attend the Russians, much less to act offensively; but his Retreat to Riga had lest Courland entirely exposed. And now the Czar took that Dutchy under his Protection, ordering the Inhabitants to fend to his Commissary, Prince Menzikoff, all the Arms and Effects belonging to the Enemy: But the Courlanders were too much in the Interest of Sweden, to obey his Orders willingly; fo that the Prince was obliged to renew the Ordinance of his Mafter, adding to it Threats of corporal Punishment on Disobedience. In the mean Time the King of Sweden remained quietly in his Camp, employed only in crowning the King of Poland. The Saxons on one Side, the Russians on the other, and lastly the Coffacks, all agreeing to-oppose this pretended Diet.

Admiral Ankersleirn, who before made an unsuccessful Attempt on Gronslot, thought he should be able to succeed better now, all the Czar's Forces being advanced into Lithuania and Courland. Lavale, the Engineer, who had been sent to view the Island and Fort, would have diffuaded him from it; but the Admiral himfelf ordered the Attack. This Descent, fixed for the 15th of July, was to be made by Favour of the Fleet. The Ruffians under Colonel Tobulch, Commandant of the Island of Retulari, waited for them without any Diflurbance. The Castle was not only in a better State of Defence than when it was attacked before, but was alfo guarded by a good Wall against the Artillery. advanced Guards of the Swedes met, for their first Obstacle, a Shallow covered with the Points of Rocks, which broke feveral of their Sloops and overfet others. The Soldiers, with much Intrepedity, jumped into the Water, which, as they advanced, took them up to the Neck, and cost some of them their Lives. Being at length landed, they were received by the Russaus lying on their Bellies before their Batteries, which being charged with Cartridges, a Discharge from them had all the Success imaginable. The Russians finished with their Muskets, what the Cannon had fo well begun; fo that during this Attack, which did not last an Hour, the Sweder had 12 Officers and 400 Soldiers killed, o Officers and 170 Men wounded; and had it not been for the Fire of their Veffels, not a Man of them would have got back to the Fleet. Thus was the Admiral a fecond Time forced to retreat, fully convinced of the Strength of the Calle, and its advantageous Situation. These Advantages gained at Sea, encouraged the Czar to augment

Chap. 5. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

Major-General Meydel, being informed in Carelia of the Admiral's Enterprize, refolved at the fame 'Time to undertake something against the Fortress of Petersburgh. Having got together about 20,000 Fascines, and a large Number of Gabions, he attacked the Line that covered the Fortress; but sound it so well defended, that after the Loss of 200 Men, he quitted the Place, and retired to the Ruins of Nie-Schantz. From hence he sent a Detachment into Ingria, where another Detachment from the Garrison of Petersburgh, sent by Major General Bruce the Commandant, soon put them to slight: So that this whole Expedition terminated only in attacking a Sawing-Mill, between Petersburgh and Sleutelburgh. This Mill was encompassed by a double Range of Pallisades, within which his Marine.

which the Ruffians had raifed a good Parapet, that covered 2000 Men. The Savedifb General fummoned them to furrender, which they refusing, he was obliged in Honour to attack the Mill. He was twice repulsed; but at the third Assault his Troops passed the Pallisades, and advanced to the Foot of the Parapet, over which he threw a great Quantity of Grenades, some of which set fire to the Russian Magazine of Powder: But the Bestieged, far from surrendering, became the more desperate, upon this Accident; and making a Sally on their Enemies, drove them beyond the Pallisades, killed above 400 of their Men, and obliged them to retire with no great Credit.

While the Russians had these Advantages on their Frontiers, the Czar's Troops in Courland made fuch Progress, that they subdued all that Province to his Obedience. Mittaw and Baut he were the two only Places able to oppose the Conquerors: The first surrendered without much Refistance; the other with less; but they were forced to employ their Cannon against Colonel Knoring, to oblige him to give up the Castle of Mittanu, whither he was retired with about 400 Men. The Colonel at last defiring to capitulate, was allowed very honourable Terms by General Repnin, upon the Execution of which, it was found that the Savedes had pillaged the Palace and Archives of the Dukes of Courland, and even entered into the Vaults of their Dead, to rob their Carcasses of certain Jewels. The Russians, that they might not lie under the Suspicion of such an odious Fact, obliged the Savedes to be present, while an Inventory was taken of every Thing found, at that Time, in the Ducal Palace and Sepulchre. The King of Saveden, all this Time, did not fend one Man to defend Courland, fo much were his Cares employed on the Diet of Warfaru; and so much was it the Business of the Czar to trouble that Diet, that after having left General Baur with a Body of Troops in Courland, and Velt-Mareschal Gzeremetoff with another in Livonia, he went himself at the Head of his Army into Lithuania. When he arrived at Grodno, he fortified that Place, feized on the Passage of Tykozin, and established Magazines in feveral Places. In short, the Czar was absolute Mager

Master of Lithuania; and, by the Dispositions he made, he seemed to aim at nothing more than the Preservation of that Province; which made his Enemies encourage a false Rumour, that his Majesty would take that Opportunity of uniting the Great Dutchy to his own Dominions. They were in hopes, by that Means, to draw from his Party the Nobility of Lithuania and Upper Poland, who held out for King Augustus, and to whose Assistance Madeppa was advancing, at the Head of his Cossaks.

CHAP. VI.

King Augustus meets the Czar, who is made Colonel in his own Army. Leaves Grodno. Patkul arrested. The Battle of Fravenstad. Charles enters Saxony. The Treaty of Alt Ranstadt. The Battle of Calish. Patkul's Catastrophe. The Polish Nobility meet at Leopold. The Czar writes to several Potentaies against Augustus. The Assembly of Lublin. Stanislaus comes into Poland. The Assembly of Holowzin. Charles marches into the Ukrain. The Battle of Lezno. The Revolt and Sentence of Mazzeppa. The Czar's Ambassador arrested in London. The Siege and Battle of Pultowa. King of Sweden slies to Bender.

HO' Augustus had got together 20,000 Men in Saxony, it was almost impossible to bring them into Poland, all the Passages were so well guarded. But he was so strongly pressed by General Parkul, Ambassador from the Czar, and by the Accounts he received from Wanjaru, that he could not but be sensible how nec stary his Presence was in that Kingdom. He lest Dressen, therefore, incognito, accompanied by three Perfons only, and arrived at Daniziek on the 28th of October, 1705, from whence he proceeded to Tykezin. He went next to Grodno, and from thence to the Army of the Czar, who had Notice of his Arrival, and at their Meeting, presented him with fix Standards, a Moiety of those which the Russians had taken on the Bridge of Praag, upon the Vistula, having surprised the Sweed so Guard that was posted there. It was at Grodno that King Augustus instituted the Order of the White Eagle. with Defign of rewarding feveral Grandees of Poland, and some of the Russian Generals; but this Honour, beflowed by one who had himfelf but the empty Name of a King, was only Matter of Ridicule. Here likewife another Farce was performed, but fuch a one as was at least instructive, and not unfit to be acted by Kings. His Czarish Majesty, having requested Augustus to take upon him the Command of his Army, caused General Ogilvi to propose in Publick, the filling up two vacant Posts of Colonels. Augustus said, he was not well acquainted with the Muscovite Officers himself; so defired Ogibi to Name two, that he thought worthy those Employments. Ogilvi named Prince Alexander Menzikoff. and Peter Alexowitz, meaning the Czar himfelf. King faid, he knew the Merits of Menzikoff, and would dispatch his Commission; but for the other, he was not informed of his Services. However, after 4 or 5 Days Sollicitation, he made Peter Alexowitz a Colonel.

When the Conference between the two Kings ended, the Czar left his Troops to his Ally, and went himfelf to suppress an Insurrection in the Province of Astracan, where the Rebels had ravaged the Country for two Years; putting to Death Men, Women and Children. They had surprized and cut in Pieces the Governor of Aftracan, with most of the chief Officers of the Garrifon: They marched next to Camifbinska; but the Garrison standing upon their Guard, they were repulsed. They then belieged Czaritza, where meeting with no Success, they returned to Astracan, which was retaken by Peter Matfeaich Apraxin, who put them all to the Sword, except some of the Chiefs, that were sent to Moscow, and there executed. The Czar had no sooner left King Augustus, but the latter began to listen to some of the Grandees of Lithuania, who endeavoured to raife feveral Sufpicions, which diminished the good Underflanding that had been between those Princes. He sent to arrest General Patkul in Saxony, who was there Commandant of those Troops which the Czar had fent to the Relief of Augustus, and at the same Time his Czarish Majesty's Plenipotentiary to several Princes in Germany; performed then the Functions of this Office at Drefden, and had done many real Services to Augustus: But all this did not prevent his being taken out of his Bed in the Night having his Papers serzed, and his Person confined, upon a slight Pretence, that he was working secretly to reconcile the Czar and the King of Saveden.

The Time being come when the Armies expected to have gone into Quarters, the King of Sweden put himfelf in Motion to make a Winter Campaign. He fpent all the Month of January in tedious Marches and Countermarches, and greatly damaged his Army, without attempting any Thing. In the mean Time Augustus held a grand Council of War, with the Rullian Generals at Gradno, in which it was refolved, that the Generals Ogilvi, Allard, and others, as well Ruffians as Saxons, and the Great General Wiefnowifky, should remain at Grodno, from whence, as Occasions offered, they might act both offensively and defensively against the Savedes : While the King was to go into Poland, to re-establish his Credit in those Places abandoned by his Enemies, and to give necessary Orders for favouring the Entry of his Saxon Troops. General Shullembourg, who commanded them, at last passed the Oder, together with Lieutenant General Wostromirsky and his Russians. Renchild the Swediff General, as foon as he heard the News, began his March, and thefe two famous Generals met on the 12th of February 1706, at a Place called Fravenstad. Renchild had about 10,000 Men. Shullembourg twice the Number. Both Armies engaged; but fuch was the Terfor of the Swedish General, that although Shullembourg had made the best Disposition imaginable, yet the Battle lasted not a Quarter of an Hour. Renchild found 7000 loaded Fusees thrown on the Ground, without being fired. The Muscovites begged for Life on their Knees; but Renchild, or according to others, King Charles himfelf, ordered them to be inhumanly maffacred in cold Blood, above fix Hours after the Battle.

King Augustus had now nothing left but Craeow, in which Place he was shut up with a few Troops. The Loss of the Battle of Fravensied had quite discouraged his Party in Poland, and put the King of Sweden in a Condition to drive the Russians out of Lithuania, where the Nobility began to declare for the new King. Marefehal Ogilvi, feeing the bad Situation he was in, made a very prudent Retreat.

The Czar was now at Smolenski, at the Head of 20,000 of his best Troops, to which Mazeppa joined 30 or 40,000 Cossacks. Hither came the Bishop of Cujavia, on the Part of Augustus, who complained much that his Ally should abandon him. The Czar, tho' ever so willing to affish him, was not obliged to do all alone: Besides the present Posture of Affairs made him think of the Desence of his own Dominions; and we must add to this, his Resentment for the Seizure of Parkul, whose Release he demanded without giving Audience to the Polish Prelate. Menzikoss, however, wrote some Time after to Augustus, that the Czar his Master had not withdrawn his Troops from Lithuania, but to re-establish them in a better Air, and to return with fresh Forces at the Beginning of the next Campaign.

The King of Sweden having joined Renchild, and entering into Saxony, completed the Misfortunes of Augustus, who found himself under a Necessity to submit to the Conqueror; and therefore, for fear of the Musicovites, sent Baron Imboss and Pfing sten to Charles, in the Night. When Charles received the Letter, he ordered them to wait, and retiring into his Closet, where he staid but a very short Time, returned with a Paper in which he had written the following Contents:

" I confent to give Peace upon the following Conditions, in which it must not be expected that I shall make the least Alteration.

First, That King Augustus renounce for everthe Crown of Poland; that he acknowledge Stanislaus as lawful King; and that he promise never to remount the Throne, not even after the Death of Stanislaus.

Second, That he renounce all other Treaties, and particularly those he has made with Muscowy.

Third, That he fend back with Honour the Princes Sobie/ki into my Camp, and all the Prinoners he has ever taken.

Fourth, That he deliver into my Hands all the Deferters which have entered into his Service, and parti-

Chap. 6. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 103 cularly John Patkul, and that all Proceedings be stopt against fuch as have passed from his Service into mine."

The Plenipotentiaries could not bring Charles to make any Abatement in these Conditions; but were forced to yield to his inflexible Obilinacy. He exercised, at that Tim. an absolute Power in Saxony. He even ordered the Registers of the Finances to be I id before him, that he might know the Strength of the Electorate, and exacted of the States 625,000 at first, and afterwards 500,000

Crowns per Month.

Whilst the Treaty was secretly negotiating at Alt-Ranstadt, Prince Menzikoff, now Generalissimo of the Muscovite Army, brought . 0,000 Men and joined the Forces of Augustus, which were not above 6000. The King was under terrible Apprehensions of what might be the Consequence, if they should discover his Negotiation with Sweden: But he was still in much greater l'erplexity, when he beheld the Presence of 10,000 Swedes, commanded by General Meyerfeldt, approaching him at Califo. In this Extremity he could think of no better - Expedient, than to fend one to the Swedish General, to let him partly into the Secret of the Negotiation, and defire him to withdraw: But Meyer feldt, taking this to be only an Invention to amuse him, redoubled his Ardour for the Fight. Augustus, pressed forward by the Instances of Menzikoff, and provoked at the Confidence of Meyerfeldt, was forced to confent to a Battle: In which Victory was on the Side of the Muscovites. The Savedes and their Allies being encompassed on all Sides, were obliged to throw down their Arms and beg for Quarter. They had about 3000. Men killed and wounded, and 4 or cooo taken Prisoners; among whom were General Meyerfeldt, Count Tarlo, and several Officers of Distinction. All the Enemy's Artillery and Baggage were in the Power of the Victors: But when Augustus was entering Warfaw in Triumph, Pfing fter, one of his Plenipotentiaries, presented him with the Treaty of Peace which deprived him of his Crown. In the first Emotions of his Heart, he paufed with himfelf for a short Time, to confider if he ought not to march at the Head of his now victorious Troops, and fall upon the King who treated him so disgracefully: But considering that Charles

F 4

Charles was at the Head of an Army never yet beaten, that the Muscovites would all forsake him when they heard of the Treaty, and that his hereditary Country would be ravaged by both Parties, he thought it most adviseable to fign. He then set out for Saxony, in Hopes of fostening, by his Presence, the Inflexibility of his Enemy. They met in Count Piper's Quarters at Gunterfdorf more than once, where Charles treated his vanquished Foe with all the outward Appearance of Respect: But what was of little Value, when weighed against the real Severity, with which he exacted his Compliance with every Article of the Treaty. And, as a farther Punishment for his having dared to fight General Meyerfeldt at Califb, he forced the ungrateful Task upon him, of writing the following Letter to Staniflaus, on his Advancement to the Crown of Poland.

Sir and Brother.

As I ought to have regard to the Request of the King of Sweden, I cannot avoid congratulating your Majesty, upon your coming to the Crown; though perhaps the advantageous Treaty the King of Sweden has lately concluded for your Majesty, might have ex-' cufed me from this Correspondence: However, I congratulate your Majesty, beseeching God that your Subjects may be more faithful to you, than they have been to me.

Leipfick, April 8, 1707.

Augustus, King.

Stanislaus wrote this Answer.

Sir and Brother.

* The Correspondence of your Majesty is a fresh Ob-· ligation which I owe to the King of Sweden: I have

· a just Sense of the Compliments you make me upon my coming to the Crown; and I hope my Subjects will have no Room to fail of their Fidelity towards me, as I shall observe the Laws of the Kingdom.

Title of King of Poland. His Name was erafed out of the outbild Frayers, to give Place to that of Staniflaus; all which he could more easily digest, than the being obliged to give up Patkul to the Vengeance of the King of Sweden. The Czar, on one Hand, loudly demanded his Minister; but Charles threatened terrible Things if he was not delivered to him, according to the Treaty of Alt-Ransfadt. The melancholy Story of that Livonian Patriot was this.

Charles XI. King of Squeden, among the feveral Severities he exercised upon his Subjects, had taken away many of the Privileges and Estates of the Livonians. Pathul was deputed by the Nobility, to carry the Complaints of that Province to the King, which he did in a most respectful Manner, accompanied with great Courage and Eloquence. Charles feemed not displeased with what he faid; but laying his Hand on Patkul's Shoulder, told him, " He had spoke for his Country like a brave Man, and that he lov'd him for it." Yet a few Days after, he caused. him to be condemned for a Traitor. Patkul escaped into Poland, and was well received by Augustus, from whose Service he passed into that of the Czar, and so continued till the time of his Confinement, which was occasion'd by his having discover'd the Defign of Count Fleming and the Chancellor of Saxony, to obtain a Peace with Saveden at any. Rate; upon which he immediately formed a Scheme to fupplant theirs, and bring about an Accommodation between his Master and the Swedes. The others getting some Intelligence of this, prevail'd upon Augustus to imprison him; and that Prince writing to the Czar, told him, that Parkul was a perfidious Wretch, and would betray them both. The Czar, who had great Penetration, and knew the Merits of Patkul, infifted upon his being ient back to him. Augustus, at the same Time intimidated by the Threats of the King of Saveden, came to this Refolution, that he would fecretly contrive the Prisoner's Escape, by which Means he should both satisfy the Czar, and evade the Wrath of King Charles. But the Governor of the Caltle of Konifling, knowing he was rich, demanded a large Sum of Money of him for his Liberty. Patkul, relying on the Law of Nations, and being informed of Augustus's Intentions, refused to comply with the Mercenary Governor. And while they were thus disputing the Matter, a Party of Swedes came up, and forced the Victim out of the Hands of his Jailor. was carried to the General Quarters at Alt-Ranstdat, and there kept for three Months, chained to a Stake. Charles, forgetting that Patkul was the Czar's Ambaffador, and confidering only that he was born his Subject, ordered a Council of War to pass Sentence upon him. with the utmost Rigour. He was condemned to be broke alive upon the Wheel, and quartered. A Chaplain came to let him know, that he was to die, without informing him of the Manner of his Punishment. Upon the Information, this Man, who had braved Death in fo many Battles, finding his Courage no longer supported by Glory or Passion, broke into a bitter Flood of Tears, which he poured into the Bosom of the Chaplain. He was engaged to a Saxon Lady, who had all the Advantages of Birth, Merit, and Beauty, and whom he had thoughts of marrying much about this Time. He defired the Chaplain to wait upon her, to comfort her, and affure her, that he died full of the tenderest Regards for her. When he was led to the Place of Execution, and faw the Wheel and Stake that were prepared for his Death, he fell into Convulsions of Terror, and threw himself into the Arms of the Minister, who embraced him, and covered him with his Cloak, and wept over him. A Swedish Officer then read aloud a Paper, containing the following Words.

F 5

formed

This is to declare, that the express Order of his Majesty. our most merciful Lord, is, that this Man, who is a Trais tor to his Country, be broke upon the Wheel, and quartered. for the Reparation of his Crimes, and for an Example to others; that every one may take care of Treason, and faithfully serve his King.

At the Words, Most merciful Lord, Patkul cried out, What Mercy! And at those of Traiter to his Country, Alas! faid he, I have ferved it too well. He received 16 Blows, and endured the longest and most dreadful Tortures that can be imagined. Thus died the unhappy John Renold Patkul, Ambassador and General of the Czar of Muscowy. This Quality, in the Opinion of all, ought to have rendered his Person sacred. Only the King of Sweden, brought up in the Principles of arbitrary Power, judged that he had done no more than an Act of Judice, whilst all Europe condemned his Cruelty. Parents Members were quartered, and remained exposed upon Gibbers till the Year 1713, when Migustus having regained his Throne, ordered these Testimonies of his Necessity to be collected together: They were brought to him in a Box to Warsawa, in Presence of the French Ambassador; to whom shewing the Box, he said simply, See the Members of Patkul, without any Addition of Blame or Complaint.

When his Czarish Majesty heard of the unaccountable Treaty of Alt Ranfladt, and of Patkul's being imprisoned, it is easy to imagine what Thoughts he must entertain of fuch Conduct. This Treachery of his Ally thu e ed all his Defigns, and obliged him to retire to the Frontiers of his own Dominions, that he might fecure his Conquelts in Ingria and Livonia. Narva was ftrongly fortified, and his People worked incessantly at Peterfburgh: But above all, he endeavoured to bring as many Vessels as possible into the Gulf of Finland. The Savedif Admiral made a new Attempt, with little Damage, on the Fortress of Petersburgh; and the Czar, to draw. the Swedes out of his Country, carried the War home. into their own Territories. With this View, in the Depth of Winter, he laid Siege to Wybourg, the Capital of Carelia, in which Service he employed 18,000 Foot, and 6000 Horse. The Siege lasted three Weeks, during which he threw 1500 Bombs in the Town. But Major General Meydel had the Precaution to bring Troops and Provisions into the Place, before it was blocked up; befides which the Befieged had the Sea opened to them, and a great Number of the Militia got together from all Parts of the Country about. All these Difficulties, joined to the Season of the Year, rendered the Enterprize of the Russians impracticable; for which Reason they retired into their Winter Quarters, and his Czarish Majefty called about him the most experienced of his Generals, to confult with them how to prevent the ill Confequences that might be expected from what had passed in Saxony.

It was proposed in the Czar's Council, to retaliate the King of Sweden's Ufage of Patkul, by treating the Swedifh Officers, who were Prisoners at Moscoru, in the same Manner: But his Majesty would not consent to such Barbarity; which indeed might have had very bad Confequences, fince there were more Muscovites Prisoners in Saveden than there were Savedes in Muscowy. He resolved therefore on a fafer and more honourable Revenge.

Being at Zolkiew, the Quarters of Prince Menzikoff. several of the Polish Grandees came to him there to pay their Court, before they met in the Assembly of Leopold. His Behaviour to them was fo obliging, as entirely gained him the Affection of all who approached him. The grand Council, confishing of the chief Officers of State, met in the Month of February. Count Denhoff. Sword-Bearer of the Crown, made a pathetick Speech on the unfortunate State of the Kingdom, earnestly exhorting the Members of it to Unanimity at that Juncture, It was refolved in this Affembly to renew the Confederation of Sendomir, and the grand Question was, Whether they had any King or not? Which passing in the Negative, they talked of declaring the Throne vacant, and agreed to fummon a Diet to meet at Lublin in May following. The Assembly, at the same Time, infisted upon writing to all foreign Potentates, to defire them to forbear acknowledging any Person for King of Poland, till the Republick had notified to them what Prince they had elect-The General of the Crown read in the Assembly a Letter from the Czar, wherein he tells them : " That fince the King of Sweden, by Force and Cunning, had obtained his Ends in dethroning King Augustus, there was no Reason to doubt but he would make use of the same Means to deceive the Republick; and that to this Intent, his Ministers had caused a Report to be spread in foreign Courts, that a Peace was negotiating between his Czarish Majesty and him. His Czarish Majesty did not deny, that being at Stroliza, he expressed to some foreign Ministers the Inclination he had to Peace, and that as a Christian, he thought himself obliged to listen to any Overtures of Peace from the King of Saveden, to avoid the Effusion of Christian Blood: But that he would pever enter into any Treaty but publickly in Concert with the the Republick, and by Ministers nominated by each of them." The Assembly upon reading this Letter, came to a Resolution of returning Thanks to his Majesty, for his favourable Dispositions towards the Republick, and to concert Measures together, to enable them to act properly in the present Situation of their Assairs. During these Transactions the Czar arrived at Leopold, with the Czarewitz his Son, Prince Menzikos, and some of his Ministers. His Majesty was received publickly, with much Ceremony, and great Marks of Respect. He assisted at their Debates, and forgot that nothing might induce the Senators to consist method Consederacy of Sendomir; so that what was done at this Meeting, may be looked upon only as a Conclusion of that Confederacy.

His Majesty, very well satisfied, returned to Zoldiew with the Czarewitz and Prince Menzikoff: And as a Report had been spread, that his Majesty had a Design to propose his Son for King of Poland, to prevent any Su-Toicions of that kind, he fent the Czarewitz to Moscow; and, to shew his Readiness to execute the Treaty he had concluded with the Republick, he immediately ordered 800,000 Florins to be paid to the Polish Troops. He also wrote to several Potentates, complaining of the Cowardice and Treachery of King Augustus, and of the Violation of the Law of Nations by the King of Squeden. But neither the Force of his Remonstrances, nor the Interests those States had in their Commerce with the Court of Russia, could make them forsake the common Cause of the Allies, which required that the King of Saveden should be prevail'd on to leave Germany.

By these Letters, and what has been related, it was feen how much Reason the Czar had to complain of Augustus, and the infamous Treaty of Alt-Ranstadt; which was very far from mending the Condition of that Prince's Affairs, as he himself complains in a Letter wrote some. Time after to the States of Holland, wherein he says, That the Peace which he had made, was so far from putting his Affairs in a better State, that he was reduced to the most deplarable Situation in the Worlds.

In May the Assembly met at Lublin, and again by Adjournment in June; when, after many Debates, the Throne of Poland was declared vacant, and a Diet called for a third Election. The Cz r wrote a Letter to the Council to exhort them to Unanimity and Dispatch. He urged very much the Necessity of chusing a new King, as the only Method to reconcile the divided Members of the Republick, and let all the World fee, that they looked upon Stanislaus as Palatine of Posnania, and not as their King. He affured them again, that he would never hearken to any Peace, but in Conjunction with them; and that he had refolved to give Battle to the Swedes. He likewife told them, that they ought not to neglect that Opportunity, and affored them, that he would be fo far from following the Meafures of the . Swedes, that he would prescribe nothing to them, and would not concern himself directly or indirectly in their State Affairs, and had forbid his Troops to come within 20 Leagues of Lublin. His Czarifh Majefly wrote another Letter to the Primate and chief Ministers of the Crown, wherein he adds, that he cannot take any folid Measures with the Republick, unless they chuse a new After much canvassing, the Interregnum was published in July following, and the Primate took upon him the Regency of the Republick. But in the mean Time, Staniflaus had got himself acknowledged by most of the Princes and States of Europe; and leaving Charles in Saxony, came into Poland with General Renchild, at the Head of 16 Swedish Regiments, and was ownedas their Sovereign through every Place that he paffed.

The King of Sweden, having now largely enriched his Military Cheft, and augmented his Army to the Number of 50,000, befides the Troops under General Lewenhaum and Major General Craffau fought all Ways to bring the Czar to an Engagement: But Peter, feeing how largely he had increased his Forces, tho' he had before determined to give him Battle, now thought it would be dangerous to run that Hazard. He had just then been informed of Propositions made to the King of Sweden and Stanislaus, by the Porte, with an Offer to join with them in an offensive Alliance against Russia. Besides this, the King of Sweden openly declared, that he intended to make Russia the Theatre of the War, and did not doubt but he should find many Revolters, among a People made uneasy by Alterations every Day in the Customs and Manners of their Fore-fathers, and who were continually burthened with fresh Taxes. Upon this Intelligence, the Czar thought it would be most adviseable to withdraw insensibly into Lithuania, on the Frontiers of Russia; and by this Retreat Stanislaus was left in peaceable Possession of almost all Poland. From thence his Czaris Majesty went to Moscow, where his Presence was absolutely necessary, as well to give Orders for the Repairs to be made, on Account of a great Fire that had destroyed 1500 Houses, as to check the Spirit of Faction that appeared there. He afterwards gave Orders to augment his Troops on the Black Sea, and the Frontiers of Tartary.

The Czar had not been at Moscoru for two Years before, and was therefore received with all possible Demonstrations of Joy. He held several Councils, in which he gave many Orders relating to Affairs in different Provinces, and faw the last Hand put to the Royal Dispenfary, which was a fuperb Building, and one of the greatest Ornaments of the City of Moscow. There are eight Apothecaries employed, and five Boys under them, with about 40 Workmen: And from hence the Drugs and Medicines are furnished for the Army and Fleet. Doctor-Arefkine, a Scotchman, chief Physician to the Czar, was the first Director of this House. His Czarish Majesty likewise saw, with Pleasure, the Hospital for sick Persons finished; a Structure built of Wood, on the Banks of the River Fonfa in the German Slaboda. The Dispensary confists of three Chambers, two for the Medicines, and the third for the Herbs of which they are composed. On the Side of this Hospital is a Manufactury of Cloth, which was at first put under the Direction of a Draper, who was fent for by his Majesty from Holland; and on the other Side of the River Moscua was a Glass-House, for making Looking-Glasses.

His Czarish Majesty had but just celebrated the first Day of the new Year, 1708, when several Couriers came to him from Prince Meuzikoss, with Advice that the King of Sweden was in Motion to re-enter Lithuania. The Russian Army till then was encamped in such a Manner, that the Troops under General Lewenhaupt, on the Side of Livonia, were not able either to advance or retreat. These also were in Motion to join the King. The Czar, whose Scheme was to keep the Enemy as far as possible out of his own Dominions, made haste to Grodno, to difpute the Passage of the Niemen with the Swedes. They could not be hindered from passing the Vistula, from whence Charles with his Army marched with much Speed towards Lithuania. He not only found the Country ruined by the Russians, but was even obliged to defend himfelf against the Peasants, who sheltering themselves in the Woods on all Sides, fired incessantly on all who came near them: And two of his Guards, in passing by one of these Woods, had their Horses shot under them, within four Paces of the King himfelf. The Czar was in Grodno when the King of Sweden, with about 600 Men, approached the Town. The Mufcovites, taking this Handful of Men to be the Vanguard of the Swedish Army, marched out at the North Gate, while Charles entered at the South: But the Czar learning the fame Day, by a Polish Deferter, to what a small Number of Men he had quitted the Town, and that the Body of the Swediff Troops were five Leagues Distance, he loft no Time, but fent a Detachment of 2000 Men, to furprize the King that Evening in the Town. These Men, by the Favour of the Night, advanced undifcovered as far as the first Savedish Guard, confishing only of 30 Men, who fuffained the Effort of these 2000, tillthose in the Town were put in a Posture to receive them : Then, being animated by the King of Sweden, they forced the Russians to retire.

The Czar gave Orders to his Troops to rendezvous in the Palatinate of Minski, and seeing his Enemy in full March to purfue him, he thought it proper to draw him to a Place where he would have neither Magazines nor Retreat, and where he might wait for him behind good Lines, to attack him with Advantage, when he was fufficiently fatigued and exhausted. His Majesty therefore took his Rout to the Boryfthenes, with Defign to intrench himself between Mobilow and Orfa, from whence he might have a secure Retreat to Smolenska. Hereupon the King of Sweden, informed of the Condition of the Russian Army, and the Rout they had taken, undertook to intercept them in their March. But the Management of the Czar obliged him to change his Rout again, and confined him for fome Time in the Palatinate of Vilna. Mean while his Czarish Majesty sent General Baur to lay the Polifb Livonia walle from whence he went to Swediff Livonia, where he pillaged every Place and remained Master of the Duna, notwithstanding the Neighbourhood of Leuswenhaupt. General Goliz had Orders to go with 15,000 Men to Volhinia, to join 12,000 Volosques and Cossacks, that they might take the Swedes in the Flank in their Motions, He had likewife Orders to destroy the Country for 30 Miles round, and to retreat beyond the Boryftbenes, where the Czar would give the Inhabitants other Lands to inhabit. These Measures were attended with good Succefs; for the Swedes were obliged to canton their Army, and encamp till May, for want of Necessaries; besides which, althe' no Battle was fought, their Numbers were very much diminished, by their satiguing Marches, His Czarish Majesty passed the Borysthenes with his Army, which was confiderably augmented in a Camp where every Thing abounded. A Body of Troops between Witeplk and Kopis maintained the Communication with the Detachments spread over the Country. His Majesty, who had been for some Time at Polocak, resolved to go to Petersburgh to hasten the Armament of his Fleet: But falling ill at the very Instant he was setting out, he was forced to be transported to Smolensko, leaving the Directions of all the Operations to his Generals. One may judge of the Condition to which the Czar had raifed his Marine, fince he had been in Possession of Narva and Petersburgh. The Swedish Fleet, commanded by Admiral Wachtmeester, consisted of 36 Men of War, carrying from 68 to 32 Guns apiece, befides 6 Bomb-Veffels and Fire Ships: Nevertheless they dared not venture upon an Action with that of the Czar, which remained Mifiress of the Baltick Sea, the Bothnick Gulf, and that of Finland. The Town of Borgo in Nyland was taken, where all the old Men were put to the Sword, the young ones carried away, and the Town burnt to the Ground. Biornos and fome other Islands had the fame Fate; and a great Number of Barks, laden with Provisions for Stockholm, were taken and carried to Petersburgh.

Manage

As foon as the Czar began to recover, he was obliged to go to Moscozu, to appease a new Sedition among the Don Coffacks, raised by Condraschka Bolawin, who at the Head of 5000 Men had formed a Defign of furprizing Afoph, and, to fecure Success, had demanded a Supply from the Porte and the Cham of Tartary, who, thinking the Enterprize ridiculous, would have no Hand in it. The Czar fent 20,000 Men under Prince Dolgoruki, to force the Rebels to Submission. But some among them going about to take their Leader, he shot himself with a Pistol, and they carried his Body to the Governor of Aloph, who ordered his Head to be taken off, and his Quarters to be fet up upon the four Gates of the City. This News faved the Czar a great Expence, and enabled him to employ his 20,000 Men, under the Command of Prince Dolgoruki, elsewhere. But as the Nation in general was discontented with the long War, his Majesty was obliged to maintain his Troops in different Parts of the Country, which might otherwise have largely augmented his Army. After having put every Thing in Order, he returned to Smolensko, where he arrived just as an Action had passed between a Body of his Troops, and the best Part of the King of S-weden's Army.

Charles XII. hearing that the Hettman Mazeppa was on the March with 25,000 Men to join the Ruffian Army; that the Great General Siniauski was also in Motion, and that another Body of between 15 and 20,000 Rullians were moving from another Part, he refolved to attack these different Bodies before they could join, or at least to prevent their having any Communication. On the 25th of June, 1708, before the River Berezine, he found the Ruffians under General Goltz, to the Number of between 12 and 15,000, encamped to dispute that Passage with him; which however he succeeded in, by one of these Fients which were so usual with him. Thus surmounting all Difficulties, he arrived at the Neight ourhood of Holowain, a Town on the River Wabitz, which the Muscovites abandoned, and, having broke the Bridge after them, joined a Body of their Troops on the other Side that River. They had a

Wood in the Rear, and their Intrenchments were defended by feveral Pieces of Cannon. There was a large Ditch behind them, and the River was difficult to pass. The King of Sweden viewed the Ground, and caused his Artillery to march in the Night, a Quarter of a League on the Right, where he had observed a Post, from whence they might fire into the Rullian Intrenchments on their Left; and that there was a pretty large Opening between the Right and Left; their Generals thinking that Place unpaffable, because of a Morals that extended to a very thick Wood. The King of Sweden came at three in the Morning to the Banks of the River, with 5 Regiments, and foon after Part of the Cavalry, and then begun to cannonade the Ruffian Camp with fo much Succeis, that such of their Battalions as were most exposed, were obliged to quit their Post: Whereupon the King encouraged his Troops to follow him, and flung himself into the River, which he passed, the Water being up to his Armpits. He was followed with Zeal by the Soldiers, who carried their Arms over their Heads, to keep them from being wet: But the Ground on the other Side being marshy, it was impossible for the a keep their Ranks. In the mean Time the Muscovites turned all their Cannon against them; but in Spite their Fire, and the Difficulty of the Ground, the Sweden got over the Morais, and posted themselves between the two Wings of the Muscowite Army. This obliged the General Golia to withdraw his Infantry from their Camp. and post it at the Entrance into the Wood, whither the King of Sweden followed him with his Regiment of Guards, ordering the reft of the Troops to join him asthey should pass the Morais, and attacked the Enemy with n terrible Fire, between 4 and 5 in the Morning. King of Sweden was on Horfeback in the Beginning of this Action; but Captain Gyllenstiern, a young Savede whom he had a great Effeem for, being wounded and not able to march, the King gave him his own Horse, and fought during the rest of the Action on Foot at the Head of his Guards. The Engagement lasted 4 Hours, with great Slaughter, and great Bravery shewn on both Sides: But the Mascovites were at last obliged to retire, and leave the King of Saveden Mafter of the Field, and of [everal feveral Pieces of Cannon. This is faid to be the most glorious Battle the King of Sweden had ever fought, and that wherein he shewed the greatest Skill, and was exposed to the greatest Dangers. He forced the Mujcovites to repais the Boryschenes, and staid some Time about Mobilow, the last Town in Poland, as well to refresh his Army, as to confult what Measures were to be taken in an unknown Country, into which he was just upon entering, with a Defign to puriue the Muscovites even to their Capital. The Czar, as hath been related, arrived in his Army two Days after this Action, and quitted it no more till he had entirely defeated the King of Saveden; who now, finding his Army much weakened, fent Orders to General Leurvenhaupt in Courland to come and join him, who accordingly affembling all his Troops, and drawing the Garrisons out of all the Towns, made up a Body of 20,000 Men, which were followed by 7000 Waggons, laden with Ammunition and Provisions. The General made great Expedition, but was much harraffed in his March by General Baur, who was in Livonia with 5 or 6000 Men, and took some of his Waggons. and many of his Men.

The King of Saveden, impatient that these Succours did not come up, and every Thing being to confirmed that a Bushel of Wheat was fold for ten Rix-Dollars, resolved to pass the Borystbenes. It was here the Czar waited for him, pleafed to fee his Enemy on that Side the River, in a Country where he was neither to hope for Succours, or a fafe Retreat. He judged it not adviseable to come to a general Engagement, in which if he had been unfuccefsful, he must have given his Enemy an Entrance in the very Bosom of his Dominions: But resolved to make War like the Cossacks, that is, by dividing his Troops into many Bodies, attacking in every where, and every where retreating and wasting the Country, where the Enemy defigned to purfue him. It was thus the Russians continually harrassed the Savedish Army, often coming to Blows with them, and frequently with Advantage. At the Passage of Czarnanapata, there was a Recounter, sharp and bloody, between the Troops commanded by Prince Galiczin, and fix of the best Regiments of the Swedish Army, under Major General Rosen, whom the King of Sweden had detached, to be posted on the Banks of that River, at a Place covered with a little Morafs, where he defigned to attempt the Passinge. Prince Gallicein, with 8 Bittalions and 3 Squadrons, who had been obliged to difmount, by reason of the Badness of the Way, passed the River, being favoured by a thick Fog, that prevented their being discovered. They kept firm, and the Skirmish was tharp on both Sides, till the Fog being dislipated, shewed the Swedes that they were environed on all Sides, which obliged them to retreat fighting. The Ruffians following, took from them 6 Colours and two Standards. The Czar was fo well fatisfied with what Prince Galliczin had done, that he gave him the Order of St. Andrew. The Russians had about 600 Men killed, and 1000 wounded; but the Enemy loft a far greater Number. When the other Savediff Troops faw these Regiments, which were looked upon as the best in their Army, return in fuch Diforder, they began to think they were not invincible; and that, to their own Cost, they had learned the Rulfians the Art of War. A few Days after, the Coffacks and Ruffian Calmucks, Supported by 7000 Dragoons, fell upon the Baggage of the left Wing of the Savedes, over which they obtained some flight Advantage: Two Aides de Camp were killed near the King's Person: He himself had a Horse shot under him; and while one of his Equeries was prefenting him with another, both the Equery and the Horse were shot on the Spot. Many of his Officers, who came to his Relief, were killed or taken Prifoners, and only five left near him, when, fighting on Foot, and half Spent with Fatigue, he was difengaged by Colonel Dardoff, who broke through the Calmucks to rescue him. Maugre all these Obstacles, Charles advanced almost as far as Smoleniko, in the Road to the Capital of Muscouy, where he hoped to meet with as many Adherents, and as much Provision as in Poland: But being deceived in thefe, he found his Defign of marching to Moscow at present impracticable, though he thought it at first no Difficulty to perform. For when the Czar, to prevent his Country's being made the Seat of War, had before this fent him Proposals of Peace, he received this haughty Answer; That be awould treat with his Brother Peter at Moscow. Finding, however, so much Difficulty in this Undertaking, he turned on a sudden towards the Ukrain, where he thought he should be able to support his Troops by the Assistance of the Hettman Mazeppa, who had entered into a private Treaty with him, and designed to revolt from the Czar, in revenge for an Affront he put upon him at his Table, by calling him Traitor, for having opposed a Proposal made by his Majesty, to bring the Cossacks under more Subjection. Mazeppa resented this so strongly, that he engaged himself to bring over 30,000 Men to the King of Saveden, and assured him, by his Favourite Bistniski, that the People of the Ukrain were so much discontented with the Czar, that they would readily assord any Assistance to oppose him.

The Czar, who knew nothing of this intended Revolt, being informed that the King of Sweden had left a Body of his Forces in Poland, and had ordered Leurvenbaupt to leave Livonia and Courland, and join his own Army, thought it absolutely necessary, if possible, to prevent this Conjunction. Believing that Leuwenbaupt's Troops were not above 8 or 9000 Men, he put himself at the Head of his Guards, confifting of 7000, whom he caused to mount on Horseback, and with some Regiments of Dragoons marched in Person to meet him. Leuwenhaupt had passed the Borystbenes, and was continuing his March about 3 Leagues beyond Mobilow, when his Czarish Majesty, with Prince Menzikoff, and General Goltz, came to an Action with him on the 7th of October, in which 1500 Muscovites were killed, and very few of the Swedes. The latter, in all Appearance, would have gained a compleat Victory, had not the Czar, when he faw his Troops begin to fall back, ran to the Coffacks and Calmucks, posted in the Rear of the Army, and ordered them to fire on all those who should offer to run away. In this Manner above 50 Muscowites being killed, the Army, which was already in great Confusion, stopped. General Lewwenhaupt seeing the Muscovites begin to rally, thought fit to continue his March towards the King: But this was of too much Conlequence. Chap. 6. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 119 fequence for the Czar to suffer, if he could possibly prevent it.

The next Day the Czar had again Sight of the Enemy on the Banks of the River Pronia; and the Enemy made as if they would oppose his Passage; but no sooner were 7 Field Pieces brought up to cannonade them, then they struck off towards the Village of Lezno. About 4 in the Morning, the Army began to march, and about 9, at some Distance from Lezno, met the Enemy, who had fent fome Parties before for Intelligence, Leuwenhaupt was no fooner informed of the Approach of the Russians, than he drew up his Army in Order of Battle; caufing two Battalions to advance 1000 Paces before his Camp, to dispute their Passage through a small Morass. Upon this the Czar gave order to Prince Menzikoff, to fend Colonel Campbel, with his Dragoons difmounted to attack the Enemy's two Battalions, who made fo quick a Fire upon the Russians, that they had hardly Time to form themselves in Order of Battle. These disinounted Dragoons having flood the Fire for fome Time, the Czar caused them to be supported by 4 Battalions of his Guards, and 2 of Ingria, who pouring in their Shot upon the 2 Swediff Battalions, killed above half of them, and gained the Passage. General Leunvenhaupt, perceiving his Van-Guard was beaten, caused his Army to move up, to prevent the Rushans drawing up in Batalia. Then his Czarish Majesty, observing that the Enemy's Line extended wider than his, immediately caused several Regiments to strengthen his Wings. These Dispositions being made about 11 a clock, the Signal for attacking was given by a general Discharge of all the Artillery. The Enemy began to advance with great Fierceness and Resolution; and the Fight being hot and obflinate for above an Hour and a Half, Victory hung in fulpence. During the terrible Fire which was every where made, his Czarish Majesty appeared in the Places of most Danger, to animate the Officers and Soldiers; and the Enemy observing how well the Muscovites acquitted themselves under the Eye of their Monarch, begun to give Ground; yet drew off in Order of Battle,-The Muscovites then redoubled their Efforts, to improve that Advantage. The Enemy being driven back to their their Baggage, Action was for some Time forborn on both Sides. About 3 o'Clock the Cannon of the Ruffians coming up, they began to play again. General Baur being within half a League of the Czar, with 4000 Men, thought fit to wait a little for his Arrival, which was about 4. He was obliged to endure the Fire of the Enemy's Artillery before he could join the Right, where he was to post himself. After this Junction, his Czarish Majesty ordered that neither the Right nor the Left should renew the Fight one without the other: But the left Wing having flood a good while without attacking, the Impatience of the Troops superfeded that Order. The right Wing renewed the Attack likewife with the utmost Vigour. The Enemy seeing themselves repulsed, caufed 2 Battalions and 10 Squadrons of their Referve to charge the Right of the Ruffians in Flank: But they were fo well received, and afterwards fo closely purfued, that not above 50 Men of the 2 Battalions escaped. Upon this Advantage, the Left and the Centre pushed forwards amongst the Enemy's Waggons, breaking all their left Wing. On their Right Leuwenbaupt, rallying his Troops, faced the Muscovites, who were among their Waggons, and caused such a Fire to be made, as obliged them to retire: But the Centre and left Wing advanced at the fame Time against the Enemy, who were obliged to face to the Right about, to make head against them. The Charge was renewed with greater Fury than before, both by the Horse and Foot; and their Fire, which the Enemy answered duly, did not cease till it was dark Night. Then his Czarish Majesty, confidering the Difficulty of diflodging them from behind their Waggons, forbid the Officers on Pain of being cashier'd, and the Soldiers of being hanged, to quit their Ranks to rifle the Dead: So the Army kept all Night under Arms, watching the Enemy. In the mean Time the Trophies of the Day were presented to his Majefly, confifting of 47 Colours and 10 Standards: And 16 Cannons which they had gained, where added to his Train of Artillery.

Thus they passed the Night, which was very cold. Towards the Morning they saw the Enemy kindle Fires about their Waggons; upon which the Czar ordered that Fires should be made in the Front of his right Line, and that his Men should hold themselves in a Readiness against Day-break. They marched towards the Enemy's Waggons, expecting to meet no lefs Reliftance than before: But they found that Leuwenhaupt had made Use of that Stratagem to cover his Flight, abandoning all his Wounded to the Muscovites, as well as the 7000 Waggons loaded with Provisions, General Pflug was immediately ordered, with 1000 Grenadiers on Horseback, and 2000 Dragoons, to pursue and harrass the flying Enemy. He had not marched above half a League, when he found the Remains of them in a Wood; and falling upon them, made a flaughter among them for a League and a half, to Propoulk; where the rest of the Run-a-ways, to the Number of 3000. retired into the Church-yard. The General advancing here to force them, they made a Signal that they were defirous to capitulate; and he fent a Lieutenaut Colonel. with 6 Grenadiers, to receive their Offers: But most of the Swedish Soldiers, being drunk with Brandy, would not agree to their Officers Propositions; and many of them firing, killed two of the Russian Grenzdiers. The Lieutenant Colonel retiring, General Pflug refolved not to spare them. The Muscovites entered the Churchyard, and, Sword in Hand, killed all that refifted. A Party flying towards the River Soza, General Mikusch purfued them two Hours, and faw Count Leurvenbaupt fwimming through the River among his Men: Whereupon he swam it with his Detachment, and coming to the other Side, most of the Swediff Officers begged Mercy, and he gave them Quarter; but caused the Soldiers to be put to the Sword, and then rejoined General Pflug. Leuwenhaupt passed the Soza, and fled with about 4000 Men, all that were faved from the Wreck of the Day. General Renchild, with Sooo Dragoons, bad just joined him, when General Towerden had fallen upon his Rear Guard, who made head against him, and obliged him to retire. The King of Saveden was then at Starodub on the Dezna. His Czarith Majesty, after returning Thanks to Heaven for fo complete a Victory, gave Orders to re-establish those Regiments which had 122 The HISTORY of Book I.

fuffered the most, and reposed himself for some Time at Zizirt.

The King of Sweden had nothing left now but to join Mazeppa. That Coffack, as I before observed, being resolved to defert the Czar, was charmed with the many Actions of Charles XII. whom he looked upon as another Alexander. To bring the whole Army into his Defign, he began with exaggerating all that they suffered from the Rulfian Ministers, praised their own Actions and Magnanimity, endeavoured to shew them the Happiness of an independant Government; and lailly told them, what they might expect from that glorious young Hero, who was coming to deliver them from the Burthen they groaned under. To give some Appearance of Justice to their Revolt, they agreed to fend Remonstrances to the Czar against his Ministers; and for the Execution of this dangerous Commission, they named Warnarowski, the Hettman's Nephew. The Czar, by this Time, was informed of the Conduct of Mazeppa; he knew also that his Favourite Bistnisky was with the King of Sweden. In the present State of Affairs, however, he judged it proper to difguife his Refentment, contenting himfelf to watch the Coffacks by the Army of Prince Menzikoff, who posted himself advantageously between his Army and that of the Swedes: But when the Czar faw Warnarowski, instead of giving him Audience, he had him clapt up in Prison.

Maxeppa, informed of what had happened to his Nephew, doubted no longer that all his Intreagues were discovered; and therefore, to fave his Head, used his utmost Endeavours to join the Swedish Army. As Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoff was in Novogorod with a very strong Garrison, the King of Sweden found it no easy Matter to pass the Dexna; and Mazeppa, who thought all depended upon his delivering up to him Batturin, his Capital, made hafte to cross that River, under Pretence of attacking a Body of Savedes that were on the opposite Banks. As foon as he was over, he discovered to the Soldiers his Defign, to which only the Officers as yet were privy. His Men, on the Inflant, protested against any such Project, and retired; nay, some of them deliberated whether they ought not to arrest their Geseral, fo that he had only Time, with about 2000 Men, to throw himself into the Swedis Camp at Sezeptaka. Two of his Colonels had entered Batturin, with some thousand Men, to deliver up that City to the King of Sweden. The rest of the Coffacks went over to Prince Menzikoff, who immediately made himself Master of Batturin, which was ordered to be burnt to the Ground. A Council of War being convoked, they paffed Sentence on the Hettman, which his Czarish Majesty ordered to be put in Execution. An Herald tore his Patent of the Knighthood of St. Andrew, and threw the Pieces on the Ground; took from of a wooden Statue, made for the Occasion, the blue Ribbon and Medal of the Order, and then threw down the Statue. The Hangman came next, ty'd a Halter about the Neck of the Statue, and dragged it to the Place of Execution; where the Sentence against him was read aloud; and he thereby declared to be fallen from his Honours and Dignities, and to be condemned to be hanged. The Hangman tore in Pieces the Arms of his Family, broke the Scymitar, and hung the Statue on a Gibbet. This done, the principal Coffacks repaired to the great Church; and, after divine Service, they aftembled in the Church-yard, and proceeded to the Election of a new Hettman, which fell upon John Skiropatsky, who was declared with the Acclamations of the Assembly. The new General, accompanied by a great Number of Officers, went immediately and prostrated himself at the Feet of the Czar, who confirmed his Election.

About this Time an Affair happened in London, which had like to have created a Mifunderstanding between the Czar and the Queen of Great-Britain; the Ambaffador of the former being arrefled in the Street by one Morton, a Lace-Man in Covent - Garden, and other Tradefmen, who had a Jealoufy of his defigning to leave the Kingdom without paying his Debts: But this Difference not being determined till some Time after, we shall refer the Account of it to the following Book, and return at prefent to the Ukrain. Here the King of Sweden was at a Distance from all Possibility of Relief. except from Stanislaus in Poland, who found too much Employment there, and knew too well the Hazard of marching into the Ukrain. In short, all Things now con-Toured.

spired to ruin the King of Sweden's Army. The Winter. which was a very remarkably cold one even in England, was fo sharp in those Parts, that above 2000 of the Swedish Soldiers perished merely by the Extremity of the Weather. The greatest Part of the Troops were without Boots, Shoes, or Clothes, and very often all of them wanted Bread. But notwithstanding this Abatement of Charles's Strength, the Czar, at the Defire of some Swedish Prisoners, released an Officer upon his Parole, to endeavour once more to prevail upon him to agree to a Cartel for exchanging Prisoners, which was what he had obstinately refused during the whole War. The Counts Piper and Hermelin, confidering the declining Condition of their Master's Affairs, charged the Swedish Officer, when he returned, to infinuate, that if proper Propofals of Peace were offered, the King of Sweden might liften to them : Which when his Czarish Majesty was told, he fent the same Officer back again, with a Letter from Count Golowin to Count Piper, and Proposals for an Accommodation on very moderate Terms. But Charles: whose Army was now reduced to 28,000 Men, absolutely refused to treat; renewed his Intentions of penetrating as far as Moscow, and, with this View, at the latter End of May, laid Siege to Pul-Jowa, a Town upon the River Vorklat, on the Eastern Borders of Ukrania. But neither the Valour of the Savedes, nor the Intelligence that Mazzeppa had in the Town, could give him Success. Nor could he prevent Menzikoff from throwing Succours into the Place, which made the Garrison near 10,000 strong. With the Difficulties of the Undertaking the Resolution of the King of Sweden increased: He pressed the Siege warmly, and had already taken the Courtine, when he himself received a Wound in his Heel; and immediately after was told, that the Czar was coming up with an Army, at leaft double the Number of his own, confifting of fresh Troops well clothed and fed, and thoroughly experienced in the Art of War. His Wound prevented his Acting himself with the same Vigour that was usual to him; He found himself inclosed between the Borysthenes and the River of Pulsowa, and hemmed in by a large Army. In this Extremity he fent for Renchild into his Tent Tent in the Night, and then with great Serenity gave him Orders to attack the Czar the next Morning. Renchild, though fomewhat surprised at the Resolution, made no Reply, knowing it was in vain to dispute.

On the 27th of June, 1709, very early in the Morning, the Action between the two Armies began. About-25,000 Swedes came out of their Trenches, and marched directly against the Czar's Army, which were then beginning to form their Camp. The Generals Renchild; Leuwenhaupt, Field, Schlippenbach, Hoorn, Sparre, Hamilton, the Prince of Wirtemberg, and others who hadmost of them been at the Battle of Narva, put their Subalterns and Soldiers in Mind of that Day, when 8000 Swedes had overcome 100,000 Mnscovites in their Intrenchments. The King, on Account of his Wound, was obliged to be carried in a Litter at the Head of his Foot. The Swedish Horse fell upon the Enemy's Squadrons with their wonted Fury; and the Muscovites fell. back in some Disorder. The Czar himself, running to rally them, had his Hat shot through, and Prince Menzikoff had no less than three Horses killed under him. Upon this Charles made no doubt but the Battle would be gained, especially if General Creutz, whom he had detached with 5000 Men, had fell upon the Enemy's Flank : but Creutz went out of the Way, and Marched off. The Czar had now Time to rally his Horse, with which he fell upon the King's Cavalry in his Turn, and that not being supported by Creutz, was broken, and Schlippenbach taken in the Engagement. The Ruffians, opening from their Lines, advanced to attack the Swediff Infantry, 72 Pieces of Cannon playing upon them at the same Time. The Swedish Artillery was only 4 indifferent Mortar Pieces, they having left the rest in their Camp, with about 3000 Men. The Czar, with an extraordinary Presence of Mind, detached Prince Menzikoff to post himself between Pultowa and the Swedes: By which Means he cut off all Communication between the Troops in the Camp and the rest of the Swedish Army. And Menzikoff afterwards meeting with the 3000 Men which were a Corps de Rejerve, he furrounded and cut them to Pieces. G 3

When

When the Mufcovites Foot were come out of their Lines, the Czar was in the Center of his Army. He had yet no higher Title than Major General; but on this Occasion, he went from Rank to Rank, to encourage his Men, and promife them Rewards. Charles, on his Side, by the Affiftance of General Renchild, put his Army in the best Disposition he could: He endeavoured to fit his Horse, but finding himself unable, got into his Litter again. The Battle was renewed about o o'Clock, and almost at the Beginning of it, the King of Saveden's Litter was shattered to Pieces with a Cannon Ball, and he himself overturned. When the Savedes faw their King fall, they immediately gave way, and all were put to the Sword. A fingle Line of 10,000 Muscovites now routed the Swedish Army; and this one Action loft the redoubted Charles XII. the Fruits of q glorious Campaigns, and the Title of Invincible. He would if he had been able, have rallied some of his Regiments; but the Muscovites pursued them too closely. The Generals Renchild, Hamilton, and Stakelberg were taken Prisoners already, with the Prince of Wirtemberg, All was in Confusion; the Camp was forced: Count Piper, and most of the Officers of the Chancery had quitted it, and knew not what was become of their King, but wandered about till they were all taken.

The very fame Day the Battle was fought, the Czar wrote an Account of it himself to the Veldt-Mareschal Goliz. Towards the End of his Letter, his Majesty expresses himself thus: "To say all in a Word, the Enemy's whole Army has had the Fate of Phaeton. We do not know yet what is become of the Person of the King of Sweden, or whether he is living, or with our Fathers deceased." But when his Majesty was told that the King of Saveden's Litter was found, all broken to Pieces, he expressed an extraordinary Concern for the Fate of that Prince, whose Bravery he always admired, and ordered that his Body should be fought for among the Dead. Charles, tho' no way able to defend himself, was yet unwilling to fly, till persuaded by Mullern his Chancellor to cross the Borysthenes, and go to Turky. But before he listened to this Advice, he was willing, for the first Time, to try what might be effected by Negotiation; and therefore, between his own Defeat and the Surrender of the Forces at Peregoobeana, he fent Major General Meyerfeldt to his Czarish Majesty, to let him know, That he would accept of the Peace which he had feveral Times offered him, and if that was refused, he defired to go freely out of his Country, and retire into Poland. The Czar, furprized at this Language, answered, That the King of Sweden had thought too late of coming into the Treaty of Peace. feveral Articles of which were now to be altered : And that, as he had penetrated into his Country, without confidering the Confequences, it was his Bufinefs at prefent to think which Way he should get out of it. But that, far from fetting them at Liberty, he should forthwith fend to take the Birds that were caught in his Net. A Trumpet was charged with this Answer; but Meyerfeldt was put under arreft, not only for coming without a Pafiport, but as he was before taken Prifoner, and enlarged only on a Condition which was not complied with.

Charles, finding that this pretended Moderation had no Effect on the Czar, prepared to follow she Advice of his Chancellor. He was obliged, on Account of his Wound, to go in a Coach that had belonged to General Meyerfeldt, drawn by 12 Horses. Having wandered about with his few People, and fasted so long that they were in Danger of periffing, they at last arrived on the Northern Side of the Box, about a League from Cracow; from whence the King fent to the Bashaw of the Place, to make his Compliments, and defire Leave to pass through the Ottoman Territories under his Government. The Bashaw. with great Civility, made him an Offer of Refreshments, and gave Orders, that all the Boats that could be met with should be got together for the King's and his People's Passage. There not being a sufficient Number of Boats to carry them all, about 500 Men were left on that Side the River, who were foon after taken Prifoners by General Walkowisky, even in Sight of the King of Sweden, just landed on the other Side. The Czar had fent this General in Pursuit of the Swedes, and, having now learnt what was become of the King, did not much doubt of his being brought Prisoner with the rest :

G

For he was pleased to say to the Swedish Generals who were his Prisoners. That he avanted his Brother Charles to keep them Company; but he had fent Walkowisky to fetch bim.

As foon as Prince Menzikoff came within Sight of Perewoloczna, where General Leuwenhaupt was encamped with the Swedish Troops that had escaped the Battle, he fummoned him to lay down his Arms, or expect no Quarter. The General, feeing no possible Means of retreating, and having the King's Orders not to drive Things to the last Extremity, sent Major General Creutz, Colonel Duker, Lieutenant Colonel Transfetter, and Adjutant General Douglas, to endeavour to obtain fome advantageous Terms, and especially to take care of the Sick and Wounded that were with him. These Officers executed their Commission so well, that the Rushan General concluded with them the following Capitulation. That all the Swedish Troops, who are commanded by Count Leuwenbaupt, as well Officers as Soldiers, should, with their Servants, yield themselves Prifoners of War. That all private Soldiers should lay down their Arms and remain Prisoners of War till their Exchange or Ranfom; but they should keep their Mounting, and their Horses, except those belonging to the Officers. That all the General and other Officers should keep their Baggage and Equipages, and their Persons should be released without Ransom or Exchange. as foon as Peace should be made between the Czar and the King of Sweden: In the mean Time they should be honourably used, and permitted to go to their own Country, on their Parole. That the Swedish Artillery. Ammunition, Colours, Standards, and Instruments of Mufick, should be delivered to his Czarish Majesty; as should likewise the Military Chest of the King of Sweden, in the State it now is. That the Zaporogians, and other Rebels, now among the Troops of Sweden, should be delivered to his Czarish Majesty. That all the Officers should not only retain their Baggage, but likewise their Servants; and the Commissaries, Auditors, Secretaries, Chaplains, and Surgeons, should likewife be permitted to keep their Baggage and Servants.

When his Czarish Majesty was informed of the King of Sweden's having passed the Borysthenes, he wrote another Letter to General Goltz, then in the Volhinia, where he commanded 20,000 Men, with Orders to intercept and take Prisoner the vanguished Monarch. At the same Time the King of Sweden dispatched a Letter to General Crassau, wherein, after having informed him of his Difaster, he commanded him to leave Poland, and fave his Troops in the best Manner he could.

The Czar, being informed by Prince Menzikoff of the good Success he had at Perewologna, went himself: to that Place, where he arrived at the very Instant that the beforementioned Capitulation was executed. The Fate of so many unhappy Men touched him very sensibly, and that he more than once expressed his Disapprobation of the Conduct of a Prince, who could facrifice in fuch a Manner, fo many faithful Subjects, of whom he ought to have been the Father and Protector. The greatest Part of the Swedish Prisoners were dispersed in the Czar's Dominions, and great Numbers fent to Siberia, which Country received great Improvements from their inhabiting there, and fetting up divers Trades and Manufactures for their Support. As for the Officers, his Czarish Majesty entertained them with great Civility, and treating some of them at his own Table with that Affability that was fo natural to him, he drank a Health to his Mafter s in the Art of War. Renchild asked who those were that his Majesty was pleased to honour with so great a Title? " It is yourselves, Gentlemen, the Swedish Generals," replied the Czar. "Then, faid Renchild, is not your Majesty a little ungrateful, to treat your Mafters fo feverely?" Upon which his Majefty ordered all their Swords to be returned to them. His Majesty had defired to know of Renchild . what Number of Men he thought the King of Saveden could have brought into the Field; and upon Reuchild's telling him, about 19,000 Swedes, and 11,000 Coffacks; How was it possible, faid he, that a Prince so prudent as the King of Sweden, could venture himself with such a Handful of Men in a strange Country, and especially fuch a one as this? To which Renchild answered, that he and the other Generals were not always confulted about the Operations of the War, but thought themselves obliged, obliged, as faithful Subjects, to obey their King without any Contradiction. This Expression of Duty pleased the Czar fo much, that taking his Sword from his own Side. he prefented it to Renchild. His Czarish Majesty likewife shewed a great Regard for Count Piper; and that none of the Prisoners of Distinction might want any Thing, he divided them among his Generals.

G 5

His Majesty thought next how he should reward the Valour and good Conduct of his own Officers; on which Account he made feveral very confiderable Promotions: Prince Menzikoff was made Velt-Mareschal General, Count Golofskin Grand Chancellor, Ronne Chief General, Baron Schafroff Vice-Chancellor; the Princes Repnin and Gregory Dolgoruki had the Blue Ribbon of the Order of St. Andrew. The other Officers were advanced in Proportion to their Rank and Services, and his Majesty ordered proper Rewards to all the Soldiers. Among all these Promotions he did not forget himfelf: Alledging at this Time, as Proofs of his Valour, that he had taken a Swedilb General Prisoner in the Heat of the Engagement, and had a Ball shot through his Hat, he was made a Major General. The rebel Coffacks came to him to make their Submission, and he was pleased to grant them his Pardon, on Condition that they laid down their Arms, and that Quarter should be given to none of them found under Arms in that Campaign. At the same Time he promifed a Reward of 10,000 Roubles, to whoever should bring in old Mazeppa dead or alive.

It is easy to imagine how this important News was received at Moscow. The Czarowitz ordered Feasts and publick Rejoycings, in which all the foreign Ministers and all the People had Part; and, in Hopes that his Czarish Majesty would foon visit his Capital, 30 triumphal Arches were erected in the Streets, thro' which it was supposed he would pass: But Affairs of great Moment called him elfewhere. He took Care, however, as foon as possible, to acquaint the Emperor of Germany, the King of Prussia, King Augustus, the States of Holland, and the Duke of Marlborough, with this great Success of his Arms. And I cannot better conclude this First Book of his History, than at a Period which shews him in fo glorious a Light, as the Conqueror of a Prince who had made himself formidable to all THE the Powers in Europe.

THE

HISTORY

OF

PETER The Great, CZAR of MUSCOVY.

The SECOND BOOK.

CHAP. I.

The Czar offers Peace, which Charles rejects. Augustus returns into Poland. His Interview with the Czar at Thorn. The Czar meets the King of Prussia at Marienwerder. Riga bombarded. The Czar's Entry into Moscow, Satisfaction made for the Affrant offered his Ambassador in London. The present Czarina married to the Duke of Courland, Elbing, Wybourg, Riga, Dunamuden-Skantz, Pernau, Kexholm, Revel, and the whole Province of Lyonia, reduced to the Obedience of the Czar.

ETER the Great, who fought not to found his Empire in Blood, but to cultivate the Arts of Peace for the Prosperity and Happiness of his People, enlarged Major-General Meyerfield! soon after the Victory of Poltowa, with Permission to go to the King his Master, and sent Cederhielm, Charles's Secretary, to the Senate at Stockholm, with very moderate Proposals for a Treaty. Count Piper at the same Time wrote Letters to the King on that Subject. The Czar infifted only on the Province of Ingria, and Part of that of Carelia, which were already conquered, as a Satisfaction for the Expences of the War. The Fortress of Wybourg, and the Town of Revel, were likewise demanded, but only with an Intention to be able to abate fomething during the Negotiation But the King of Sweden, distressed as he was, still retaining his high Spirit, wrote a Letter to Count Piper, in which he called thefe Proposals, The impudent Pretensions of a forfworn Enemy; and ordered Piper, in the Style of a Conqueror, to take proper Measures that the Czar might set all his Prisoners at Liberty; notwithstanding he himself could never before this Time, be prevailed upon to establish a Cartel for that Purpose; tho' the Czar had taken much Pains about it.

His Czarish Majesty, finding that no Peace was to be made with this implacable Enemy, but by the Force of Arms, thought it would be most effectual to carry the War into the King of Sweden's own Dominions; and gave fresh Orders to his Ministers at the Courts of Denmark and Saxony, to use their utmost Endeavours to bring the Negotiations to a Conclusion for an Alliance against that Prince. He knew his own Presence would be necessary in Poland, and therefore crossed the Borysthenes; but, from the Fatigues he had lately undergone, he sell sick at Kiow, and was obliged to stop there for some Relief.

The Victory at Pultowa was so extraordinary, that it was not believed for some Time on the other Side the Vistula; but when it was no longer doubted, the Primate Szembeck, and others, who had retired out of the Kingdom, held several Conferences, and sent a Deputation to King Augustus, to defire he would re-ascend the Throne. He was with little Difficulty brought to accept an Invitation of that Kind, having before resolved to make an Attempt to recover his Crown, seeing the Disorders of the Swedish Affairs, even before the Deseat of their Army. In order to which he had several Conferences with the King of Denmark, who in his Return from Italy, paid him a Visit at Dresden, from whence they went together to Berlin, where the 3 Kings concerted all Things relating to the Return of Augustus. Before that Monarch entered Poland, he published a long Manifesto, drawn up in Concert with the Czar's Plenipotentiaries; wherein he makes his coming back to the Trone a Point of Conscience, and vindicates the Constancy and Friendship of the Czar, as much as he exposes the Ambition, Obstinacy, and Tyranny of the King of Sweden. He gives the Reason likewise of his own Conduct, particularly with Relation to the famous Treaty of Alt-Ranstadt, and what followed upon it, which fo amazed all Europe, and fo highly incenfed the Czar. But his Russian Majesty, by this Time, was so well fatisfied of the Necessity of Augustus's Affairs, which drove him to accept of any Terms for the Preservation of his People, that he was again united to him in Friendthip. And now, during his own Illness at Kiow, he fent fome Regiments into Poland, to join General Goltz, and ordered others to march to Riga, and block up that Place. On his Recovery, which was foon, he fet out himself to execute his Defigns; and learned on the Road, that Major General Craffau and King Stanislaus. upon the News of the Defeat of the Swedilb Army. had prefently retired to the Frontiers of Pomerania. The Czar arrived at Lublin on the 5th of September, 1709, with the Hereditary Prince, and many Persons of Diffinction; and the same Evening the Princes Menzihoff, Golowin, and Dolgoruki, the Sieur Oginski Velt-Mareschal of Lithuania, and several other Generals. arrived in the fame Town; as did the next Day Velt-Mareschal Golez, having left his Army at a small Diflance on the other Side the River, where the Czar the next Day reviewed it. His Majesty held a Council here, when 1000 Dragoons were ordered to be detached to go towards Warfaw, to fecure fome Polts on the Road, and 400 more were lent to take a Post onthe Viftula. From hence his Majesty thought proper to publish a Declaration, in order to second the King's Manifelto, fummoning all those of the adverse Party, to come in and unite themselves with the Republick and their, lawful Sovereign, within the Space of four Weeks.

Augustus now passed the Oder, in his Way to Thorn, a Town in Royal Prussia, but under the Protection of the Poles, where a grand Council was affembling, and where the Czar had agreed to have an Interview with him. The Troops of his Czarish Majesty being divided, took the Routs of Lithuania and Livonia, and he himself approaching Thorn on the 8th of October, with a numerous Train, King Augustus went about half a League up the Vistula, to meet his Restorer. The Czar went into the King's Yacht, and the King complimented him on the glorious Victory he had gained. The Czar folicited the King on his Return, without any Reproaches on the Affair of Alt-Ranfadt, or any other: For these Augustus had taken Care to prevent, by the Manner in which he treated the Ruffian Plenipotentiaries, and the Reafons which he alledged in his Manifesto. Their Majesties being landed, the Czar received the Compliments of the Magistrates, and after having returned them an Answer by Chancellor Golowin, went with Augustus to the House that was prepared for him, thro' the continual Acclamations of the People. The Saxon Ministers afterwards made their Compliments, and affured his Czarish Majefly, that they had always made their Vows to Heaven for the Success of his Arms; but had never dared to hope it would have been fo complete. To which he answered; Your Vows, Gentlemen, were proportioned to the Weakness of Men, but God has given me a Victory rubich sherus bis own Omnipotence.

The Grandees of Poland likewife fent a Deputation to Thorn, to congratulate him, in the Name of the Republick, on the total Defeat of his Enemy. To whom he made Answer, " That no body had gained more by the Bleffing which God had beflowed on his Arms, than the Republick, fince by that they had their lawful King reftored to them." The Senators then proposed, "That his Majesty should leave but 12,000 Men in Poland, because the Country was so ruined, that it could not maintain a greater Number: That the Ruffians should give an Account to the Proprietors of the Management of their Estates, which they had seized: That his Majesty should restore to the Republick their Fortresses in the Polish Ukrain; and that he should set Prince Weifmowifi at Liberty, whom he had imprisoned, with others ;"

Chap. 1. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 135

thers;" who deferting the Confederation of Sendomir, to embrace the Party of Stanislaus, had been the Occasion of many of those Evils which the Confederates had since suffered. His Czarish Majesty only answered, That the Laws of their Kingdom would not permit of any Foreign Power to intermeddle with their Demestick Assairs: But made no Reply to the Proposition of restoring the Places in the Ukrain, which in effect he had conquered by driving the Savedes out of that Province.

The first Days of the Meeting between Peter and Augullus were spent in Feafting and Rejoycing, during which Time the Czar appeared with a Sword by his Side, which Augustus had presented to the King of Saveden in Saxony, and which was found among the Baggage of that Prince, after the Battle of that Pultown. The Czar went all over the City on Foot, visiting every Place of Note, particularly the Church of the Jesuits. When the two Monarchs had taken those Measures they thought proper at Thorn, they parted, Augustus to return into Saxony, and the Czar to meet the King of Pruffig at Marienzuerder; who being arrived in that Town first, thro' very bid Roads, when he was informed that the Czar was coming down the Viffula, he went about half a Mile out of the Town, and received him at his Landing, giving him the upper Hand, and expressing all imaginable Respect. The two Princes got into the same Coach, in which fat also M. Keyferling, Envoy of the King of Prussia, and proceeded to the Castle, the Garrison and Burghers being on their Arms, and faluting them with three Salvocs. Prince Menzikeff and Count Wartemburg followed, and after them the chief Officers of both Monarchs, who dined together. The had some Conferences by themselves, and afterwards held a Council with their chief Ministers, in which was confirmed the Alliance before projected. Another Negotiation was likewife concluded here in Favour of the King of Pruffia, by which the Duke of Courland, his Nephew, had his Dutchy reflored to him, upon an Agreement of Marriage with the Czar's Niece.

The Crar left Marienwerder on the 5th of November, to go to Mittaw, in order to join his Generals, and regulate the Operations of his Troops, Velt-Marefehal

WEYE.

Czeremetoff arrived about this Time, near Poloczk, with 52,000 Men: His Vanguard, confifting of 7000, were advanced as far as Mittaw; upon whose Approach, General Stromberg, who commanded in Riga, recalled the Swedish Troops that were in Courland, whose Place was immediately taken by the Muscovite Lieutenant General Allard The Russian Troops which consisted of 120,000 Men in the whole, were capable of undertaking the most difficult Conquests, under so many experienced Generalsas they then had, commanded in Chief by Prince Menzikoff. Sixty-three Mortars, 300 Pieces of large Cannon, 60,000 Bombs followed this Army, ordered to rendezvous before Riga, the Magazine of Sweden, and its Bulwark on the Baltick Sea. General Stromberg, feeing himself surrounded by them on all Sides, began to burn the Suburbs, and demolish Fort Kobber; but before that he published a Kind of Universal, filled with Complaints of the Outrages of the Muscovites, and enjoining the Subjects of his Master not to put themselves under the Czar's Protection, but to oppose his Forces with all their Might. This Piece was answered by Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoff, who charges the Author of it with Arrogance, deniesthe Accufations it contains, and retorts them on the Swedes; concluding with these Words: " If the Governor expresses himself more modestly hereafter, I shall imitate his Stile."

When the Czar was arrived at Mittano, he gave Earto the Complainrs of the Courlanders, and greatly moderated the Contributions which his Generals had levied upon them. On the 21st of November he went to his-Army, and on the 25th came before Riga, where every Thing was ready for bombarding it, and his Majesty himfelf let fire to the first Bomb. The Magistracy fent out their Deputies, to divert, if possible, this Storm; butto no Purpose. The Czar continued but a short Time inthis Place, where no Honour was to be acquired : His Subjects impatiently expected him at Moscow, whitheran infinite Number of Foreigners were come to honour his Triumph. He therefore haftened his Journey thither, but took Petersburgh in his Way, where he gave Orders for the fitting out of fuch Ships as were to ferve in the enfuing Campaign, and for the forming fuch-Magazines.

Chap. 1. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 137

gazines at Narva, as he judged necessary to carry on the Siege of Riga. His Majesty also made very considerable Remittances to the King of Denmark, to enable him to push on the War against Sweden vigorously on that Side.

On the 11th of December, attended by Admiral Apraxin, and several of the Nobility, he arrived at a Country Seat called Kolomski, about 5 English Miles di-Rant from Moscow. Prince Menzikoff came thither on the 14th, and on 16th the whole Court took up their Lodgings in one of the Suburbs, separated from the Town by the River Moscow. His Majesty had appointed to receive the Compliments of all the foreign Miniflers on the 17th; but a great Fire happening in the Neighbourhood, the British Envoy was obliged to defer his Vifit till the Day following, when the Czar received him with great Distinction at Prince Menzikoff's Apartment, and conferred with him feveral Hours. Finding it was very inconvenient for the Court to stay long in a Place where they were fo ill accomodated, his Majesty gave Orders that the publick Entry into Moscow should be on the 21st, altho' the triumphal Arches, and other Preparations for this grand Ceremony, were not quite finished.

The Procession was begun by Prince Michael, eldest Son of Prince Galliczin, Lieutenant General, and Colonel of the Guarde, on Horseback, at the Head of the lonel of the Guards, on Horseback, at the Head of the Semionovoski Regiment of Foot, new clothed. The Prince's led Horses were followed by the Cannon, Colours, and Officers that were taken in the Battle against General Leuwenbaupt, closed by a Company of the Preobrazinski Horse-Guards richly mounted. The Prisoners taken in the Battle of Pultowa, and those furrendered by the Capitulation of Perevolouzea, marched in the next Place: The non-commissioned Officers led the Way; next to them the Ensigns and Second Lieutenants, then the Lieutenants, Captain Lieutenants, and the Captains of both the Horse and Foot. These were followed by the Officers and Attendants of the Train of Artillery, who preceded the Ordnance; after which were carried the Kettle-Drums and Colours. Then marched the Majors, Lieutenant Colonels, Colonels, and General Adjutants, who were succeed by the King of Sweden's Houshold and Equipage, together with the Litter and Bed that he used in the Day of Battle. After which came the chief Officers, in Number 10, each marching single. In the next Place came his Czarish Majesty, mounted on a stately English Horse, which had been prefented to him by King Augustus; having Prince Menzikoff on his right, and Prince Dolgorucki on his less Hand, both likewise on Horseback.

There were feven triumphial Arches erected in the City; at the first of which his Majesty was received by the Magistrates; at the second by Prince Gavarine Governor of the Town; at the third, by the Nobility; at the fourth, by the principal Merchants; at the fifth by the Clergy; and the fixth, by the Empresses Dowager. and the Princesses of the Blood; and at last, by the Burghers. The foreign Ministers had separate Houses allotted them for the Ceremony; and his Majesty made a short stop at the respective Places were they stood. The Cannon were fired feveral Times round the Town during the Procession, and the Whole was conducted with the utmost good Order and Magnificence. About 8 or good Prisoners were brought into the Town, upon this Occasion, the Day before. But the Officers of the King of Sweden's Foot Guards, not having arrived from Kiow foon enough to appear in this Triumph, were publickly conducted through the City a few Days after.

On the 1st Day of the New Year 1710, his Czarish Majefty treated all the chief Persons of Quality and foreign Ministers. In the Evening a sumptuous Fire-work was prepared on which where feveral Representations and Infcriptions, which all went off with great Exactness. The chief Machines were a Phaeton, flruck with a Thunder-bolt, and another Figure alluding to a Medal ftruck in Sweden. Two Pillars were first lighted, which supported imperial Crowns, and were adorned with a great Variety of blue, green, and pale Flames. When they had burnt fome Time, a Lion moved forward, on whose Approach the first Pillar broke short at the Pedestal: But as he advanced near the fecond, a spread Eagle, reprefenting the Czar's Arms, launched a Rocket, which blew up the Lion's Head and Neck, and the Pillar remained firm to the last. The Rejoicings at Moscow continued feveral Days; and his Majesty, amidst them, had the Pleasure to make publick the Satisfaction which the Queen of Great Britain had made him, for the Affront offered to his Ambaffador at London in the Year 1708. I mentioned this Affair at the End of the former Book. and promised more of it at this Period. M. de Matueof. the Ambassador, having been arrested as there related. and carried into an Alehouse as a Prisoner wrote in very high Terms concerning it to Mr. Secretary Boyle, and demanded fevere Satisfaction on the Offenders. Mr. Boyle endeavoured to pacify him by promising such Redress as the Laws of England would admit, and a Profecution was commenced by the Queen's Orders against the Persons concerned: But the Ambaffador, used to more summary and arbitrary Proceedings, could not brook the Delay of this Method, and in a few Days retired into Holland. where he fo ftrongly represented the Indignity to the Czar his Master, that his Majesty wrote concerning it to the Queen of Great Britain. The Persons were at length convicted in the Court of Queen's-Bench; but the Cafe being special and uncommon, and the Laws relating to Ambassadors being found imperfect, Chief Justice Holt refused to give Sentence on the Verdict, till it had been examined by the other Judges, and an Act of Parliament was passed to prevent any such Business for the future. In fine, this troublefome Affair was at last terminated by Mr. Whitworth, whom the Queen fent to Moscow for that Purpose, with the Character of Ambassador Extraordinary. He was introduced to the Czar with great Ceremony, at a Time when his Court was thus uncommonly splendid and after three Obeifances, his Excellency, standing with his Hat off, made a Speech in English, a Translation of which into German was read aloud by the Secretary of the Embaffy. Mr. Whitworth then delivered her Majefty's Letter, which, as it contains a full Reprefentation of the whole Affair, I shall here insert at Length.

tinucd

WE have already written to your Imperial Majefty, to declare to you the great Grief we conceived for the unhappy Affront which was offered to your Ambuffador, before he left our Court. We have fince received the Letter your Imperial Majefty wrote to usupon.

that Subject; and we can affure your Imperial Majefty, that we were touched with true Sorrow, when we faw how highly you refented the Violence which had been offered to your Imperial Majesty's own Person, in the Character of your Ambassador; and we were the more grieved on this Occasion, when we reflected on the Infufficiency of our Law, as to give as ample a Satisfaction as we defired to make, as well for the just Sense we ourfelf had of the Indignity which had been offered, as to convince your Imperial Majesty how much we were inclined to make a fuitable Raparation of the Injury done fo good a Friend and Ally. But we must confess, that at the same Time we had a singular Pleasure in observing your Imperial Majesty's Desire to prevent the Misunderitanding which might arise therefrom, and the great Esteem you shewed for our Friendship; as well as the Care you expressed to preserve and cultivate it, by reciprocal Marks of Friendship and Affection.

Wherefore, we promife ourfelf from your Goodness, that upon the Reprefentations which from Time to Time have been made to you in our Name, by our Envoy Extraordinary at your Imperial Court, your Imperial Majesty will be pleased to examine into the Nature of this Affair; where your Imperial Majesty will fee, that we have not the least Inclination to favour the Criminals, nor to screen them from Justice ; but that there are insuperable Difficulties, with respect to the antient and fundamental Laws of the Government of our People, which, we fear, do not permit fo fevere and rigorous a Sentence to be given, as your Imperial Majesty at first seemed to expect in this Case: And we perfuade ourfelf, that your Imperial Majesty, who are a Prince equally famous for Clemency and exact Juffice will not require us, who are the Guardian and Protectress of the Laws, to inflict a Punishment upon our Subjects, which the Law does not empower us to do.

Nevertheless, we have not been wanting, at the same Time, to use all the Means which we judged most esfectual, to persuade your Imperial Majesty, and the whole World, of the Sincerity of our Intentions and of our Endeavours in this Affair. And to the End te Guilty mighty be punished to far as the Laws and Conft:-

enocius

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Mulcovy. 141

tutions of our Kingdoms, which were then in Force, would permit, we gave express and repeated Orders to our Officers of Justice, and to our Ministers, to prosecute them with the utmost Severity.

The Profecution has been long continued with very great Diligence, and nothing has been omitted to bring it to as speedy a Conclusion as possible. But, after all, the Matter is such, that we find ourself obliged to inform your Imperial Majesty, That as well because of the different Pleadings in Favour of the Criminals; the slow, but indispensable Manners of proceeding in a Law-Suit of so great Importance; as of the Case itself, which is of an extraordinary Nature, against which no sufficient Provision is made in the antient Statues of these Kingdoms; it has not hitherto been in the Power of our Council learned in the Law, to obtain a Sentence, nor a final Decifion of this Affair.

Wherefore, confidering all these Inconveniencies, and forefeeing the Delays which might probably happen in the ordinary Course of Law; and defiring at the same Time, to give you fignal Marks of our Sorrow, as also to shew you the Indignation of all our Subjects on this Occasion, we have passed an Act of Parliament, made in the most folemn Manner, by the great Council and Affembly of our Kingdom of Great Britain, wherein is made a Declaration, as authentick as possible, of the just Horror which our Subjects in general have against this violent Infult; and all the Acts and Proceedings which relate to the Arrest of the Person of your Imperial Majefty's Ambaffador, are annulled and razed out of the Register of our Courts of Justice; and those who had a Share therein, are branded as infamous Criminals, and obnoxious to the Laws which were then in Force. And if any Person hereafter durst commit the like Offence, or any Ways violate the Privileges of Ambaffadors, and other foreign Ministers, they will be liable to the most fevere Penalties and Punishments, which the arbitrary Power of the Judges shall think fit to inflict upon them, and to which no Bounds are given in this new Act. So that all Infults of this Nature will be prevented for the future, and the Security which all Princes Ministers ought to enjoy, will be firmly established and preserved by this famous Law. And this will remain as a Monument to all Posterity, of the Deference which has been shewn to your Imperial Majesty; and all the Ministers which shall come for the future, will be indebted to this extraordinary Act for their Protection, to the particular Confideration which we and our People have for your Imperial Majetty's Honour. As therefore your Imperial Majesty cannot but see, that we have used our utmost Endeavours in profecuting the Criminals, and in causing them to be punished, tho' not with the Succefs we could have wished; and fince we have procured an Act to be made by the Representatives of all our Subjects of Great Britain, as well for Reparation of what has been done, as to prevent the like Infolences for the future; we instantly pray your Imperial Majetly to accept of all that we have done on our Side, as the most we could do here for your Satisfaction, whereby your Imperial Majesty will give us the strongest Proof that can be of your constant Affection towards us; and you may be affured, that we shall not fail on our Side, to do all that lies in our Power, on all Occafions, to shew you our Gratitude by our firm Friendship and Esteem.

And to the End that nothing may be omitted, which is in our Power to do farther, by way of fuitable Reparation, we have thought fit to make choice of some worthy and able Person, to declare to your Imperial Majesty in the most publick and solemn Manner, the Indignation we conceived at the Affront offered, and our Concern that it is not in our Power to cause the Criminals to be punished according to their Deferts. And as our Trusty and Well-beloved Mr. Charles Whitworth has merited our Royal Approbation, by his Ability and Experience in all the Affairs which have been introfted with him; as also by his good Conduct at your Imperial Majesty's Court, for several Years past; we have therefore given him a special Power and Commission to represent our Person, as our Ambassador Extraordinary upon this Occasion, and to make such Excuse and Declarations in our Name, as will, we hope, give your Imperial Majesty entire Satisfaction. And we do hereby defire your Imperial Majesty to be pleased to admit and receive the faid Mr. Charles Whitworth as our Ambassador Extraordinary for this End, and to give Credit to all that he shall say to you in our Royal Name, as if we were present to do it in Person. We will only add, as a Mark of our Esteem for your Ambassador himself, who suffered this Insult, that as we were sensible of his Personal Virtues and great Qualities during his Residence at our Court, so we were more particularly concerned, that such an Injury should be offered to a Gentleman of so great Merit and Consideration; being, besides, the Ambassador of so great a Prince, and so good an Ally. And so praying, that the great Dispenser of all good Things will vouchsafe to pour forth his Heavenly Benedictions upon the Person and Kingdom of your Imperial Majesty, we recommend you to his holy Protection.

Chap. 1. PETER I. Gzar of Muscovy. 143

Given at our Palace at Windfor, the— Day of August, 1709. Your Imperial Majesty's

Most affectionate Sister,

ANNE, R.

The Czar having received this Letter from the Hands of the Ambassador, delivered it to the Count de Golowin, Great Chamberlain of his Empire, and made the following Answer in his own Tongue.

I T was but requifite, that her Majesty the Queen, should have given Us Satisfaction, by punishing the Criminals conformable to our Demands, in the most rigorous Manner, as is the Custom in such Cases throughout the Universe; but seeing her Majesty has ordered you to make Excuses in the Quality of her Ambassador Extraordinary, conferred upon you expressly for this Purpose, and to remonstrate, that her Majesty could not inslict such a Punishment upon them, because of the Desect, in that Particular, of the former established Constitutions of her Kingdom; and that with the unanimous Consent of the Parliament, her Majesty has caused a new Act to be passed, to serve as a Law therein for the siture: We accept all this for a Proof of the Affection her Majesty has for us, and for sufficient Satisfaction a and we will give Orders to our Ministers to settle entirely this Affair with you in a Conference.

The Ambassador then retired backwards out of the Hall, making three Obeisances in the same Manner as when he came in, and was conducted back to his House with the same Ceremony, and accompanied by the Chief Carver and the Cup Bearer; the former of whom treated him three Days successively, by Order of his Czarish Majesty, with the greatest Magnissence, the Officers of his Majesty's Houshold serving at Table. After this his Excellency came to the House of Count Gollowin, Great Chamberlain, and there had a Conference with him, and other Ministers of the Czar, in which the Differences that had been occasioned by so ill an Accident were composed, and the antient Friendship between the two Crowns renewed, on Condition that the following Articles, which were stipulated, should be performed.

I. That his Czarish Majesty would send Orders to M. de Matueof, his Ambassador at the Hague, to notify provisionally, by a Letter to the Queen of Great Britain. that Mr. Whitworth being vested with the Character of her Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, expressly to make Excuses on Occasion of the Affront in Question, has performed that Commission, and that his Majesty has been pleased to accept the said Excuses made in her Name, for Satisfaction, with an Intention thereby to shew the high Value he puts upon the Friendship of her Britannick Majetty, and in hope of the like Return on her Part in Occasions wherein his Czarish Majesty may be concerned; and that, in Consequence hereof, his Czarish Majesty is willing to forget the Criminal Proceedings of the Authors and Accomplices of the faid Affront, and defires her Majesty the Queen to be pleafed to order them to be discharged from the Process issued against them, and from the Sentence pronounced.

II. His Czarish Majesty having a just Regard to the fignal Services which his said Ambassador has performed, and in a gracious Remembrance of the laudable Zeal of his deceased Father, first Minister and Boyar in

the

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

the Reign of his Czarish Majesty's Father and Grandfather, who, in exhorting Rebels to Obedience, crowned his Services with his Blood; he cannot but demand, after his own Satisfaction, the particular Satisfaction of his Minister, by the Expedient of a Letter from the Queen, and by the Re-imbursement of all the Costs and Damages which he had been obliged to be at, and to fuffer on Account of the faid Affront.

III. His Czarish Majesty will give Order to his said Ambassador to demand his Letter of Recredence, which he refused to accept when he left London, because of the aforefaid Affront.

IV. All that is above specified being executed, his Czarish Majesty will acquaint the Queen that he is content with the aforesaid Satisfaction, by a Letter which shall be delivered to her Ambassador.

Thus was the Difference between the Czar and the Queen of Great Britain, which began in July 1708, ended at the Beginning of February 1710, to the Satisfaction of both Crowns.

Soon after the Czar's Arrival in his Capital, his Niece Anne Joannowna, fourth Daughter of his elder Brother the Czar John, was married to the Duke of Courland, Frederick William. But the young Prince falling ill, left her a Widow a few Days after their Marriage. This Lady is at present Empress of Russia, and seems to have the Glory of her Country as much at Heart as the Great Peter her Uncle: While Dutchess Dowager of Courland, the gained the Love of her Subjects there as much as the has that of the Russians, and the Esteem and Admiration of the rest of the World.

About the fame Time his Majesty received News of the taking of Elbing, a confiderable Town in Polish Pruffia, where there was a Garrison of 8 or 900 Savedes. General Noslitz, at the latter End of January, being posted within three Russ Miles on the Avenues leading to the Town, kept it thut up in fuch a Manner, that nothing could be carried into it, nor any Person come out. As it froze very hard, and the double Fosse of the Town was covered with a thick Ice, the Ruffian Commandant formed a Defign of scaling it Sword in Hand. He commanded out 2000 Men, and divided them into Leve feven Bodies, to make fo many Attacks at 5 o'Clock in the Morning. Pursuant to this Order, after they had passed the Ditches, they scaled the Wall on the Side of the New Town, and entered the Place, notwithstanding the Fire of the Cannon, with which the Ramparts were well furnished, and the Opposition of the main Part of the Garrison. The Swedes were pushed to the Bridge of the Old Town, where for some Time they made an obflinate Refistance; but at last they were obliged to give way, and in the great Square of the Old Town Brigadier Balck made all the Garrison Prisoners, with the two Lieutenant Colonels who commanded them. tion was the bolder, because the Town was fortified with twelve Royal Bastions, two Ditches filled with Water, and a high Wall with Ramparts of Turf. The Swedish Officers confessed, that they could not conceive how the Major General came to hazard fuch an Enterprize, and yet less how it came to succeed so happily; attributing the Success entirely to the good Conduct and Bravery of his Czarish Majesty's Troops, who did not lose above 28 Men.

H

13/10

The Czar departed from Moscow the latter End of February, in order to go into Poland by the Way of Peters-burgh and Livonia. The Czarewitz, who had been fome Time in Poland, was gone from Cracow to Warfare; the Czar defigning he should visit several Courts of Europe, before his Marriage with the Princess of Wolfembuttel, which was then in Treaty. In this Interval King Augustus held a Diet at Warsaw, the Members of which were greatly divided among themselves. Continuance of the Ruffian Troops in Poland was made a Pretext for fomenting Divisions; which alone would have obliged the Czar to keep his Troops there, that he might not lose the Fruit of his Conquests. The Forces before Riga kept the Town blocked up, throwing Bombs into it from Time to Time. The Besieged made a few useless Sallies, and Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoff seemed refolved to reduce this important Place by Famine.

His Majesty being now at Petersburgh, undertook himfelf a very difficult Enterprize, which was to penetrate into the Great Dutchy of Finland; and having got together about 20,000 Men, he advanced with them, ces of Cannon, and made a strong Staccado in the Water, behind which a Bridge of Boats bore 12 large Guns to defend it; fo that the Fleet, imagining it impossible to furmount fo many Difficulties, retired. At length, on the 29th of June, Count Stromberg fent to notify that he defired to capitulate, and would fend Deputies for that Purpose. The next Day the Velt-Mareschal sent two Colonels and an Auditor into the Town for Hostages; and his Coaches brought 11 to the Camp. The Capitulation contained a great Number of Articles, which were most agreed to by the Velt-Mareschal, he being willing to give them a favourable Impression of the Czar's Government, who had promifed to restore to the Nobility that submitted, all the Estates which the Squedes had taken from them by their Chamber of Liquidations, which was a Sort of arbitrary Court of Juffice established by Charles XI. Of 12,000 Men, which had composed the Garrison. but 5000 came out, 3000 of which were fick. When the Men came before Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoff, he caused the Remains of two Regiments of Carelia, and one of Wybourg, to pass over into his own Army; alledging, that those Places being now conquered, these national Troops ought no longer to be confidered as Swedes. Besides these, Major-General Alfendeyl, 5 Colonels, 20 Lieutenant-Colonels, an Engineer, and Adjutant-General, 19 Majors, 37 Captains, 14 Lieutenants, and some Enfigns and Cornets, with almost all the Livonians, put themselves under the Protection of his Czarish Majesty. There were about 500 Pieces of Artillery found in the Town; but no Provisions, and very little Ammunition. Sixty Thousand of the Citizens were dead of the Plague and of Hunger, during the Time of the Siege.

H 2

According to the Articles of Capitulation, the Garrifon of Riga was to have been transported into Saveden; but this was not performed, for Reasons given in a Declaration published by the Velt-Mareschal, which were pretty much the same as Count Apraxin gave for detaining the Governor and Garrison of Wybourg.

The Czar, who impatiently waited for this News, received it with much Joy, and immediately gave Orders

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 149

ders to complete the Conquest, by adding to it that of the important Fortress of Dunamuden Skantz, situated at the Mouth of the Duna. It held out a Fortnight, and then was forced to furrender; the Plague destroying as many or more Men than the Muscowites. His Majesty likewise ordered, at the same Time, the Sieges of Pernau, of Revel, and of Kexholm; which were of no long Continuance, and gave but little Trouble, Pernau yielded on the 21st of August; and Kexbolm on the 19th of September. Arnsberg, in the Isle of Oefel, followed the fame Example. Revel capitulated on the 9th of October. Of 50,000 Inhabitants in this Town, the Plague had spared but 2000. This was the last Place of any Confequence in Livonia, that the Czar had not made himfelf Master of. And having now reduced that whole Province, he began to regulate the Affairs of it, and take all necessary Precautions to secure his Conquests. To gain the Affection of the People, he promifed them not only the Continuation of their Privileges, but likewife to discharge them from several heavy Burthens they grouned under. He also published a Proclamation to encourage Trade and Navigation, and permitted the Exportation of all the Goods of the Country, except Timber fit for Shipbuilding, which he thought he should have an Occasion for himself. He invited Strangers from all Parts to repeople this fine Country, which the Plague and the War had rendered almost desolate; and having sent a Resident to Hamburgh, where the Ruffians did not use to have one, he ordered him to give Passes to all those who were willing to come and fettle in Livonia. To gain the Gentry of the Country entirely, he formed 15 Livonian Regiments, the Officers of which he defigned to have all of that Nation. All foreign Ships, which now came into the Harbours of Livonia, were treated with all possible Civility, and nothing was neglected by the Muscovites, to render their Government acceptable both to the Natives and Foreigners: His Majesty thus making a double Conquest of the People, first of their Persons, and then of their Affections.

CHAP II.

Project of Neutrality in the Empire. Transactions and War with the Turks. The Action of the Pruth, and the Peace that followed it. The Czar's Generofity to Prince Cantemir.

HE Czar being now Master of Livenia, once esteemed the richest lewel in the Crown of Saveden, it feemed very probable that his Forces, united to those of his Allies, would very shortly have invaded Pomerania, and the other Swediff Dominions in Germany, if the Allies in Confederacy against France and Spain had not interposed. In order to which, they concerted a Project, which was figned March 31, 1710, for preferving the Neutrality of the Empire. By the Act drawn up on this Occasion, it was not permitted to any of the Powers at War in the North, to attack, or even march through any Part of the Empire: And the Allies, (which were the Emperor, the Queen of Great Britain, and the States General) declared, that if the Czar, the King of Poland, or the King of Denmark, on the one Hand, or the King of Sweden on the other, should infringe this Neutrality, the faid Allies would take Part against the Power so infringing, and support the Side which preferved it.

Copies of this Act were fent to the feveral Parties, and it was immediately agreed to, in express Declarations, by the Czar and his Allies. But the Swedish Minister at the Hague, M. Palmquish, boggled at it extremely, and did not absolutely consent till four Months after; which Consent, as we shall soon see, was not then effectual.

The Allies however, to flew they were refolved to maintain this Neutrality, agreed upon their respective Quota's of Troops. The Emperor, Great Britain, and the other Members, were to furnish 15 or 16,000 Men; and as the Czar and Augustus had insisted upon having the Forces under General Grassau disbanded, or put into the Service of the Allies, except what were sufficient for the Garrisons in Pomerania, a Negotiation was actually fet on Foot with the Swedes, for taking 9000 Men into the Pay of the Allies. But the King of Sweden, tho' this Scheme was calculated for the Prefervation of his Provinces in Germany, wrote to the Powers concerned therein, in very passionate Terms, reproaching them with intending to tie up his Hands, and hinder him from acting against his Enemy. As the King of Sweden thus thought fit to reject the Act of Neutrality, the Czar could no longer think himself bound by it: But after some previous Declarations, caused his Army to march into Germany, to begin the Operations of War against Pomerania.

ally

Charles, in the mean Time, had been well received, and munificently treated, in Turky; which gave him Hopes of being affifted with a powerful Army, to make fresh Head against his Rival. These Hopes were not groundless ; for the Grand Vizier had told the Savediffs General Poniatowsky, That he would take the King in one Hand, and his Sword in the other, and lead him to Moscoco at the Head of 200,000 Men. But Count Tolfloy, the Czar's Envoy, managed Matters fo well at the Parte, that the Talk of this War foon ceased, and greater Honours were paid to him than any Muscovite Minister had ever enjoy'd at Constantinople. Nay, fuch Encouragement was shewn him, that the Czar thought proper to demand Mazeppa to be delivered up, as Charles had demanded the unfortunate Patkul; and it is thought that would have been complied with, had not Mazeppa, now 70 Years of Age, died in the Interim. But the greatest Mortification to the King of Sweden, was to hear that the Russian Ambassador was publickly served at his Table by Savediff Prisoners, now made Slaves, and that many of them were daily fold in the Markets

Chourfouly Ali-Balhaw, the Grand Vizier, who had thus gone off from him to his Enemy, was foon after depoted, and Numan Couprough put in his Place: But this Minister, having too much Probity, maintained his Post but two Months; after which he was sent to his Government of Negropont. Yet he had determined the Grand Signior, in this short Time, to allow the King of Sweden a considerable Body of Men, to re-conduct him into Poland. M. Tollton, with very little Success, endeavoured to oppose this by Remonstrances; and fending Advice of it to the Czar, his Majesty wrote a Letter to the Grand Signior, endeavouring to dissuade him from this Design, so contrary to the Intent of the Treaty then substituting between them; and declaring, That he must oppose the Execution of it, should it be attempted. This Letter made no Alteration in the Resolutions taken at the Porte; and Baltagi Mabomet, Bashaw of Syria, who had been once before Grand Vizier, being now restored to that Post, gave fresh Hopes to the King of Sweden, who spared no Pains to render the Russians odious to this Minister; and an Occasion offering at this Time, favoured his Defigns.

H 4

It had been a constant Custom for all foreign Minifters, on the Promotion of a Grand Vizier, to defire an Audience to felicitate his Highness. The Ambassador of Rustia was the first who demanded his Audience; but was answered, that the Precedence had been always given to the Ambassador of France, as Minister of the most antient Ally of the Porte, to whom they had always given the Title of Emperor. The Ruffian Ambaffador replied, That the Monarch of France, among all Christian Princes, was looked upon only as a King, and not as an Emperor, which Title was more fuitable to his Master; and moreover, that the Precedence was due to him as Ambaffador Extraordinary. This Difpute was kept for some Time on the Carpet, while many Books and Registers were examined: But it not being found in Treaties, that any other Title than that of Czar had been given to the Sovereigns of Russia, it was determined that his Ambassador could not be admitted before the Ambassador of France. M. Tolstoi protested, but to little Purpose, against this Determination; and let the Grand Vizier understand, that fince the Case was fo, he must be deprived of the Honour of waiting upon him. The Tartars, the Savedes, and the French, did not fail to infinuate to the Vizier, that this Answer was full of Pride and Contempt for his Person: They likewise aggravated some Complaints made of the Rusfians on the Frontiers of the Empire; which, all together, with the Management of the Cham of Tartary, had the defired Effect. The

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 153

The Cham, greatly encouraged by many Promifes from the King of Saveden, had, for his own Interest, vigorously espoused his Cause; and, at the Instigation of the Palatine of Kiow, and General Poniatowsky, represented to the Chief Ministers at the Porte, that the Muscovites had many times fallen upon innocent Mahometans, contrary to the Tenor of Treaties, and murthered them: That the Pride and great Power of the Czar, together with the perpetual Motions of his Troops on the Frontiers, were grown intolerable: That his continual Building of Ships at Afoph, and fitting out Men of War, Gallies, and Brigantines, openly threatened the Empire with a fudden Invasion, upon the first Opportunity: That therefore, out of Conscience and Duty, as a right Mahometan, he was obliged to acquaint the Grand Signior, that the Tartars and other Inhabitants under him were not fafe, in the present Posture of Affairs: That besides, he was justly alarmed for Constanti - nople itself; and consequently, that it was high Time to prevent those Dangers with which the Ottoman Empire was threatened, and diffipate them by vigorous Measures, before it was too late. The Cham concluded. That as he was a faithful Servant to the Empire, he was bound to give Notice to the Porte of what he had related; and added, that he thought it absolutely necessary, that the Great Council should be forthwith called together, and that each Member thereof should be allowed Liberty of Speech, without any Restraint.

According to this Advice, the Great Council was called, and the Grand Signior being feated behind a Curtain, the Cham of Tartary made a long Harangue, in which he acquainted his Majesty and the Council with all the Particulars before-mentioned; concluding, That it was high Time to prevent those Dangers which threatened the Ottoman Empire, and to fend home the King of Sweden through Poland, with a formidable Army, that he might vigorously attack Muscovy on that Side. He communicated at the same Time some Letters, said to be wrote by several Polish Grandees to the King of Sweden, the Palatine of Kiow, and General Poniatowsky, wherein they promised, that as soon as the King and these Generals were advanced on the Frontiers of Poland, they, with the greatest Part of the Republick, would join them. When the Cham had finished his Speech, the Lords of the great Council were commanded to delare their Opinion; but not one had the Courage to contradict any Thing he had faid. On the contrary, the Question being put to the Vote three Times successively, they concluded that War was to be declared against Muscowy, and the sooner the better. Upon which the Mufti was consulted, to know if it was lawful according to the Alcoran. The Mufti briefly gave his Sentence, in these Words: The Law answers, 'Tis necessary. Hereupon the Muscovite Ambassador was clapt into the Castle of the Seven Towers, and he would have been put to Death, if the Grand Vizier had not perfuaded the Sultan from fo extraordinary a Violation of the Law of Nations.

An Account of this being brought to the Czar, he wrote again to the Grand Signior, remonstrating against what had been done, professing an Inclination to preferve the Peace; but declaring at the fame Time, that if the King of Sweden were fent into Poland in a hostile Manner, he must be obliged to assist his Ally Augustus, and was not accountable for the Confequences. This Letter had no more Effect than the former; a Manifesto of the Porte being foon after fent to all the Governors and Officers in the Ottoman Empire, commanding them to arm against the Russians, who were charged with all the Infringements of Peace that had been alledged by the Cham of Tartary. The Grand Vizier immediately made the necessary Dispositions for the Campaign, and in the Month of March, 1711, went out of Constantinople, to put himself at the Head of the Army, which was affembled near Adrianaple, from whence he caused them to decamp, to take the Route of the Danube.

Though the Czar could not be informed of what was done at Constantinople, not only because his Minister was imprisoned, but because his Couriers were stopt on the Frontiers; yet he learnt fo much by other Hands, as to be ready to give Orders for being in the Field before the Tarks. He likewise prepared for the Desence of Asoph, whither he sent Vice-Admiral Vander Cruys, with three hundred good Sea-Officers; and leaving to Prince Menzikoff the Command of his Forces in Livonia, Ingria, and Finland, he fet out from Petersburgh to Moscow, that he might the more readily attend his new Levies, and dispatch a numerous Army into the Ukrain. The Generals Repnin, Allard, and Gallicain, conducted in 3 Columns, cross Poland, the best Part of the Russian Troops that were in Samogitia and Lithuania. The Czar ordered that they should raife, throughout his Dominions, the fourth Man of all who were able to bear Arms, and the second of all the Valets of the Nobility; which last Article produced a great Number. Velt Mareschal Czeremetoff, who was already on the Frontiers at the Head of his Army, received 30,000 Men of the new Levies. Prince Romanowdowski had Orders to advance with the Militia against the Tartars. And besides these his Majesty had made a Treaty with Apaka Taquin, Prince of the Calmuck Tartars, who fent him 25,000 Men, for which the Czar paid him 100,000 Ducats in Specie. Thus, without reckoning the Troops that remained under Command of Prince Menzikoff, or the Coffacks, his Czarish Majesty had got together an Army of 150,000 Men, all regular Troops. And Apaka Taquin, taking hold of this favourable Opportunity to fall upon the Precopian Tartars, his Enemies, brought 50,000 Calmuck Tartars into the Field, and employed 22,000 Circassians against the Dorzowski and Norowski Tartars, who are on the Borders, and occupy the Ramparts of Crimea. To all these Preparations the Czar joined a long and very circumftantial Manifesto, penned in the strongest Terms, against the Injustice of the Porte, and in Defence of his own Preparations: And the following Declaration, containing his Reasons in fewer Words, was at the same Time fent to all his Ministers in the several Courts of Europe.

Hereas we have received certain Informations from divers Places, that the Ottoman Porte endeavours to justify the Violation of Peace already declared against us, and actually begun by the Irruption of the Tartars into our Territories, and for that Purpose charges us with feveral groundless Matters, by which they pretend they were forced to come to a Rupture, and amongst others, as if we were not inclined to continue in Peace with them, but had actually resolved to begin War; as also that, contrary to the Peace concluded with the Ottomans, we had erected feveral new Fortifications on our Frontiers, suffered our Troops to enter the Turkish Dominions, and that we would not give them leave to convoy the King of Saveden in Safety back to his own Territories: We have thought it necessary, to declare herewith openly, that we never have had the Intention to break in any Manner whatfoever the Peace concluded between us and the Ottoman Porte, and to enter into War with the Turks; but the same has been hitherto religiously and inviolably observed by us. The Fortifications erected by us, are likewise in no respect against the Treaty. but upon our own Territories, which partly belonged to us of old, and partly were yielded to us by the Treaty and the Limits marked out by the Commissaries on both Sides, and which have been fixed many Years ago: It is therefore to be wonder'd, that the Porte would take Occasion to complain thereof at this Juncture. Our Troops never enter'd the Turkish Dominions, but remained on the Frontiers; and although they did some time ago, according to the Law of War, pursue their Enemies into the Turkish Territories, and seized them therein, which however was done in fuch Places where there were no Inhabitants; (yet all this, as well as other Matters) were fully fettled and adjusted in the Confirmation of Peace renewed last Year, whereby the Porte did likewife flipulate with our Ambassador, that they fhould convoy the King of Sweden with 5000 Turks thro' Poland, and that we should guard him by our Officers from the Frontiers; to which we not only confented, but also promised to procure the like Consent from the King and the Republick of Poland. But this being not accepted by the Porte, on account of feveral Pretences, we did at last, in two of our Letters to the Sultan, and by our Ambassador and Privy Councillor Tolsloy at Conflantinople, declare, That we should suffer the King of Sweden to pais through Poland free and unmolefted into his own Dominions, and to that End permit him a Guard of 5000 Turks to fee him fafe thro' Poland; whereby our peaceable Intention fufficiently appears, and that on our Part we have contributed whatever might prevent all Manner of Disturbance, and maintain a good Correspondence and neighbourly Friendship with the Ottoman Porte. And that all the World may be fenfible thereof, we confirm herewith our former Declaration, and offer, before a tedious War be commenced, to accommodate Matters with the Porte, and to live in a neighbourly Amity with her as formerly: And notwithstanding, in order to provide for our Precaution and Security (after we have been informed from all Parts of a Rupture, and that the War is actually declared against us at Confiantinople, and our Ambaffador carried Prisoner to the Seven Towers) we have caused our Troops to march to the Turkifb Frontiers, they shall not however undertake any Hostilities, provided the Turks live on their Part peaceably, put a stop to Preparations of War, and fet our Ambassador, with all his Retinue, at Liberty: And we will, as foon as we are fufficiently affured of thefe Things by the Ottoman Porte, order our Forces to withdraw from the Fronties, and falicitate, as much as in us lies, a friendly Accommodation; to which End we willingly accept and herewith defire the Mediation of his Imperial Majesty, her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain, and their High Mightineffes the States-General. But in Cafe the Porte, without any Occasion given her by us, should perfift in her Resolution to break the Peace, and begin the War against us, we declare before God and all the World, that we are excusable, and not guilty of all the Blood that may be spilt on this Occasion; and we have an entire Confidence in God, that he will affift our just Caufe, and prosper our Arms with Victory against an Enemy, who breaks Treaties, and who, but a Year ago, by fo many Oaths and Promises, confirmed and renewed the Peace with us.

Given at Moscow the 28th of February, 1711.

PETER.

The Tartars had begun Hostilities before this Declaration was made publick, and the Cham's Son and the King of Sweden both published long Manisesto's. The Cham was at the Head of 150,000 Men; his Son commande manded 50,000, and the Palatine Potocky followed them at the Head of 10,000 more, got together from all Nation;, Poles, Swedes, Hungarians, Walachians and Coffacks. The Tartars, who were Neighbours to the Donfki Coffacks, and had engaged them to revolt, began on the Side of Afoph; but their Campaign lasted not long. They advanced as far as Izium, pillaging the Country about it, and having defeated 4 or 5000 Ruffians, marched off with their Booty. But the Irruption of the Cham into the Ukrain was attended with worse Confequences: He beat feveral Parties of Ruffians, and feized on feveral fmall Places; fuch as Wolno, Maliwoloda, Noiviwoloda, &c. He also took Mercovi, Ternocka, and some little Forts. In short, he penetrated as far as Samara, and burnt, under the Fortifications of that Town, 150 Vessels designed to transport the Troops and Arillery. But the Snow obliged him to retire, and towards the End of March he arrived at Precop with very confiderable Spoils, and near 12,000 Slaves.

Potocky, the Coffacks of Orlick, and the Cham's eldest Son, whose Title is Sultan Galga, advanced along the Borysthenes, and dispersed every where as they went the Manifesto's of the King of Sweden, the Sultan Galga, and the faid Potocky; but to little Effect: However, not finding any Relistance, the Russian Troops being on the Banks of the Niefter, near Moldavia, they penetrated as far as Niemirow beyond Braclaw, both above and below the Bog, from whence, after some flight Skirmishes, and raising Contributions in the Country, they retired to the Side of Bialocerkiew. Potock and the Tartars gave three Affaults to this Fortress, and lost many Men before they could master the Town; but the Citadel held out till the Arrival of Prince Galliczin, who put these Maroders to Flight, after having killed above 5000 of their Men, retook the Spoils, and released the Slaves they had made. Five hundred Rusfians had defended the Citadel of Bialocerkiesu against the Efforts of 37,000, of whom they killed above 4000. This Action diffipated these Tartars for the present, and obliged Potocky to return into Turky. In the mean Time, the new Grand Vizier, ignorant in the Art of War, was flow in his Preparations, and a Mistake had been committed in displacing the Admiral Gianum-Coggia, the best Seaman belonging to the Porte. His Successor ordered near 300 Sail of Ships to be equipped in the Black-Sea, where 37,000 Men were to embark. The Topli-Balbaw, or Master of the Ordnance, had Orders to have a large Train of Artillery in Readiness, with 14,000 Men. The Land-Army confifted of 120,000 Men, Horse and Foot, besides the Tartars, who made the whole Number amount to about 200,000.

At this Time the Grand Signior was informed that Brancovan, Prince of Walachia, held a fecret Correspondence with the Czar, and had promised to revolt to him, if he could penetrate into Moldavia, with 30,000 Men, and a sufficient Quantity of Provisions. This being confirmed by feveral Hands, he ordered the Cham of Tartary to confult with the Vizier upon the Means of having him seized. The Cham's Advice was to draw him in by the Help of the Hospodar of Moldavia, and if Maurocordato, who then governed, was not thought proper to undertake it, he recommended Demetrius Cantemir, whose Fidelity had been experienced, and whose Father had been Prince of that Country.

According to this Advice the Sultan deposed Maurocordato, and appointed Cantemir Prince of Walachia, under the Title of that of Moldavia, with Orders to feize Brancovan under Colour of Friendship, or any other Pretence which he thought proper, and fend him alive or dead to Constantinople; promising that no Tribute should be levied on him, as usual: Whereupon Cantemir set out with the Cham for Moldavia; but had not been arrived there many Days before he was directed to fend the Pifkieft, or Prefent, demanded of a Prince when he first enters on his Government, and to collect a great Quantity of Provisions for the Turkish Army, with other intolerable Burthens. From these First-Fruits, the Prince tells us himfelf, perceiving how little Faith was to be expected from the Infidels, he threw off his Attachment to the Turkish Interest, and sent a trusty Messenger to the Czar, with an Offer of himfelf and his Principality. And they having mutually exchanged their Faith, Cantemir constantly gave the Czar proper Advices. And having the Direction of the Bridge over the Danube, to be erected at the Charge of the Turks, he made a Shew of going on with it, but used his utmost to retard the Work, without being, as yet, the least suspected; while he was continually pressing the Czar to hasten his March before it was finished: But his Majesty, not readily listening to his Advice, and being deceived by the Hopes given him by Brancovan, came at last too late to hinder the Turks passing the Danube. Yet so slow were the Infidels in their Preparations, that notwithstanding the pressing Instances of the King of Sweden's Ministers, it was the latter End of April before the Troops were affembled near Adrianople. Befides, the Grand Signior was in great Uncertainty, whether he should command his Army himself, or trust it to the Grand Vizier. Mean while the Czar, hearing of the great Equipment of the Turks upon the Black Sea, made extraordinary Preparations on that Side, fitting out 20 Ships of the Line of Battle, and other Vessels, in which 23,000 Men were embarked.

During all these Preparations, the Christian Powers, who had Ministers at the Porte, endeavoured to put a Stop to fo important a War, by perfuading the King of Saveden to come to Terms with his Enemy, Mr. 7effereyes in particular, her Britannick Majesty's Minister, going to Bender, presented a Memorial to him to that Effect; defiring also that he would approve the Neutrality agreed on at the Hague, and permit the English and Dutch to trade freely to those Towns in the Baltick, which the Czar had taken during the War in the North. But Charles still preferving his haughty Temper, refused to make any Treaty with the Czar in which the Porte was not included, and proposed the English and Dutch should join him against his other Enemies, with whom they were then in Alliance. As to the other Particulars, he absolutely refused to approve the Neutrality, or confent to a free Commerce in the Baltick. This Answer, confidering the Pollure of his Affairs, was not a little furprizing; but he was refolved to hear of no Peace, not doubting but that, by the Assistance of the Turk, he should again triumph over his Enemies. The Czar, on the other Hand, seeing a Part of his Troops got over the Neister, into his Enemies Country, and no Body yet to oppose oppose them, could not help flattering himself with the Hopes, that Heaven had destined him the Honour of overthrowing the Empire of the Ottomans. He arrived, on the 12th of June, at Soroka, with all his Court; for the Czarina Catharine, with whom he had lately declared his Marriage, would accompany him in this dangerous Expedition. From thence he went towards Jass, the Capital of Moldavia, being now joined by Prince Cantemir, who published a Declaration, at his going over to him, directed To the Right Reverend the Grecian Bishop of the Cathedral of Soczewa, the illustrious and potent Generals of their Forces, together with all the other Subjects of Moldavia; and setting forth the Reasons of his present Conduct.

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 161

The Czar waited three Days at Jaffy for the Provifions promised him by Brancovan; but observing that his Ambassador only amused him with Ceremonies, and having some Affurances of his Treachery, he found himfelf in very near the same Condition with the King of Saveden when invited into the Ukrain by Mazeppa. He was in a wild Country, destitute of Provisions or Forage for half his Army; without Magazines, or any Place from whence he could expect any Succours: For tho' Cantemir continued firm to him, he found his Moldavians in a different Interest: And Brancovan made a Merit to the Sultan of having deceived him. The Grand Vizier, hearing that the Czar was come to Jaffy, immediately decamped, and croffing the Danube, foon came within Sight of the Muscowites. The Pruth now separated them, and the whole Army being got over, Turks and Tartars, the Vizier pitched his Camp, and fortified it with Trenches.

The Czar, when he first heard of this Advance, sent General Janus with a Detachment, to dispute the Passage of the Danube; but he came too late, and the Turks were now come up to him, with an Army three Times the Number of his own. However, having disposed his Troops behind a Line of Chevaux de Frize, he made so strong and regular a Fire, that the Enemy, with all their Force, could not break in upon him; but in the Evening they retired out of the Reach of the Russian Artillery, carrying off their Dead with them. The next Morning the Turks renewed the Fight, and continued the fame all Day. They attempted to force the Ruffian Lines in feveral Places to no Purpofe, and loft a great many Men. Night parted them again. The third Day General Poniatowiky, feeing the Situation the Musicovites were in, deftitute of Provisions, and surrounded by the River Pruth. and the Armies of the Turks and Tartars, advised the Grand Vizier to flarve them out. The Czar, in this desperate Condition, had given himself over for loft, when the Czarina thought of an Expedient to preferve him. It is faid by fome, that she sent a Present to the Grand Vizier unknown to the Czar; but it is most probable that she prevailed on him to fend a Letter, which being accompanied with a large Sum of Money, and all the Jewels and Things of Value that could be got together. made a very good Impression on the Mind of the Grand Vizier, and a Treaty was foon concluded. When the Vizier fent his Deputies into the Ruffian Camp, he charged them to defire to be admitted into the Presence of the Czarina, that he might be certain she was there; hardly believing that a Lady, out of Love to her Husband, should venture herself in so dangerous an Expedition.

It was at this Time, that the King of Sweden being informed of the Situation of Affairs, was come incognito to the Grand Vizier's Camp. And having heard what had passed, he went to the Vizier's Tent, to reproach him. Among other Things he asked him, If he could justify what he had done? To which the Vizier answered, That he had the Power of making Peace or War, and had obtained more of the Czar than the Grand Signior had expected or demanded. " Had you not, replied Charles, your Enemies at your Difcretion, and might you not have reaped yet much greater Advantages? Give me now 20,000 of your best Troops, and I will recover the Opportunity which you are upon the Point of lofing, and are never likely to have again. I would make no doubt of delivering the Czar a Prisoner to the Sultan, who might at least keep him till the Treaty is executed." The Vizier answered, " God, who commands us to pardon an Enemy who humbles himfelf before us, as the Czar has, preserve us from breaking a Trest Treaty of Peace without any Reason; I have Hostages for the Performance of it." Poniatowsky, feeing that his Majesty kept filent, with a disdainful Smile anfwered: " The King has at this Time in his capital City an Ambassador of the Czar's Prisoner, whom he fent to make Protestations of an inviolable Friendship, at the very Time that himfelf was upon the March with 80,000 Men, to surprize one of his Castles. But, added he, there is ftill the Remedy which has been proposed, even without breaking the Treaty. The Czar may be flopt with 20 or 30,000 of your best Troops, at the Head of which the King will put himself, to oblige him to an honourable Peace with his Majesty." The Vizier replied, " However, this feems to me an indirect Violation of the Treaty." Whereupon the King faid, "When I offered to ftop the Czar, it was not to fue to him for a Peace: For when I do that, he must be victorious even at the Gates of Stockholm." " There is an Article, replied the Vizier, by which his Majesty may return into his Dominions, and pass even thro' the Czar's Territories, with a strong Convoy which he shall have from the Porte; after which, if he pleases, he may make Peace with him." The King look'd full at the Vizier, and laughed in his Face, without making any Anfwer ; but turning on his Heel, went out of the Tent, and took his Horse to go to Bender.

The Hostages were Baron Schafiroff, Vice-Chancellor to the Czar, and the young Count Czeremetoff; and the Articles of the Peace were, " I. That the Czar should restore Afoph, in the Condition wherein he formerly took it, with its Territories. II. That Taiganrog, Kamenki, and the new Fort on the River Samara, shall be totally demolished; the Cannon and Ammunition of War in Kamenki to be left therein to the Porte, and no new Fort to be ever built in the fame Place. III. That the Czar shall not concern himself with the Polacks, norwith the Coffacks their Dependants, nor with the Dependants of Han Doulet Ghirai; but shall leave them in their former Condition. IV. That Merchants may come by Land into the Turkifb Dominions with their Merchandize; but no Person shall be admitted to reside at the Porte in Quality of an Ambaffador. V. That all Muffulmans, who formerly, or in this War, have been taken, shall be restored to Liberty. VI. That the King of Sweden shall have free and safe Passage, without being hindered by the Muscowites; and in case they have a Mind to make a Peace, it may in Consequence be treated of between them. VII. For the Future, no Injury shall be done by the Porte to the Muscowites, nor by those to the former." Thus ended this short War with the Turks, which, if the Grand Vizier had been a Masser of his Business, must have ruined the Russian Empire; for he might, without risking a Man, have forced the Czar, and his whole Army to have surrender'd at Discretion.

I must here take notice of the Czar's great Generosity to Prince Cantemir, as he relates it in his own History. The first Demand of the Vizier, at the Treaty of Pruth. was, that Cantemir, the Rebel Prince of Moldavia, should be delivered up to him. Many of the Courtiers perfuading him not lose so numerous an Army for the Sake of one Man, he answered; " That he could refign all the Country as far as Curska to the Turks, fince there was Hopes of recovering it again; but could by no Means violate his Faith, and deliver up a Prince who had abandoned his Principality for his Sake, because it was impossible to repair Honour once forfeited." The Minister was ordered to tell the Turks, that the Prince was not in the Camp, who during the Treaty was shut up in the Czarina's Coach, which was known only to a Servant that brought him Victuals. The Czar always continued to have a great Regard for him, being perfuaded, that if he had taken his Advice, he should have made himfelf Master of Moldavia and Walachia. He gave him feveral Estates in Russia and the Ukrain, and settled a Penfion of 20,000 Roubles a Year upon him. This Gentleman was a Man of great Learning, and wrote a History of the Othman Empire in Greek and Latin, which has been translated into English, from a Copy communicated by his Son Prince Antiochus Cantemir, not long fince Ambassador to the Court of Great Britain.

CHAP. III.

The Czar returns Home. Marriage of the Czarewitz. The Czar desires to become a Member of the Empire. Fresh Differences with the Turks. The Czar's publick Marriage with Catharine. Peace twice renewed with the Turks. King of Sweden ordered to depart. Action of Bender.

HE Russians, being supplied with Provisions by the Grand Vizier, decamped with Drums beating, Colours flying, and Sword in Hand. They made but fmall Marches however, for want of Horses, and on account of their great Number of Sick and Wounded. This Expedition cost the Czar about 20,000 Men, befides fome Millions in Money and Jewels, that he paid for this Peace, which the Porte did not long maintain. Nevertheless, when the Sultan heard of it, he was fo well pleased, that he ordered publick Rejoicings for three Days; and shewed that he approved of the Conduct of his Vizier, by the Reception he gave him. The Czar retired towards his own Dominions, to put the Treaty in Execution, that no Subject of Complaint from the Turks might prevent his Designs in the North. He left his Generals to conduct his Troops thro' Poland, where one Party remained, while the rest went into Lithuania and Livonia, from whence a Body was fent into Pomerania.

While the Czar was unfortunate on the Borders of the Pruth, his Allies suffered not the Swedes to enjoy much Repole. As the King of Sweden had protested against the Treaty of Neutrality, and his Generals had acted contrary to it, this was thought a fufficient Pretence for entering Pomerania, and forming the Blockade of Stral-fund.

The Czar went first to Warfare, and from thence to Elbing, where he arrived on the 12th of Sept. 1711, but staid only to repose himself, and then pursued his Journey to Carelfbad, by the Way of Drefden. He used the Waters of Carelfoad with good Success; and having concluded a Negociation with M. Kameke, the King of Prussia's Minister, returned to Dresden, and arrived afterwards at Targau on the 24th of Odober. The Czarewitz, now 22 Years of Age, was come to Targau two Days before, where the Queen of Poland had made Preparations for his Marriage with the Princess Charlotta-Christiana-Sophia of Wolfembuttel, who was in her 18th Year. This Marriage was celebrated with no great Ceremony, on the Day after the Czar's Arrival, by a Priest of the Greek Church. The Czarewitz was led to the Altar by the Czar, and the Princess by Duke Anthony Ulric of Wolfembuttel, her Grandfather. The Queen of Poland, the Duke of Wolfembuttel, Father to the Bride, and her Mother, were present at the Ceremony. There was a grand Entertainment at the Queen of Poland's. The old Duke of Wolfembuttel, if the Czar would have fuffered the Expence, defigned that the Splendor of his Grand-daughter's Marriage should have been beyond Example; and to have invited to it, in his capital City, the Kings of Poland, Denmark, and Pruffia, the Elector of Hanover, and some other Princes. But inflead of more Pomp, it were to be wished there could have been more Happiness in this Marriage. The Czarewitz, given up to fenfual Pleafures and vicious Company, had no Defire to marry, nor had he thought of it, but to prevent the Danger he was in of forfeiting his Succession. For his indolent wicked Course of Life, and the Aversion he shewed to Foreigners, had created in his Father fo ill an Opinion of him, as made him drop fome Intimations, that, unless he gave some Tokens of Amendment, he must expect to have his Head shaved, and be thrust into a Convent. His own Favourites, apprehenfive of the Danger, persuaded him to reconcile himself to his Father, by promising to alter his Way of Life, and marrying into some considerable Family among the Princes of the Empire, with whom his Majesty was desirous of having an Alliance. The Prince, tho' naturally dull, had Sense enough to take this Advice, and throwing himself at his Father's Feet, declared his Intention of leading a new Life; begging Leave to make the Tour of Germany, in order to make Choice of a virtuous Lady, who might be agreeable to his Birth and Inclinations. A few

A few Days after the Marriage, the new-married Couple took the Route of Wolfembuttel, and the Czar that of Crossen and Silefia, where the Prince Royal of Prussia entertained him for three Days. He then took the Route of Pruffia, and on the 8th of November arrived at Thorn, where he embarked with the Czarina for Elbing. Their Majesties found in this City a numerous Court of Foreign Ministers to attend them, and among the rest Prince Ragotski, who came from Dantzick for that Purpole. But the Troubles which were excited afresh, by the French and Swedish Faction in Turky, foon recalled the Czar to his own Dominions. He went through Koningsberg, Memel, and Riga, in which laft Place he stopt for some Time; promising the Citizens his Protection, provided they would be as faithful to him as they had been to Saveden. The Nobility, the Council, the Magistracy, all endeavoured to shew their Refpect to their new Prince, who gained the Love of a People naturally faithful to their Masters. From Riga his Majesty went to Revel, where he likewise continued fome Days, as well to give Orders concerning the Fortifications, as to take Advice for the Re-establishment of the Commerce. Proceeding then to Petersburgh, the Hereditary Prince, with his new Spouse, received his Command to follow him: And the whole Czarian Family were foon come together, to attend him in that City. And being now in peaceable Possession of Livonia, as that Province had been formerly one of the Fiefs of the Empire, he offered to accept of the Investiture of it from the Emperor Charles, provided he might be admitted into the Number of the Princes of the Empire; and on that Condition, and his being allowed to have a Minister at the General Diet, he proposed to furnish his Imperial Majesty with a Succour of 25,000 Men against France; the Partiality of whose Minister at Constantinople had very much irritated his Majesty. Nevertheless his Offers were not accepted, for Reasons that were only a Pretext; they being afraid to have so powerful a Member in the College of Princes.

The Czar had given Orders for executing the Articles of the Peace of the Pruth, and his Generals on the Black-Sea were beginning to demolish the Works of Taiganrog and Afoph; but fresh Advices from Turkey put fome Stop to it. The Grand Vizier had agreed, that the King of Saveden should quit the Ottoman Territories, which Promise he did what was in his Power to keep; but the King of Saveden endeavoured to be before-hand with the Vizier, and to perfuade the Sultan, that he had betraved the Interest of the Empire; complaining, above all, of his not being included in the Treaty. Vizier being informed of what passed at Constantinople, placed a Guard upon all the Roads to Bender, with Orders to intercept the King's Letters; by which Means he discovered what were his Designs against him, and was therefore foon brought to a Refolution, in concert with the Russian Hostages, to oblige him to depart. For this Reason he gave them to understand, that it was expected he should do so: But the King returning a very haughty Answer, the Vizier stopped his daily Pension, and fent a Detachment of his Army to be guartered about Bender. The King however, found Means to get a Letter conveyed even to the Sultan himself, by the help of one Savari, a Banker at Bender, who, being strongly in the King's Interest, put on the Habit of a Turk, and got to the French Ambassador at Constantinople, to whom he not only delivered the Letters of the Swedish Monarch, but informed him, by Word of Mouth, of much more than was contained in those Letters. Monsieur Defalleurs obtained an Audience, and having delivered his Letters, the Vizier received repeated Orders to return to Constantinople, which he did not very readily obey; and being at the Head of his Troops, the Sultan did not care to exasperate him, but used some Dissimulation to get him in his Power. However, he was no fooner separated from his Troops, than the Grand Signior deposed him from his Office, and ordered him to be banished to Mitylene, after all his Riches were taken from him. He had held this Office precisely a Year. which was now conferred upon the the Bashaw Tusuf. Aga of the Janissaries.

All Things now at the Porte began to turn in Favour of the Swedish Faction. The Cham of Tartary took up his Residence near Constantinople, from whence he often went to the Grand Signior, with whom he had feveral Conferences, the Refult of which was to declare War again with Russia: Upon which the Sultan wrote a circular Letter to all the Viziers and Bashaws of his Empire, dated the 20th of December 1711, wherein he commands those Officers to repair with their Troops to his Camp at Maktze on the Danube, early in the enfuing Spring. To prevent the Confequences of which, the Ruffian Hoftages at Constantinople defired a Conference with the Vizier, wherein they were supported by the English and Dutch Ministers; and his Czarish Majesty sent Orders for the Surrender of Afoph to the Turks, which was accordingly made on the 13th of January following. The new Buildings, Suburbs, and Fortifications, were all demolished; but the inner Walls were left standing, and 70 Pieces of Cannon, with a House or two, and a small Suburb of the Coffacks. Haffan Bafbanu fent away the Key to the Porte; but having only 120 Men in his Retinue, defired a Battallion of Muscovites might be left under his Command, to secure him against the Costacks and Tartars. The rest marched out with the usual Marks of Honour, under Admiral Apraxin, who went to overfee the Demolishing of the Works Taiganrog. All Things proceeding thus with mutual Civility, there was Reason to hope the threatened Rupture would soon be accommodated.

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 163

In the mean Time the Czar's Marriage with Cathurine Alexeruna was publickly folemnized at Petersburgh. He had declared it in private the last Year to the Empress Dowager his Sifter, the Princess Natalia, and his two other half Sifters, whom he defired to pay all Respect due to her in that Quality. All Preparations being made, on the 20th of February, 1712, M. Kikin, a Lord of the Admiralty, and Adjutant General Fagufinsky, were fent to invite the Company to his Majesty's Old Wedding. The Czar was married in the Habit of an Admiral, and for that Reason his Sea-Officers had the chief Share in the Solemnity of the Day. The Vice-Admiral Cruys, and the Rear-Admiral of the Gallies, were the Bridegroom's Fathers; and the Empreis Dowager, with the Vice-Admiral's Lady, were the Bride-Mothers. The Bride-Maids were two of the Empress Catharine's own Daughters, one about 5, and the other twods about 3 Years old. The Wedding was performed at 7 o'Clock in the Morning, in a little Chapel belonging to Prince Menzikoff. The new-married Couple retired to the Prince's House, and staid there till 10 o'Clock, and then proceeded to the Czar's Palace, where all the Company were gathered according to the Invitation. The Procession was very magnificent. Prince Menzikoff carried the Marshal's Staff, and Vice-Admiral Cruys was in the Sledge, with the Czar at his Right Hand, as his Father. The Entertainment at the Palace was very splendid, and the Evening concluded with a Ball, Fire-works, and Illuminations.

A new Treaty of Peace between the Turks and the Czar was concluded on the 16th Day of April, 1712, the Articles of which were in Substance: " 1. That the Czar shall be obliged, within 30 Days, to withdraw all his Forces out of Poland, which shall not return upon any Pretence, unless the King of Saveden, being returned into his Dominions, should join with the Poles and attack Muscowy on that Side. 2. That the Porte shall be allowed to procure the Return of the King of Sweden into his Dominions, by fuch a Way, and at fuch Time as the Grand Signior shall think fit; but in Case that Prince marches through the Territories of Muscowy, the Turkish Troops who attend him, shall commit no Manner of Hostility. 3. That the Czar shall remain in Possession of Kiof and Ukrania, with their antient Limits; but shall renounce all Pretensions upon the Country of the Coffacks on this Side the Borysthenes, and on a certain Island in that River; and that good Orders shall be given to prevent the Excursions of the Cossacks and Tartars. 4. That no Fortress shall be erected between the two Frontier Places of Afoph and Cirafki by any of the Parties, but that the Grand Signior shall rebuild the Fort of Cinoli, over-gainst Afoph. c. That whereas it was stipulated that Afoph shall be restored in the Condition it was in when the Muscovites took it, and there were then in that Place 60 Pieces of Brass Canon, which were not found when it was restored, his Czarish Majesty shall restore the faid Artillery, and the Turks shall deliver to the Muscovites the Iron Canon they left there. 6. That none of the Parties shall erect any Forts at Camenski menski and Savar. That the Peace shall continue 25 Years, but may be prolonged before that Time is relapsed. And lastly, that after the Ratification of this Treaty, the Czar shall send an Ambassador to Constantinople, to receive the same." This Treaty was concluded with Sincerity on both Sides, and the Czar was not only speedy in the Ratification of it, but sent Orders towards the Black Sea, that his Generals there should proceed conformably to it. He afterwards sent Part of his Troops that were in the Volhimia, into the Ukrain, and neighbouring Provinces; and those in Lithuania went partly into Liva-

nia and Courland, and partly into Pomerania.

The Sultan, by Letter, acquainted the King of Sweden of this Peace; but his Ministers having prepossessed him with an Opinion, that it was chiefly brought about by the Interpolition of the British and Dutch Ambasiadors. Sir Robert Sutton, and Count Colyear, he was pleased to call them Voluntary Mediators: And fome having added, that it was wholly owing to the Influence the first had over the Minds of the Turks, Charles declared War in good earnest against him, both with Tongue and Pen, complaining that he had been acting under-hand, and concerned himself with excusing the Muscowites Continuance in Poland. Nay, he pretended to have some Extracts of his Letters to Vienna, as Proofs of it; and wrote to England, that he had not only traversed the Measures which his Majesty had entered into with the Porte, in order to re-establish his Affairs, but had thrown off the Mask, and openly espoused his Enemy's Interest. In short, no less Satisfaction was insisted on by his Majesty, than his being recalled and disgraced.

Prince Menzikoff was now gone into Pomerania, where the Czar had already 36,000 Men, who were ordered to join the Danes and the Saxons. His Majesty, before he set out himself, assisted at the launching of a Ship of 54 Guns, called the Pullowa; and had the Missortune to hear that one third Part of the City of Moscow was burnt to the Ground. Ten thousand of his Majesty's Troops now kept Stetin blocked up: The rest, joined with those of King Augustus, were before Stralfund, which was also in some Manner blocked up by Land. The Czar, Czarina, and Czarewitz, being all come into Pomerania, the Czar had feveral Conferences with the King of Poland, and these two Monarchs went together to reconnoitre Stralfund and the Island of Rugen. It was agreed to attack the Island, fince by their being Masters of that, it was impossible for Stralfund to hold out. The Princes Menzikoff and Kurakin, and Count Golowin, had also feveral Conferences at Gripfswalde, with the Counts Flemming and Schembeck, on making Preparations to execute this Enterprize: But while these were getting ready, they learnt that the Swedes had debarked on the Island 8 or 10,000 Men under the Command of General Steinbock; and fo the Attack of the Island became impracticable. The Rullian and Polish Generals came then to a Resolution at Grep/walde, to cast up a Line from thence to Triplee and Damgarten, which is an Extent of feveral Miles; and his Czarish Majesty having exhorted the King of Denmark to keep a watchful Eye upon the Savedes, and left the Command of his Troops to King Augustus, took the Route of Berlin, where he arrived incognito. He made a Visit, the same Night, to the King of Prussia, and was entertained at Supper by the Prince Royal, The next Day, his Prussian Majesty, accompanied by his Highness, returned the Visit; and at Night the Czar paid a Visit to the Queen. A few Days after, he set out for Leipsick, and from thence to Carelsbad, where defigning to drink the Waters, he fignified to all the foreign Ministers, that he would not be attended by any of them, but should soon return to Berlin, where he would give them Audience; as he did accordingly.

During his Majesty's Absence, all the Troops that were in the Island of Rugen, having been brought over of Stralfund, Count Steinbock made a Sally from thence with great Success. It was given out that he was going to force the Enemies Lines; but instead of hazarding fo rash an Enterprize, he took, all on a sudden, the Route to Mecklenbourg, in passing a Morass formed by the Ribnitz, near Damgarten, and at Blommon fdorf upon Bridges thrown over in halle. The Swedes having this Success. their General took Possession of Roslock, and put the whole Duchy of Mecklenbourg under Contribution.

The

The Inhabitants were required to pay two Millions of Florins, upon pain of Military Execution; but being unable to comply, the greatest Part of them removed from their Habitations, with their Cattle and other Effects, into the Territories of the neighbouring Princes. King Augustus, in the mean Time, marched towards Gustrow, which he surprized, and posted his Troops near that Place, expecting the Conjunction of the Danes to attack the Savedes. Thefe, having but a small Tract of Land to fubfift in, began to think of the Difficulties they should be reduced to, if they were obliged to repals the Defile of Damgarten, and return to the Island of Rugen. This Reason, and the dangerous Consequences of the Lois of a Battle, induced them to hearken to a Ceffation of Arms: To which King Augustus consented for 3 Months; having confidered, that in Cafe of a Battle, and that the Savedes should have the Victory, his Electorate would fall a Prey to his Enemy; and that on the other Hand, his Country was like to fuffer by his Friends, the Swedish Pomerania not being able to sublist them; and fo many Princes concerning themselves for the Duke of Mecklenbourg, he should be forced to recal his Troops from thence, and to give Quarters to the Muscovites in his own Dominions.

The Czar was at Berlin when he received an Account of this Agreement, which was not at all pleafing to him. He feemed to have fome Jealoufy of the Defigns of Augustus, whom he suspected to be carrying on a private Treaty with the Swedes; for which Reason his Majesty hastened into Mecklenbourg, to provide for a Junction with the King of Denmark, who had advanced as far as Gadebusch with his Troops. Some Saxon Squadrons joined him; but the Rullians could not do so before the Sweder had attacked the Danish Army, who were entirely defeated. The other Saxons rejoined the Ruffians, that they might be in a Condition to oppose the victorious Swedes, who they imagined would take the Route of Pomerania, to penetrate into Poland: But Count Steinbock, far from acting thus, advanced his Troops towards Jutland, in order to take up his Quarters in Holflein. The Cass deliberated for fome Time whether he fooded attack Steinbock in his March ; but at length resolved to go towards Pomerania, and afterwards, in concert with the King of Denmark, agreed to open the next Campaign with the Attack of Rugen, and the Siege of Strat-

Jund.

Whilst the Czar was exposing himself to all these Fatigues, new Troubles were fomented in Turky, and new Enemies attacked his Troops in Poland. On the other Hand, his Subjects used all Means to make Petersburgh one of the most magnificent Cities of Europe; and the Fame of this great Monarch's Actions reaching to the Center of Asa, brought at this Time an Ambassador from Persia, who made a publick Entry into Moscov, where he waited the Return of his Majesty. There was something uncommonly grand in this Entry, there being no less than 900 Waggons, loaded with Baggage and Merchandize, and 400 Secretaries or Clerks, Sword in Hand, commanded by proper Officers, at the Head of

it. The whole Calvacade was equally superb.

The Starost Grudzinski, who had gone into Turky to the King of Sweden, undertook to make an Irruption into Poland, with about 4000 Men, Coffacks, Valacks, and other Troops gathered together. He penetrated into Great Poland, as far as Pildry, from whence he carried off the Regiment of General Baur; Colonel Gordon, who had the Command of it, nor any of the Officers, in the least apprehending that they had Enemies so near them. Another Party got as far as Schwerin, beyond Pofnania, where was a Magazine guarded by 300 Russians, who made a brave Defence, and killed many of the Enemy before they would yield. In short, this Irruption was attended with fuch Success, that if the King of Saveden and Potocky had been there, with the rest of the Troops, their Party must certainly have been restored to as great Power as ever. General Baur, informed of what had happened, left Pomerania, and came Post to Posnania, where assembling with all Speed a Body of 4000 Russians, he was joined by 80 Companies of the Crown Army; and then Fortune turned on a fudden against Grudzinski, who was surprized by Baur, as he had furprized his Regiment at Pifdry, so that he had not Time to decamp, but in great Confusion. He and his Party were warmly purfued, and overtaken at Kruter-Schein.

fcbein. Grudzinski, and the Officers under him, immediately abandoned their Troops, and retired into Silesia. The Polanders, who were of this Party, presently surrendered to the Troops of the Crown, with whom they made some Capitulation, and came together against the rest of the Party, composed of Germans, Cossacks, and Valacks. Some of the last took to slight; but about 2000 of them threw down their Arms, and surrendered.

This Invasion was a just Subject of Complaint from the Czar against the Turks, who had thereby violated the last Treaty: Which gave occasion to Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoff to publish his Universalia, wherein he complained of that, and of the Conduct of the Nobles of Gracow. Siradia, and Califb, who had favoured the Invasion. He gave notice to the Inhabitants of Great and Little Poland, that if they did not behave with more Moderation, his Czarish Majesty would re enter Poland, with all his Troops. The King of Saveden, tho' it was his Party that had been the Aggressors, did not fail of making Use of this, and clamoured loudly against the Russians, who had purfued some of the Coffacks quite into the Turkifb Territories; and the Sultan fuffering himself to be prevailed upon by the Cham of Tartary, M. Defalleurs, and the Ministers of Sweden, broke once more the last Treaty, on pretence of there being some Russian Troops vet remaining in Poland: But on all other Accounts, it could not be denied that the Treaty of Pruth had been executed. The Sultan, in order to be fatisfied whether the Czar had any Forces in Poland or not, fent an Aga to enquire into it, who, being in the Swediff Interest made his Report accordingly. The Sultan hereupon, who had fome Intelligence of the Grand Vizier Jujuf's being bribed to the Czar's Interest, immediately deposed him, and gave the Seal to Soliman Balbaw: And having, as he thought, wherewithal to convince the Mufti of the Muscovites violating the Treaty, he assembled his Council, before whom, when he had given fome other Reason, for his Intention, the Musti offering to give his Confent to declare War, his Highness made him write it down upon the Spot, and immediately ordered the two Mu/covite Ambassadors, and the two Hostages, to be carried Prisoners to the Seven Towers. Order Orders were fent to all the Bashaws to raise new Troops, and the Grand Signior came with his whole Court to Adrianople, whither a folemn Embaffy was coming to him from King Augustus, with a Retinue of 300 Persons, all of whom he ordered to be seized on the Road, and imprisoned. But notwithstanding all this Prelude, the Sultan's Favourite, Ali Coumourgi, having Defigns in view which made him defire the Czar for an Ally, and King Angustus finding Means to bring him over to his Interest, Affairs took another Turn; and the Sultan, perfuaded that the Aga fent into Poland had given a false Report, was inclined again to hearken to an Accommodation. The Grand Vizier and Mufti. both the Creatures of the Favourite, tho' they had given their Votes for War, when they found that was no longer pleafing to Ali Coumourgi, came as readily into Terms of Peace. After feveral Negotiations with Schaffroff and young Czeremetoff, the Czar's Plenipotentiaries, it was promifed by them, that their Master's Troops should effectually evacuate Poland. On the other Side, the King of Saveden was to be fent out of the Turkish Dominions. The Sultan stipulated that the Ambassadors of Mulcowy and Poland should be responsible for the Security of his Person; and that he, on the other Hand, should ratio no Commotions in Poland.

The Serasquier of Bender went, by Order of the Grand Signior, to Varnitfa, where Charles was then encamped, to acquaint him with the Refolution of the Porte, and to let him know, that it was expected he should comply without making any Delay. The King told the Bashaw that he must first have where withal to pay his Debts, and furnish him with Conveniences for his Journey; but this was only an Excuse, he being determined not to depart. The Bashaw asking him how much would be requifite, the King answered, 1000 Purfes, which is above 100,000 /. Sterling. The Bashaw writing to the Porte on this Head, instead of 1000, had 1200 Purses sent him, but with express Orders not to deliver them till his Departure: But he, and his Treafurer Grothusen, having prevailed upon the Bashaw to let them have the Money, he still persisted in his Reso-Jution of continuing where he was, in spite of all that could could be faid by the Bashaw. The Cham of Tartary, who was to conduct him on his March, had received Orders likewise to see that the Purses were not delivered till he was ready to depart: So that both he and the Bashaw were forced to write to the Porte, to clear them. felves to the Sultan, and protest that they were deceived by his folemn Promife of going away immediately. This occasioned a positive Order to be sent to the Cham and Bashaw, to oblige him to go out of the Turkish Dominions by Force, or to bring him dead or alive to Adrianople. Charles could not be perfuaded but that the Cham and Bashaw were in a Confederacy to deliver him up to his Enemies : therefore continued obstinate in his Refusal, which forced them to put the Sultan's Orders in Execution: Upon which followed the famous Action at Bender, wherein he gave most extravagant Proofs of his Bravery, opposing, with undaunted Resolution, 26,000 Turks and Tartars, with only the Officers of his Houshold, and about 300 Savedes.

CHAP. IV.

The Czar takes Frederickstadt, and drives Steinbock into Tonningen. Makes a Descent into Finland; takes Abo. Battle of Pulkona. The Czar settles the Russian Trade at Petersburgh, Obtains a Vistory at Sea, and makes a Naval Triumph. Receives an Ambassador from the Usbock Tartars. Institutes the Order of St. Catharine. Makes an Enquiry into several Frauds. Sequestration of Pomerania. Strassand taken. The Czar erests an Academy at Petersburgh. A Son born to the Czarwitz. Death of his Consort. The Czarina de livered of a Son. Death and Interment of the Czarina Dowager.

THE Military Operations still went on in the Savediff Provinces in Germany. General Steinbock was encompassed in Holstein, and caught, as it were, in a Net, by the Management of the Danis General and his Czarish Majesty: For after the Battle of Gadebusch, the Czar, with a Body of Troops, passed the Steeknis and went with Prince Menzikoff into Hamburgh, where he had feveral long Conferences with General Scholten. From Hamburgh he went to Altena, that had been lately burnt by the Swedes, in revenge for the Danes having destroyed Stade. The miserable Inhabitants were forced, in extreme cold Weather, to take up their Lodgings on the Snow, while their Houses and Effects were all burnt. The Russian Monarch beheld with Grief the Ruins of the Place, and ordered 1000 Roubles to be distributed among the unfortunate Citizens. In the mean Time the Troops made feveral Motions, as well to inclose the Swedes, as to facilitate the Junction of the Danes and Russians. The Czar fent General Baur to attack a Body of Savedes, who defended the Bridge of Holling fledt; and tho' they made a flout Resistance, yet the Russian General, at the Head of 4000 Men, carried the Post, took feveral Prisoners, and afterwards broke down the Bridge. General Steinbock, perceiving that he had made a false Step in taking that Route, was willing to repair it by repassing the Eyder; but being informed that the Russian Cavalry was in full March, he was obliged to intrench himself between Frederickstadt, Husum, and Tonningen. But on the 12th of February, the Czar, putting himfelf at the Head of five Battalions of his Guards, and some Dragoons, went in Person, and attacked the Swedes in their Intrenchments; and, after a very long Refistance, drove away the Enemy, who were obliged to retire to the main Body of their Army: Upon which the Swedish Garrison in Frederickstadt betook themselves to Flight, with much Precipitation. The Ruffians purfued the Enemy for some Time, taking Part of their Baggage, and making about 300 of them Prisoners, with the Loss of only one Lieutenant, and some Dragoons and Grenadiers: His Majesty entered the Town the same Day, and lay there all Night.

The Fear that General Steinbock was in of being attacked, made him use all his Endeavours to engage Colonel Wolf, Governor of Tonningen, in Holftein, to give him leave to bring his Army into that Place. It is on what passed at this Time, that the King of Denmark founds his Pretentions of keeping the Country of Holftein, which he took from Duke Charles Frederick, who afterwards became Son-in-Law to the Czar. This Prince was brought up at Stockholm; his Uncle, the Bishop of Lubeck, being appointed Administrator of his Dukedom. His Father, Frederick IV, had been killed at the Battle of Clissau, Anno 1702, when a Neutrality was agreed to for the States of the young Duke. There was only this Fortress of Tonningen in all Holstein, where an Afylum could be found for Steinbock; who therefore made the most pressing Instances to the young Duke, to provide for the Safety of the Swedish Army, by giving Orders to the Commandant to receive them under the Cannon, or even into the Place, if Necessity required it. The Motives made use of were so strong, that the Duke fent an Order for that Purpose. But the Consent of the Administrator was likewise thought necessary. without which it was feared the Commandant would scruple to comply with their Defire. The Administrator made more Difficulty in the Affair than his Nephew had done, and would not come into it, without flipulating certain Conditions with General Steinbock; nor had he done it at all, if it had not been made appear to him, that the Neutrality was but little regarded by the Danes, who lived as they pleased in all Parts of Sleswick-Holstein. He did comply however at last, and the Swedish Troops being received into the Fortress, was what gave an Opportunity to the King of Denmark to feize on the Duchy of Slefwick, and put it under Sequestration, as he did foon after the Duchy of Holftein.

wards

The Retreat of Steinbock into Tonningen put an End to the Campaign, the Season not being proper either to befiege or bombard that Place; and the Russian Troops went into Quarters so convenient, that they could prevent the Savedes passing the Eyder. On the 23d of February 1713, the Czar took Leave of the King of Denmark, trusting to him the Command of his Troops, after having recommended to his Generals the observing a strict Discipline. He assured his Danish Majesty, that he was going to find Employment for the Savedes on the Side of Finland; and he was as good as his Word. He went next to Hanover, and was received with all imaginable Respect at the Court of the Elector; conversing often with Princels Sophia, for whom he had conceived a very great Esteem. From Hanover he went to the Court of Wolfenbuttel, where he used his good Offices to reconcile the Princess and the Czarewitz, and engaged her to come to Petersburgh. From Wolfenbuttel he went to Schonbausen, where he had an Interview with the King of Prussia, who had just then succeeded his Father, and was come on purpose to throw himself in the Way of the Czar, that he might confult with him on the Affairs of Pomerania. The Czar hastened through Dantzick and Koningsberg to Riga, where he found the Czarina delivered of a Princess, to whom he gave the Name of Maria Petrowna.

As foon as the Czar arrived at Petersburgh, he got together at Revel, Narva, and other Ports of the Gulph, about 300 Veffels, upon which he embarked, in the Beginning of May, 12,000 Men, who, being carried by a favourable Wind to the Coasts of Finland, landed at Helfing fos. A Body of Swedish Troops, under General Lubekker, dared not oppose his Descent; but burnt their Barracks, and retired to Abo, to make Head against the Enemy behind the Walls of their Capital. The Czar, not thinking himfelf ftrong enough to attack them, was contented to make Bergo a Place of Arms, and prepare a good Magazine there; after which he returned to Petersburgh, to fend a Convoy thither. While this was getting ready, the Vice-Admiral put to Sea with 12 Men of War and 5 Frigates, with a Defign to take or burn 2 Swediff Vessels that were before Helsing fos. But the Vice-Admiral's Ship striking on a Quickfand, he was obliged to burn it; and some of the Captains managed with very little Skill. However, this ill Success put no Stop to the Czar's Progress, but he returned with the fecond Convoy; which enabled Prince Galliczin to form an Army of 20,000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, who were followed by a good Train of Artillery. The Czar put out to Sea himself, with 20 Frigates, to go in quest of a Squadron of Swedish Ships; but having learnt that they were so advantageously posted, that there was no Possibility of attacking them, he abandoned this Project, and rejoined his Army at Schrendo, 5 Leagues from Helfingfos. On the 2d of September the Russians forced the Passage of Carelsloio, which was defended by 800 Sauedes. This

This opened to them the Way to Abo, where the Ruffian Army arrived on the 8th, and found the Place abandoned to them, with much Provision in it. But the greatest Booty was a large Number of Books, which he tent to Petersburgh, towards furnishing the Library he was making there.

After the Taking of Abo, his Majesty returned to Petersburgh; ordering his Generals to follow the Swedish Army that was on the Side of Thavasthus, and which confisted of 9 or 10,000 Men. Tho' Thavastbus is not a Place of any Strength, yet the Savedes defended it for fome Time, and then quitted it to retire among the Mountains and Bogs, having thrown fome of their Artillery into the Water. They posted themselves at the Passage of Pulkona, which they guarded with Cannon. The Russians followed them in their Retreat; but at the Sight of the Post they were in, made a Halt, and were obliged to throw up an Intrenchment to cover themselves. They then endeavoured to take them in the Rear, by passing very deep Morasies, which they did with about 7000 Men, commanded by the Lieutenant Generals Apraxin and Butterlin, and Major General Thermischen. Arnfeldt, who commanded the Swedes, having Notice of their Defign, fent some Regiments to support 400 Horse, posted where the Russians were to come over. Prince Galliczin first attacked the Swedish Horse, to whose Affistance Arnfeldt advanced with four or five Regiments, which occasioned an obstinate Battle. The Russians were drove back by the Cavalry almost into the Water; but the other Wing, who were only engaged with the Swedish Infantry, charged with such Vigour that it made them retire. At length Admiral Apraxin, with Bruce, Gollowin, and Wolokonski, who brought up the Rear, charged the Savedes fo brifkly, that they made them betake themselves to Flight, with full Speed, towards Norest and Tammerfort. Thus the Victory fell to the Russians, who lost indeed 700 Men; but the Enemy had a greater Number flain and taken Prisoners, befides the Lofs of feveral Pieces of Cannon. The Czar caused Thavashbus to be fortified, to stop the Incursions of the Savedes in Winter.

The King of Denmark, affifted by the Ruffians, was fuccessful in reducing Tonningen and General Steinbock, who having maintained his Post as long as he could, was at length, through Want and Hunger, forced to furrender himself and all his Forces Prisoners of War. And as it was not possible to form the Siege of Stralfund without being Masters of the Island of Rugen, the Rusfians and Saxons, aided by the Danes, executed this Defign with good Success, on the 23d of July, without any other Loss than five or fix Men. Prince Menzikoff had for some Time blocked up Stetin, with 24,000 Rusfians; and, according to an Agreement with the King of Prussia, that Town, with the rest of the High Swedish Pomerania, were sequestered into his Hands, as Holstein had been into the Hands of the King of Denmark; and fo the Allies were obliged to withdraw their Troops out of the Swedish Provinces in Germany. In this Retreat, Prince Menzikoff coming into the Territories of Hamburgh, threatened that City with Military Executions if the Citizens did not pay him 500,000 Crowns; but the Demand was compounded for half. The City of Lubeck paid him 100,000, and the City of Dantzick 150,000. With these Contributions the Prince returned to Peterfburgh, where the Czar, tho' very well fatisfied with the Success of his Arms, could not approve of the Sequestration of Pomerania, and therefore refused at first to ratify the Treaty made with Menzikoff, giving fome Reasons against it to the King of Prussia; but these were so well answered, that he was fatisfied, and undertook to find Employment for his Troops elsewhere, which was no difficult Matter.

The Emperor, and the Powers interested in the War of the North, had agreed to hold a Congress at Brunswick, whither the Regency of Sweden consented to send their Plenipotentiaries, and where several Ministers were already arrived: But this Project came to nothing. The Czar, who desired only a good Peace, that might consirm to him the quiet Possession of his Conquests, foresaw the little Success that was like to attend this Undertaking; and therefore, that he might not give his Enemies Time to recover themselves, tooks all necessary Measures, during the Winter, to pursue his Conquests in Finland, Still keeping in View his great Defign, of perfecting the Establishment of Petersburgh, he caused at this Time 1000 Families to come thither from Moscogu: He offered likewise great Advantages to all Foreigners that should fettle there, and published an Order through all Muscowy, declaring, that the Goods that were usually fent to Archangel, should from thenceforth be fent to Petersburgh; requiring all Merchants and others to acquaint their Correspondents with this Regulation, and that the Duties which were to be paid at Petersburgh should, in every Respect, be the same as were paid before. He also made publick Declaration, that if the Regency of Sweden should stop any Vessels coming towards his Dominions, he was in a Condition to hinder them from entering the Ports of Sweden. And, befides a great Number of Gallies and Barks, which he had ordered to be built, he bought feveral in England and Holland, which he gave Orders to have equipped at Revel.

Prince Gallicain had not remained idle fince the Battle of Pulkona, but kept harrassing the Swedes continually, who making a running Fight of it, almost all Finland was under Contribution. At length the Rullians, near Lapla, came up with Arnfeldt, who had intrenched himfelf there with 8 or 9000 Men, one Part of which were ill-armed Peafants. The Russian General attacked them. They stood firm at first, and repulsed the Russians; but when they returned to the Charge, the Peafants took to their Heels, and drew the Soldiers after them. Victory was of the more Importance to the Russians, because by it they were become entire Masters of Finland. The Czar, foon after this Conquest, caused a Manifesto to be published, wherein he represented, that having proposed an equitable Peace to Sweden, and that Crown having rejected all fuch Offers, the Swediff Nation could blame no body but themselves, for all the Miseries and Calamities which might fall upon them.

In the Beginning of June, 1714, Colonel Schubajoff, Governor of Wybourg, had Orders to march with 1000 Men, and a sufficient Train of Artillery, to attack the capital Fortress of Savolaxia, called Nyslot. The Governor appeared before the Place on the 8th of June, and took Post on a little Island named Malm, whence he drove the Savedes, who had lodged themselves there to dispute his Passage. He then caused Batteries to be raised at proper Places, and on the 28th, a sufficient Breach being made, the Savedish Governor was summoned. He, considering that he had a Retreat to a sortised Casse, and that the Approach to the Town was desended by a rapid Stream, would not hearken at first to any Propositions: But when he saw that the Russians were getting ready Floats of Timber, and that they appeared determined to make the Assault, he consented to a Capitulation; pursuant to which, the Place was surrendered to the Muscovites the next Day.

The Savedes had fitted out their Fleet to fuccour Finland, or rather to observe the Russians, left they should make some Descent on the Island of Aland, or even in Sweden itself. Admiral Watrang, with this Fleet, at first gained some Advantages on the Coast of Abo, where they funk some Russian Vessels, took about 200 Prifoners, and feized on the Port of Twergvin. The Czar's Fleet confifted of 30 Ships of the Line, the greatest Part of which had been built in England and Holland, and were now at Revel to be victualled. These 30 Ships were followed by some Frigates and Yachts, by 80 Galleys, and 100 Demi-Galleys, without reckoning a great Number of flat Boats called Schampavies. This Fleet was got together under Cronflot, whither the Swedes intended to go and burn it: But the Advice-Yachts making Reports, that they had perceived the Swedish Vice-Admiral Lilie standing out to Sea with 14 Men of War, the Russian Rear-Admiral defired the Admiral to order him to take a View of the Enemy, and to detach him with 25 Galleys towards the Isles nearest the Swedish Fleet. This was approved, and the Rear-Admiral, who was the Czar himfelf, was no fooner arrived in full View of the Enemy's Station, than he obferved that the Swedish Admiral continued there with 6 Men of War of the Line, and 3 Frigates, and that the Vice-Admiral was fleering his Course towards the South-Eath, having with him Bomb-Veffels; whence he judged that his Delian might be to attack the Ruffian Fleet at Rearly or the Calleys The Rear-Admiral immediately

ately fent an Account of this in Writing to the Admiral, and defired him to come and join him the next Morning. After some Deliberation, the Resolution was taken to detach 20 Gallies to endeavour to pass behind the Enemy's Fleet, as near to the Coast as was practible, by favour of a Calm which happened at that Time; and this was executed under the Command of Commodore Ismaiervitz, Brigadier Wolcoff, and Captain Bredake. The Enemy perceiving it, immediately gave the Signal for weighing Anchor, and making ready to fail, and fired very hard at the Ruffian Gallies: But the Bullets could not reach them, by reason of the too great Distance; and their large Ships could not approach nearer to the Shore. The Admiral seeing those 20 Gallies had passed so successfully, detached 15 more under Brigadier Le Fort, the Captains Dumont and Grier, who paffed likewife by Rowing. Hereupon the Swediff Admiral put abroad a white Enfign, which was a Signal for his Vice-Admiral to return. In the mean while, it being known that the Enemy had a Frigate, 6 Gallies, and three less Vessels, at the Place where the Ruffians defigned to put ashore, Ifmajeavite judged it best to attack them: But it was too late; and belides, the Swediff Vice-Admiral had joined Admiral Watrang, The Ruffian Admiral at the fame Time determined to attempt to force a Passage, if it should be necessary, through the Enemy's Fleet, which had changed their Station a little, to go and affift the Gallies. The next Day this Refolution, tho' very hazardous, was executed with fo great Order and Success, that the Russians passed close by the Enemy, sustaining all their Fire with the Loss only of one Galley. All the Fleet having passed thus, Commodore Ismaiewitz gave Notice that he had block'd up the Enemy's Real-Admiral: Whereupon the Russian Admiral Apraxin ranged the Fleet in Order of Battle, fent Adjutant-General Jagufin/ky to fummon the Swedish Rear-Admiral Ehrenschild to furrender, and, on his Refufal, caufed him to be attacked by the Vanguard at 3 in the Afternoon fo vigoroufly, that, not withstanding the Superior Fire of the Enemy, the Frigate, as also the Gallies, were taken by Boarding. Admiral Ehrenschild, having first taken down his Flag, leaped into a Shallop to endeavour his Escape; but he was taken, after some Refistance, by Captain Bakeoff.

This Attack by the Ruffian Vanguard, was conducted by the Czar, Real-Admiral of his own Fleet, and by General Weide; and the Bravery which the Officers and Soldiers shewed in the Action, cannot be sufficiently set forth. The Swedes lost 936 Soldiers and Sailors, of whom 577 were made Prisoners. The Russians had in the whole 124 killed, and 341 wounded. The Swedish Veffels, in which were 116 Guns, with all the Prifoners. were fent to Revel. The first Consequence of this Victory, was the Taking the Island of Aland, where the Czar landed 16,000 Men, designing to transport thither his Forces encamped near Abo : from whence, having but 12 Leagues to the Coasts of Saveden, he thought to make a Descent at Stockholm: But the Season of the Year not permitting his Majesty to execute so important an Enterprize, and being covered with Laurels already, he retook the Route of Revel, and from thence returned to Petersburgh, into which City he made a most triumphant Entry, surrounded with Savediffs Prisoners and Prizes. He appeared himself only as a Rear-Admiral; and as foon as his Majesty came under the Triumphal Arch, all the Senators, Grandees, and Foreign Ministers, repaired thither to congratulate him upon his Victory. The Governor of Moscow, in the Name of the Empire, complimented him on his Bravery, and thank'd him for his good Services. The triumphal Arch was most magnificently adorned, and represented divers Emblems. Among others was the Russian Eagle feizing an Elephant, with this Infcription; The Eagle catches no Flies; alluding to the Name of a Swedish Frigate, called The Elephant. The Victorious and Vanquished proceeded to the Fortress, where the Vice-Czar Romadonofski fitting on a Throne, furrounded by the Senate, caused the Czar, as Rear-Admiral, to be called before the Assembly, and received at his Hands a Relation in Writing of the Victory obtained. The same being read by Romadonofski and the Senators, they took it under Confideration, and proposed several Questions to the Rear Admiral: After which they unanimously declared him Vice Admiral of Ruffia, in Recompence for his faithful ful Services done to his native Country; the whole Room refounding with, Health to the Vice Admiral. The Czar, having returned Thanks, went on board his Sloop, on which he hoisted the Flag of Vice-Admiral; and having received many Compliments, went to Prince Menzikoff's Palace, where a noble Entertainment was prepared.

After being rifen from Table, he shewed particular Marks of Esteem to M. Ebrenschild, and said to all the Noble Russians standing about him : Here you see a brave and faithful Servant of his Master, who has made himfelf worthy of the highest Reward at his Hands, and who shall always have my Favour as long as he is with me, though he has killed me many a brave Russian. I forgive it you, (faid he, turning to the Swede with a Smile) and you may depend upon my Good-will. Ebrenschild having thanked the Czar, answered : However bonourably I may have acted with Regard to my Master. I did but my Duty. I fought Death (having received feven Wounds); but did not meet with it; and it is no small Comfort to me in my Misfortune, to be a Prisoner of your Majesty, and to be used so favourably, and with so much Distinction, by so great a Sea Officer, and now worthily Vice-Admiral. M. Ebrenschild affirmed, that the Russams had fought like Lions, and that nothing but his own Experience could have convinced him, that the Czar had made fo good Soldiers of his flupid Subjects. One of the Ships which had a share in this Victory, had been built at Petersburgh: upon which Occasion, the Czar being on board his new Veffel, with feveral old Russians fitting about him, addressed the following Discourse to them.

[&]quot;Brethren, said he, who is that Man among you, who 30 Years ago could have had only the Thought of being employ'd with me in Ship-Carpenters Work here in the Baltick; of coming hither in a German Dress to settle in these Countries conquered by our Fatigues and Bravery; of living to see so many brave and victorious Soldiers and Seamen sprung from Russian Blood; to see our Sons coming home able Men from foreign Countries; to see so many foreign Artificers and Handicraste-Men settling in our Dominions, and to see the remotest Potentates express so great an Esteem for us? The Historians place the antient Seat of all Sciences in Greece, from whence being expelled by the Fatality of the Times, they spread in Italy, and afterwards dispersed themfelves all over Europe; but by the Perverseness of our Ancestors were hindered from penetrating any farther than into Poland; though the Polanders, as well asthe Germans, formerly groped in the same Darkness in which we have lived hitherto; but the indefatigable Care of their Governors so open'd their Eyes at length, that they made themselves Masters of those Arts, Sciences, and Improvements of Life, that formerly Greece boasted of. It is now our Turn, if you will seriously fecond my Defigns, and add to your blind Obedience a voluntary Knowledge, and employ yourselves to the Enquiry of good and Evil. I can compare this Transmigration of Sciences with nothing better than the Circulation of the Blood in the Human Body; and my Mind almost gives me, they will some Time or other quit their Abode in England, France, and Germany, and come to fettle for fome Centuries among us, and, perhaps, afterwards return again to their original Home into Greece. In the mean Time, I earnesty recommend, to your Practice the Latin Saying, Ora & Labora, Pray and Work; and in that Case be persuaded, you may happen, even in your Life-Time, to put other civilized Nations to the Blush, and to carry the Glory of the Russian Name to the highest Pitch.". crossiv , into or the lod ..

The Russam heard this Harangue of their Monarch with a respectful Silence, often crying out, That is true; adding, that they were all disposed to follow his Orders, and to set him before them for an Example. This confirms the Judgment made of him, by Rear-Admiral Ebrenschild, and the Idea that most Men had of his great Capacity, the Extent of his Genius, and his sine Understanding. Those who had the Honour to be about him, could not but own that he was the most judicious Minister, the most experienced General, Officer, and Soldier, in the Russam Empire; the most learned of all the Russam Theologists or Philosophers; very well versed in History and Mechanicks; an able Shipbuilder.

builder, and a good Sailor: And altho' in all Arts he practifed he had but mean Disciples, obstinate and illiterate, yet he set them all on a good Foot, and disciplined his Treops in such a Manner, especially his Infantry, that there were no Tooops in the World they would yield to.

Things were in this State, when Charles XII. King of Sweden returned to his Dominions, after the most remarkable Action of Bender, wherein he had done more than ever Roman durst feign to do. He was carried Prisoner, by the Sultan's Order, to Adrianople, and kept for fome Time under Confinement in the Borough of Dimotica, 'till, by the Interpolition of the French Ambalfador, the Porte was prevailed on to use him with less Rigour. He was then fent to a Village called Demirtalh, in Hopes the French Ambaffador would be able to dispose him to leave the Turkifb Dominions, and return Home by Sea: But he continued obstinate, and immoveably perfifted in his first Defigns; feeding himself with vain Expectations, that, by his Intrigues at the Porte, he should be able to kindle a new War between the Czar and the Turks. But, finding himself disappointed herein, and even flighted by the Turks, he was forced by mere Necessity to quit their Territories: And, having passed incognito through Transilvania, Hungary, Austria, and Germany, arrived at Stralfund on the 22d of November in the Night, attended only by Colonel During, and two Servants, after having rode near 300 German Leagues in 16 Days, and not once had his Boots off in that Time. He was complimented on his Return by all the neighboaring Princes, who were defirous to bring him, if possible, to listen to a Peace. But he was of a Temper not to fuffer Mediators to prescribe Laws to him, and therefore this first Thoughts were bent upon raising 25,000 Men in Pomerania, and Money to Support the necessary Expence of renewing the War.

The Courage of the Swedes was very much revived at the Return of their Prince, which had been fo greatly funk before by the many Losses they had sustained. That Prince did not think fit to declare his Mind on the Propositions made him immediately after his Return: First, To confirm the Treaty for the Sequestration of Stetin; and, 2dly, To promise to forbear all Hostilities against the Danes and Saxons within the Empire; bis Pruffian Majesty engaging, that the Kings of Poland and Denmark should not attack the Swedish Pomerania. And his not declaring himself on these Articles, was looked upon as a plain Indication of his Defign of renewing the War in Lower Saxony, for recovering the Duchy of Bremen, yielded by the King of Denmark to the Elector of Hanover, just then ascended the Throne of Great Britain; and for restoring the Ducal House of Holstein. The King of Prussia therefore assembled his Forces, to be in a Readiness for securing Stetin, and preserving the Peace of Lower Saxony, in concert with the House of Brunsapick and other Princes. The Czar, on the other Hand, declared that as he withdrew his Troops from Pomerania only on Account of the Inftances of the King of Pruffia, he was refolved to fend a powerful Army to affift his Allies in reducing the Island of Rugen, the Fortresses of Stralfund and Wifmar, and to drive the Swedes entirely out of Germany, unless the King of Saveden accepted the Propositions of the King of Prussia. But the Joy of the Swedes, upon the first News of the Arrival of their King in Pomerania, was very much lessened by his Resolution to continue the War in Germany, and his forbidding all his Subjects to come to him without express Leave. He promised them, that he would give such a Diversion to the Forces of the Czar, as should oblige him to abandon his Enterprizes against Squeden.

and,

In the mean Time, the Czar, having gained the Sea Victory before related, was so much encouraged to augment his Fleet, that he had next Summer 50 Ships of the Line of Battle, and resolved to engage the whole Savedish Fleet, in order to carry on his Design of attacking Stockholm. But his Majesty, even when most embarassed with his Wars abroad, neglected no Opportunity of improving the Manners of his People at home. Being sensible that all the Pains he took to polish his Nobility, would be to no Purpose, unless he could also inspire the Fair Sex with the same Politeness, he made an Order at this Time, that such of the Nobility who were of Age, and marry'd, should take their Wives along with them in their Travels, by which Means both Sexes might become equally polifhed. The Ladies were infinitely pleafed with this, for they were now to be allowed a reasonable Freedom; whereas before they were under a barbarous Slavery.

The Renown of the Czar's Exploits having spread through the vast Dominions of the Usbeck Tartars, which border upon China, Indoftan, and Persia, brought to his Court this Year an Ambassador from their Can, or Cham, who arrived at Petersburgh on the 17th of May, and had Audience of the Czar the next Day, according to a Ceremonial agreed upon. His Commission consisted of three Articles, 1st. That his Master rejoiced at his Czarish Majesty's Success in War, and the Increase of his Power, and recommended himself to his Protection. adly, He defired the Czar to enjoin his Vassal, the Tartarian Can Ajuga, to keep good Neighbourhood and Peace with him: For which the Can of Ufbeck offered in Acknowledgment 50,000 Soldiers to the Czar, who should be ready to march upon his Command. 3dly, he offered a Paffage through his Dominions for the Czar's yearly Caravans to China, and even proposed to enter into a Treaty of Commerce with Ruffia; by which an incredible Advantage was to accrue to his Czarish Majesty. He afterwards laid many Silks, and other Chineje and Persian Goods, together with exquisite Furs, at the Czar's Feet, as a Present from his Master; telling him withal, that he left fome Perfian Beafts behind him at Moscow, and expressing his Concern that a fine Leopard and an Ape died on the Road. In this Speech he stiled the Czar, The wife Emperor, which with these Tartars is the highest Title of Honour. The Ambassador's Name was Atscherbi; he was about 50 Years of Age, of a lively and venerable Aspect; had been Governor to his Prince, and was now his Chief Minister. After the Audience, the Czar fent to him to go with the Great Chancellor, Count Golofkin, on board a Snow, and follow him to Cronflot, which he did the next Day at the Hour appointed; but by the Unskilfulness of the Russian Captain, they got among the Flats, and the Snow, at length, struck on the Sand. The Sailors worked long before they got off, and afterwards so violent a Storm arose, as had not been known in those Parts for four Years. The Am-

Ambassador, who had never been on such a Sea before. turned pale, and caused his Priest to fit down on his Knees before him, and read fomething out of a Book of the Prophet Aly. But the next Day they arrived fafe, when the Czar coming on board the Snow, the Tartar entertained him with some of his Country Fruits, and a Relation of many Particulars concerning its Extent and Government.

About this Time, a Draught of a Bridge was laid before the Czar, which fome thought would be very convenient to be built over the Neva, to join Petersburgh to the Continent of Ingria, from whence there was no Passage but by Boats with Oars: But his Majesty was so far from approving this Project, that he forbad even the Use of Boats with Oars, and ordered, that no one should cross the River but in Boats with Sails. This was the Occafion of many Boats being loft: It answered the Czar's End, however, which was to oblige the indocile Ruffians to learn Navigation. His whole Thoughts, in short, being continually bent upon the Glory of his People, he employed a great Part of this Year in fortifying the Citadel of Petersburgh, in raising other publick Edifices, and in building Ships, about which he found Bufiness for 40,000 Hands. But as these Works were not carried on with fo much Expedition as he defired, he forced the Peafants of Finland, and the Swedish Prisoners, to affift in them. Six thousand of the latter were brought from Samara, a Town on the Wolga, where they had buried a great Part of their Comrades, in the unwholfome Mines of Sulphur. The Czarina Catharine was fo touched with Pity at the Sight of them, that she ordered Winter Garments and Money to be distributed among them. His Majesty gave Orders, that whoever built Houses at Petersburgh for the future, should make the Walls of Brick, and cover the Roofs with Tiles. He fent for that Purpose to his Agent in France, to procure the best Workmen; promising them, among other Advantages, to have their House-Rent free, and an Exemption from all Taxes for ten Years. He likewise engaged the Czarina, Dowager of the Czar John, to leave Mofcow, with the Princesses her Daughters, and reside at PeChap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 193 tersburgh, into which City he introduced near 12,000

Families.

On the 23d of July this Year, 1714, the Imperial Princes, Consort of the Czarewitz, was brought to Bed of a Daughter, who was baptized by the Name of Natalia. The Czarewitz was at that Time at Carlesbad, whither he went on a pretended Indisposition, that he might be out of the Way at the Delivery of the amiable, but too unfortunate Princes, whose Melantholy the Czar and Czarina did all that was possible to alleviate.

At the Time of folemnizing the Feast of St. Andrew, her Majesty appeared with the Collar of the new Order of St. Catharine, instituted by the Czar in Honour of her, who had taken the Name of that Saint, on the Declaration of his Marriage with her. She had full Power of bestowing it on such of her own Sex as she should think proper. The Ensigns of this Order are a broad white Ribbon, to which is fixed a Medal enriched with precious Stones, wore over the Right Shoulder, and a dorned with the Image of St. Catharine, with this Motto; Out of Love and Fidelity: The Occasion for erecting it being to perpetuate the Memory of the Love and Fidelity of that Princess to his Majesty, in his distressed Condition on the Banks of the Pruth.

His Majesty having, with infinite Pains, been searching into the Causes of the Disorders that had crept into the Administration of his Affairs, and at length discovered from whence it proceeded, that his Army had been fo ill paid, and fuffered fo much as it had; that many thousand Workmen had perished; his Trade decayed; and his Revenues fallen into Confusion; took a firm Resolution to Remedy these Evils, and in the Beginning of the Year 1715, established a Grand Inquisition, under the Direction of General Bafil Dolgoruki, to examine certain Lords and others, who it was faid had defrauded his Majesty of some Millions. Most of the Great Men in Russia were affected by this Enquiry, and were obliged to give an Account of their Conduct. The great Admiral Apraxin, Prince Menzikoff, M. Korfakoff, Vice-Governor of Petersburgh; M. Kikin, Prefident; and M. Singwin, first Commissioner of the Admiralty; General Bruce, great Mafler of the Artillery; Wolkonfki and Apouchin, Senators; with 'an incredible Number of other Officers of the second and third Rank, were called to Account. Apraxin, Menzikoff, and Bruce alledged for their Excuse, that they had been for the greatest Part of their Time in the Field, or in Foreign Parts; fo that they had been fo far from being able to find out the ill Practices of their Servants, that they were even unacquainted with what was done in their own Houses: which Excuse, partly on Account of its Probability, and partly in Favour of them, was allowed; with this Proviso however, that their Purfes were to fmart feverely for their Defaults. The others, who could not justify their Conduct, underwent greater Punishments; Korfacoff publickly fuffered the Knout; Apouchin and Wolkonski were punished after the same Manner, and had besides red hot Irons drawn over their Tongues. Some were fent into Siberia, and other remote Places, and had all their Estates confiscated. The Inquisition being ended, a proper Regulation was made to prevent the like Faults of Commissaries for the future, and to make the Burthen lie eafier on the People.

K

On the 3d of January his Majesty sent a Lieutenant-Colonel to Pillan, near Koningsberg, to conduct over the Snow in Sleds, by the Help of Rollers, the great Globe of Gottorp, which was brought in that Manner to Riga. and from thence to Petersburgh by Sea. This Machine was made after a Defign of Tycho Brabe, and was so large, that 12 Persons could fit round a Table within Side of it, to make celeftial Observations, by turning it round, The Czar had feen this Curiofity at Gottorp, and was fo wonderfully-pleafed with it, that he begg'd it of the King of Denmark, and put himself to a great Expence in bringing it to Petersburgh, whole Forests being cut through to make Way for it. Arts and Sciences were much encouraged by the Czar, and many Books already produced by the Press, which he had ordered to be fet up at Mofcow. Among others, he caufed the Apophthems of great Men to be collected in three Volumes, together with short select Sentences, which, by their concise and lively Turn, he thought would be more proper to form the Manners of his People, than formal Treatifes of Morality.

Though the King of Sweden was returned, and the Czar had no longer any Troops in Poland; tho' the Porte had ratified the last Treaty, and the Boundaries of the two Empires were fettled, yet the Turks and Tartars continued still in Arms; and his Majesty having been informed from good Hands, that the King of Sweden. before his Departure from Bender, had agreed on a new Project with the Porte, according to which those two Powers were to fall upon him at once, as foon as the Swedish Army was in a Condition to act, he took all necessary Precautions on this Account, particularly to have a confiderable Body of Troops in the Ukrain, and on the Frontier Provinces of the vagabond Tartars. As to the King of Sweden, his Conduct towards the King of Pruffia drew upon him new Enemies, which were for many new Allies to the Czar, who agreed with them to make a Diversion in Sweden, while they carried on the Siege of Stralfund.

On the first News of the Tartars being in Motion, the Czar fent fresh Troops into the Ukrain, to re-inforce those that were already about Kiow, Czernikoff, and Pulsowa, which this Monarch had put in a Condition to cover all the Country. But the Alarm from this Side was groundless, the Turks having Designs elsewhere. About the same Time the Dougki Coffacks, who in the last Rupture with the Porte had joined with the Tartars, fent an Embassy to Petersburgh, to intreat his Pardon, which was readily granted by the Clemency of that Monarch, who had had 4 unfortunate Princes Refugees at his Court at one Time; Cantemir, the Hospodar of Moldavia; the two Sons of Cantacuzeno, late Hospodar of Walachia; and Militetski, who was divested of his Dominion in Georgia by the King of Perfia, and died at Moscow. While Preparations were making for a Descent into Saveden, the Czar amused his People with one of those Spectacles, which politick Princes make use of to take off the Attention of their Subjects from the Burthen of those Taxes which they were obliged to raise on them. He had, for very good Reafons, abolished the Patriarchal archal Dignity, or rather re-united it to the Crown; and, to render the Character of the antient Patriarch ridiculous, he created one Sotof, his Jefter, Mock-Patriarch. He had been his Majesty's Writing-Master in his younger Years, and at the Age of 70 was advanced to be his Jester; then made Mock-Patriarch, and, for the Humour's Sake, was raised to the Dignity of a Prince, and at length declared Pope. Invested with these imaginary Characters, and being now in the 84th Year of his Age, the Czar married him to a buxom Widow of 34, and the Nuptials were folemnized by the Court in Masks. The Company confifted of about 400 Persons of both Sexes. Every 4 Persons had their proper Dress, and mufical Instruments; fo that they represented 100 different Sorts of Habits and Musick, particularly the Afiatick Nations. The 4 Persons appointed to invite the Guefts, were the greatest Stammerers that could be found in all Russia. Old decrepid Men, who were not able to fland, had been picked out to serve for Bridesmen, Stewards, and Waiters. There were 4 Running Footmen, the most unwieldly Fellows, who had been troubled with the Gout most of their Life-time, and were fo bulky, that they wanted others to lead them. The Mock-Czar of Moscow, who represented King Dawid in his Drefs, instead of a Harp had a Lyre covered with a Bear-Skin, to play upon. He was carried on a Pageant placed on a Sled, to the 4 Corners of which were tied as many Bears, which being pricked with Goads, made fuch a frighful Roaring as well fuited the horrible Din raised by the Instruments of the rest of the Company. The Czar was dreffed like a Boor of Frizetand, and skilfully beat a Drum, in Company with 3 Generals. In this Manner, Bells Ringing every where, the Couple were attended to the Altar of the great Church, where they were joined in Matrimony by a Priest 100 Years old, who had lost his Eye-fight and Memory; to supply which Defect, a Pair of Spectacles were put on his Noie, two Candles held before his Eyes, and the Words founded into his Ears which he was to pronounce. From Church the Procession went to the Czar's Palace, where the Diversions lasted some Days.

K 2

The Armies being come into the Field in Pomerania, and his Prussian Majesty having fent thither a large Body of Troops, he published a Manifesto concerning his taking in Sequestration Savedish Pomerania, and the March of his Army. His Majesty "protested before God and the whole World, that he had nothing else in View but to preserve himself, his own Dominions, and the whole Roman Empire, in which he had so great an Interest, against the turbulent, bloody, and cruel Defigns of the King of Sweden, to ruin so many Millions of innocent People; and that his Majesty would, in the Prosecution of that Affair, as he had done before, strictly keep to the Constitutions of the Empire, according to his Offices in the Circles, for the common Welfare, and the Accomplishment of the above-mentioned Treaties: And when Affairs were brought to fuch a State, that the Empire might have no more Trouble to fear from the King of Sweden, his Majesty would lay down his Arms, and Submit the Decision of the Affair, together with the Satisfaction due to him from the King of Saveden, and what should be further necessary for a Pacification in the North, to the Congress appointed by his Imperial Majesty at Brunfavick, or to any other Treaties that might be fet on Foot elsewhere for that End."

His Czarish Majesty received Advice of the Count de Croissy's Arrival at Berlin, to offer the Mediation of the French King, for reconciling the Differences between the Kings of Sweden and Prussa. He took that Opportunity to declare, That he would not accept of the Mediation of any other for the Peace of the North, than the King of Great Britain and the States General; the sirth of whom, seeing the Danger to which all the Princes of Lower Saxony were exposed, engaged, as Elector of Hanover, to take joint Measures with the Kings of Denmark and Prussa, for the Security of the Peace of the Empire, and to act against Sweden. This produced an Agreement between that Prince and the Danes, by Virtue of which the latter made over to his Britannick Majesty the Dutchies of Bremen and Verden.

The Northern Allies having fent their Forces into Pomerania, it was not doubted but the Czar, when he put to Sea, would join the Danes, to make a Descent on the Island of Rugen: But continuing at Revel till the latter End of June, he steered towards Gotland, with a Defign to that up the Passages from Stockhom to Pomerania 3 in which he succeeded. Towards the Middle of September, the Ruffian Fleet failed from the Island of Gotland to the Coasts of Sundermania, and landed 15,000 Foot Soldiers at Jevel, about 8 Leagues from the Savedifb Army, whilst a Body of Horse, from the Army in Finland, went round the Bothnick Gulph, to penetrate into the Northern Provinces of Sweden. Besides all this, his Majesty ordered General Czeremetoff to go with 12 or 15,000 Men into Pomerania, to strengthen the Army of the Allies, and not only put an End to the Siege of Stralfund, but to take from the Savedes the Town of Wifmar, which the Danes and the Hanoverians kept blocked up. Stralfund surrendered at the latter End of December, and the King of Saveden got off in a small Bark, with 10 Persons only, to Isled in Scandinavia, and from thence went to Carelferoon, where he continued all the Winter, in ordering new Levies, and and month and all all

Prince Galliczin, who commanded in Finland, obtained also many Advantages; for he surprized the Fortress of Ula, where he sound 20 Pieces of Cannon, and a Quantity of Ammunition, and obliged the Swedish Troops to pass the Torrents of Kinni and Torno: So that there remained in all the Grand Dutchy of Finland but 3 or 400 Swedes, shut up in the Fortress of Cajanebourg, situated on an inaccessible Rock.

The Czar, ever fince his Return to Petersburgh, had given his utmost Attention to the Affairs of State, and the carrying on his Buildings in that City. He set up, at this Time, a new Academy, under the Direction of the Sieur de St. Hilaire, a Frenchman, where Riding was taught, foreign Languages, Mathematicks, and all Things proper for the Education of Gentlemen. On the 22d of October he had the Joy of seeing a Son born to the Czarewitz; but a great Damp was put to this Joy, by the Death of the Princess who brought him into the World. The Czarewitz himself shewed but little Concern on the Occasion, having on all Accounts expressed no Manner of Regard for this every-way deserving Princess, who had been unhappy from the Day of her Marriage to the Hour of her Death. Her Husband treated her without common Decency; they lived in Apartments at different Ends of the same House, and hardly faw each other once a Week; so that if the Czarewitz had not looked upon the Begetting an Heir as the Support of his own Safety, they would perhaps have been altogether invisible to each other. He even neglected the Repair of the House to that Degree, that the Princefs was exposed to the Injures of the Weather in her very Bed-chamber; and if the Czar happened to expostulate with him on any Subject of that Sort, he would load the Princess with Reproaches, as if it was she who accused him to his Father; whereas she bore her Fate with an uncommon Refignation and Constancy. The Czarewitz had taken a Finlandish Captive into this House openly, and was continually in her Company from Morning to Night. This Treatment of the Princels, together with the Neglect of her Midwives in her Lying-in, were the Occasions of her Death. When she discovered that her End was approaching, she defired to see the Czar; for the Czarina was fo near her Time that the could not go abroad. The Czar being indisposed at the fame Time, was carried thither on a Machine rolling upon Wheels. She took Leave of him in the most moving Expressions, and recommended her two Children, and her Servants, to his Protection. She embraced her Children in the tenderest Manner imaginable, and delivered them to the Czarewitz, who carried them to his Apartments; but never returned afterwards. Then the fent for her Servants, who, to the Number of 200 and upwards, lay proftrate on the Ground in the Antichamber, praying to Heaven to affift their dying Mistress in her last Moments. She comforted them, gave them feveral Admonitions, and at last her Blessing; and then defired to be left alone with the Minister. The Physicians were endeavouring to perfuade her to take fome Medicines; but she flung the Phials behind the Bed, faying with fome Emotion; Do not torment me any more, but let me die in Quiet, for I will live no longer. On the 11th of November, having continued in fervent Devotion till 11 at Night, the departed an unfortunate Life, in the 21st Year of her Age, having been married 4 Years and 6

K 4

Days. Her Corpse was, according to her Defire, intered, without being embalmed, in the great Church of the Fortress, whither it was carried on the 7th of November. with a Funeral Pomp becoming her Birth. Her Son, Peter Alexioavitz, afterwards became Emperor of Ruffia. upon the Decease of the Empress Catharine. The next Day after the Interment of the Princess, the Czarina was brought to Bed of a Prince. The Rejoicings ordered to be made on that Account, lasted 8 Days successively. On the 17th the new-born Prince was baptized by the Name of Peter Petrowitz, the Kings of Denmark and Prussia being Godfathers. The Solemnities on this Account were attended with an extraordinary Pomp. What was the most curious, was a Pye, served up at the Table of the Gentlemen, which being opened, a well-shaped Dwarf-Woman stepp'd out of it, stark naked, except her Head-Dress, and some Ornaments of red Ribbons. She made a Speech to the Company, filled some Glasses of Wine which she had in the Pye with her, and drank several Healths; after which, she was carried off the Table again. On the Ladies Table, a Man-Dwarf was ferved up in the same Manner. In the Dusk of the Evening the Company broke up, and went to the Island of Teneffari, where a noble Firework was played off in Honour to the young Prince. There were feveral curious Devices on it, and on the Top of all a Motto in Ruffian Characters : Hope with Patience.

On the 4th of December, the Czar received Advice of the Taking of the Island of Rugen, and on the 9th gave a splendid Entertainment on that Account. His Majesty was pleased to tell the Company, on producing some Afracan Melons, that that Province might be accounted a Paradise, if it had a Communication by Water with Indostan, Persia, and especially with the Black Sea, by which it might impart its noble and cheap Produce to other Countries.

In the Beginning of the Year 1716, the Czar being apprehensive that the Tartars, at the Instigation of the Turks, might intermeddle with the Affairs of Poland, sent Orders to General Wiessbach, who during the Summer had his Station near Kiow at Bagslaff, and in the Autumn at Starobud, to march with six Regiments of Dragoons behind Veronitz, to keep a watchful Eye on the the Motions of that People. The Zaporovian, and other Coffacks under the Ruffian Dominion, were likewise ordered to be in a Readiness to mount on the first Notice.

The Czarina Dowager, Marvea Matweofna, Reliet of the late Czar Theodore Alexioquitz, Peter's eldeft Brother, died at Petersburgh on the 14th of Fanuary. She was Sifter to the Grand Admiral Apraxin, and in the 51st Year of her Age; but had been supposed dead by many People long before, because she lived but 4 Weeks in Matrimony with her Confort, and upon his Death, in the Year 1682, had shut herself up in her own Apartments out of immoderate Grief, and was for 7 Years together not feen by any Body but her own Servants. Her Corple was carried with great Pomp over the Ice, to be interred in the Evening, in the Church of the Fortress, the Length of an English Mile, through a double Row of Flambeaux. The Custom which of old had obtained on the like Occasions, of making Lamentations and loud Groans, the Czar would have entirely abolifued, and Orders were given, before this Funeral, to abflain from any fuch Lamentations The Generality of the common People still held the Opinion, that the Soul of the Deceased haunted the Place where it left the Body, for 6 Weeks after ; during which Time, the nearest Relations used to perfume the Bed, and have daily Mass faid near it. There yet remained another Czarina Dowager, the Relict of the Czar John Alexiowitz, half Brother also of Peter, whose Name was Prescovia, Mother of the present Empress of Russia.

The Czar, at this Time, received News of an Irruption which the Cubanski Tartars, commanded by the Son of the Cham, had made into the Kingdom of Casan, which was become almost an annual Custom with them. They were 60,000 strong, and in their March had made 7 or 8000 Captives: Colonel Schwartz, a German, who had been 18 Years in the Czar's Service, overtook them in their Retreat, at the Head of his Regiment, composed of 1200 of his Countrymen. These Maroders, finding themselves obliged to fight, or abandon theix Slaves and Booty, had the Cruelty to place 500 Ruj-fian Women in their Front. However, Colonel Schwartz would not fet fire upon them, but attacked the Tartars in Flanck with Sword in Hand, put them to flight, took many of them, and among them the commanding Cham's Son, whom he forthwith caused to be hanged on a Tree. He rescued the Russian Prisoners, and got 1500 of the Enemy's Horfes, which, with the other Booty, he diftributed among his Men. He then came to Petersburgh, to make Report of his Expedition, and afterwards returned with new Inftructions.

KS

The Affairs of Poland were now fallen into great Confusion, where a new Confederation was fet on Foot, and headed by Gurzinski, Lieutenant of the Palatine of Sendomir. The Confederates were resolved to hearken to no Accommodation, till the Saxon Troops were difmiffed. Several great Men interposed, to persuade them to lay down their Arms, and affured them, that the King would fend away those Forces; but they answered, That as the like Promises had never yet been performed, they would not be deceived any more. The two Parties fell upon one another, and many brave Men loft their Lives in the feveral Skirmishes they had together. The Saxons were in great Danger of being cut to Pieces, which made King Augustus apply to his old Ally for Succour: But the Czar, not thinking it proper at that Time to carry his Arms into Poland, endeavoured to reconcile the Confederates and their Sovereign by Mediation. M. Dazono and Prince Dolgoruki were charged with the Negotiation, which lasted a long Time, because the Confederates would not lay down their Arms till the Saxons were fent out of the Kingdom.

CHAP V.

The Czar sets out for Germany. Marries his Niece to the Duke of Mecklenbourg. Has an Interview with the King of Prussia. Surrender of Wismar. The Czar's Interview with the King of Denmark. He commands the Fleets of sour Nations. Lays aside his Design against Schonen. Project of Baron Gortz. The Czar arrives in Holland. Assairs of Polland. Intrigues of Baron Gortz and Count Gyllembourg. The Czar arrives at Paris. Goes to the Spaw. Returns to Holland, and so by Dantzick to Petersburgh.

MANY important Affairs requiring the Czar's Presence in Lower Saxony, on the 6th of February 1716, both he and his Confort let out for Germany. The Czarina chose to be near her Husband, especially at this Time, when he was not perfectly recovered from an Indisposition that had obliged him to keep his Chamber. Their Majellies took the Route of Riga, where they arrived on the 12th. From Riga they went on the 23d to Libase, on the 25th to Memel, and on the 29th to Dantzick. Their Majesties continued in this City till the latter End of April: But the Czar, having concluded the Marriage of his Niece, the Princels Catharine, eldert Daughter of the Czar Tohn, and the Czarina Profcovia. with Duke Charles Leopold of Mecklenbourg Saverin, refolved to procure the Possession of Wilman for that Prince : for which Reason he sent about 12,000 Rushans towards Mecklenbourg, to affift in taking that Place from the Sevedes. He received, at the same Time, the agreeable News of the Surrender of Cajanebourg, the last Place that the Sweder held in Finland. The Swedish Commandant Ripulated, that he should go out with his Garrifon, which confifted of 260 Men; and that he should be efcorted 12 Miles from thence : But hearing afterwards, that there was a Body of Rufficous not at above 24 Miles Diftance, on the Side of Sweden, into whole Hands he could not avoid falling, he choic rather to yield himself Prisoner to his Conqueror. In this Forerels were found 25 Pieces of Cannon, with Ammunition and Provisions for 18 Months.

On the 19th of April, the Marriage of the Princels with the Duke of Mecklenbourg was celebrated at Dantzick, in the Presence of their Czarish Majesties. The King of Poland, who was come to confer with the Czar upon the Commotions in his Kingdom, went to the Chapel on this Occasion, attended by a large Train of Coaches. The Czar afterwards proceeded on Horfeback; the Czarina and the Princess came behind him. with a great Number of Ladies in Coaches. The Bride had an Imperial Crown on her Head. Over her Veft. which was of Silver Brocade, she had a long Robe of Crimfon Velvet, with a double Border of Ermine, the Train of which was supported by two Gentlemen. All this Company were entertained by Count Golofkin, the Grand Chancellor. The Feast was in common for the whole City; the Fountains ran with Wine, and a roafted Ox was given to the Populace. On the 20th, the King of Poland gave an Entertainment and a Ball on Account of the Marriage; and the Czar having affifted at it, the next Day, hearing that 45 of his Galleys were arrived at Koningsberg, fet out with all Expedition to review them. In Koningsberg, the Capital of Pruffia, his Majesty found the famous Persian Ambassador, who had been in France for fome Time before the Death of Leavis XIV. and gave Audience to him the 4th of May. On the 5th he embarked on board the Imperial Galley. and returned to Dantzick on the 9th, with about 30 Galleys.

During the Absence of his Czarish Majesty, the following Articles were delivered to the Magistrates of the City. I. That all Correspondence between the City and Sweden should be forbidden, and that a Muscovite Commissive should be allowed to visit all the Ships. II. That the City should furnish four Privateers of 12 Guns, and 50 Men each, to be maintained by them during the War. III. That a Muscovite Officer should be allowed on board each of those Capers. IV. That if the City would not fit out those Privateers, they should pay 200,000 Rixdollars in Specie. V. That in Case his Czarish Majesty did not think sit to make any Transportation from Dantzick to Copenhagen, the City should be obliged to furnish two or three Ships. The Czar infifted on the Acceptation of these Articles; and if the Magistrates refused, his Ministers signified, that he would use the Citizens as Enemies; but the King of Poland having amicably adjusted the Difference, his Majesty caused his little Army, encamped near the Place, to break up, and fent back his Galleys. The Dantzickers were to pay 100,000 Rixdollars; to renounce all Commerce with Sweden during the War, and to maintain 4 Ships to be furnished by his Polish Majesty. The Czar, on his Return to Dantzick, was saluted by 150 Pieces of Cannon, to let him see that they were in no Want of Artillery. He fet out the next Day for Stolpe, in his Way to Stetin, whither the King of Pruffia came incognito, to confer with him upon the Situation of the Affairs of the North. These Princes agreed in opposing the Progress of the King of Sweden into the Dominions of the Danes; but thought it not for the common Interest to affish Denmark in making Conquests on the Savedes, who were already weakened enough by the Lofs of Finland, Livonia, and Pomerania, Thele Principles were the Foundation of all that was afterwards done in Concert between his Czarish Majesty and the King of Denmark.

Dant-

The Czar went to visit Stralfund, and from thence passed into Mecklenburg, where the Allies were pushing on the Siege of Wifmar. His Majesty, with the Duke of Mecklenburg, had formed a Project, which was to put the Duke in Possession of that Fortress, that the Russians might always have a Retreat for their Ships on that Side the Baltick Sea. For this Purpose the Czar ordered a Body of Troops to advance that Way, which at first confifted only of 12,000 Men, but was foon augmented to 26,000. But this Army came too late; the Town having surrendered on the 14th of April, with Fort Valvis. The Chief Articles of the Capitulation of Wismar were as follow: The Town of Wifmar, with the Fort named Valvis, shall be furrendered to the Besiegers, who shall grant to the Garrison all usual Honours. The Garrison shall march out of the Town twenty-four Hours after the Ratification of the King of Denmark is come, and as foon as they are paffed the Liege Port, they shall surrender themselves Prisoners of War; except 1000 Men of the Swedish Nation, with their Officers, who shall keep their Arms and Baggage, to be transported to Saveden, with good Passports. Sick shall be taken Care of in the Town. The Officers may leave their Baggage in the Town, for 3 Months after the Capitulation. The Swedes, in want of Ready Money, shall give good Security. All that hath been taken, during the Time of the Siege, shall not be reclaimed. The Civil Officers may remain in the Town, without being disturbed; but those who chuse to retire. may do it in 3 Months Time. All the Officers, Civil and Military, and the other Inhabitants of the Town, shall be permitted to enjoy their Goods, Lands, and Estates in Bremen, Pomerania, and Rugen, as long as they live peaceably. All the Acts and Papers shall be faithfully delivered; and they shall remain in the Archives. The Mortgages of Lands shall be referred to Examination. Those who are comprised in the Capitulation of Tonningen, and in the Council of War held at Remburgh, shall not be prosecuted for the Cause of Desertion. None of those who by this Capitulation are to have their Liberty, shall be forced to take Service. No Refertment shall be shewn against the Burghers, who performed Military Service. The Ships and Subjects of the Northern Allies, who have ferved in the Town, shall be treated as other Prisoners of War. The Befieged shall give a faithful Lift of all the Cannon, Mortars, Military Ammunition, and other Effects, especially of the Mines. It shall be permitted to the Savedes to bring Forage at their own Expence. The Allies shall permit them to freight Ships under good Paffports. The Garrison shall be allowed to fend immediately to his Savediff Majesty, to make Report of what has passed. The Hostages shall be set at Liberty as foon as the Capitulation is figned, and the Voluntiers are declared free. These Articles were punctually executed, and the Allies took Possession of Wifmar. The Muscowites, who arrived some Days before the Place was furrendered, pretended to have some of their Troops pur in Garrison there: But this was refused by General Dewitz, as an unreasonable Pretension; and the Russian General having fent to the Czar upon that Subject, his Majesty declared that he had given no Orders for such a Demand.

Demand. However, he was fo much chagrined on the Disappointment of his Design upon this Place, that from hence may be dated the Epoch of several memorable Events, especially the Misunderstanding between him and the Court of Hanover.

While the Czar was confulting with the Duke of Mecklenbourg, how they should make up the Loss of Wismar, the King of Denmark arrived at Altena. He fet out from Altena on the 28th of May, and proceeded through the City of Hamburgh in great State to a Garden prepared for him, where, understanding that the Czar was arrived at Ham, he paid him a Visit, and had a Conference with him alone, which lasted about 2 Hours. The next Morning the Czar made a Vifit to his Danish Majesty, and had another Conference with him. These two Monarchs continued together till the 4th of June, and agreed to make a Descent in Schonen, that they might oblige the K. of Sweden to quit Norway, into which Country he was penetrated with an Army of 20,000 Men. The Czar, who made a Shew of being one of the first in this Expedition, was to join his Fleet with that of Denmark; and the Rendezvous for the Troops and Veffels was to be about Copenhagen. He left Hamburgh, and croffing the Elbe, lay at Harburgh, and let out on the 5th for Pyrmont. On the 30th he returned to Schwerin in Mecklenbourg, and on the 4th of July their Czarish Majesties came to Roslock, where the 45 Galleys were arrived, after having landed a Body of Troops in the Island of Rugen. The Czar commanded the Galleys, and the Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoff had the Command of 8000 Men. Two other Bodies of Troops entered on the other Side into Mecklenbourg, under Prince Repain and General Baur. During their March, the King of Demnark spared no Pains to get together all the transport Vessels he could. In the mean Time, the Russian Troops were in Motion on all Sides to advance toward Julland. About the Middle of July, the Czar came with the Czarina to Lubeck. He commanded the Galleys himself, with which he arrived on the 17th in the Road of Copenhagen. The King of Denmark having Advice that the Czar approached the Port, embarked on a Shallop, with his Chief Ministers, and came before that Monarch at Fort Propestein. On the 23d the Crarina arrived also at the Capital of Denmark, where the Court and the City used their utmost Endeavours to shew them all Manner of Diversions, while they waited for the Execution of the Grand Project.

His Czarish Majesty, during his three Months Stay in Denmark, vifited the Colleges and Academies, and conversed with the Learned. He went out almost every Day in a Boat, coaffing the two Kingdoms of Denmark and Sweden, measuring the Bays, and founding the Depths; and laid down the whole so exactly on Charts, that the least Bank of Sand did not escape him. this Time, the British and Dutch Squadrons arriving in the Road of Copenhagen, the Czar proposed to Admiral Norris, and Rear-Admiral Grave, to join the Ruffian and Danish Fleets with theirs. Several Councils being held upon this, it was refolved to give the chief Command of the Fleets to the Czar himself; so that the Britilb Admiral should command the Vanguard, the Czar the Body of the Battle, the Danish Admiral the Rear, and the Dutch Commodore, with his Squadron, and five Reitish Men of War, should secure the Trade of both Nations in the Baltick. According to this Resolution, the Czar hoisted, on the 16th of August, his Imperial Flag, to fignify that he had taken upon him the Command of the combined Fleet, and being immediately faluted by the other Admirals, gave a Signal to Sail. The Flect was obliged to come to an Anchor in the Kiogerbacke the 18th, from wheree they failed towards Bornholm, where being informed that the 'Swedilh Fleet was returned to Carelferoon, to take in Provisions, the British and Dutch Merchant Ships, with their Convoy, proceeded on their respective Voyages for Dantzick, Riga, and other Ports. The Czar went to Stralfund, to cause his Forces quartered there to imbark, and then returned to Copenbagen.

His Czarish Majesty declared, that he had never more Satisfaction in all his Life, than when he was at the Head of these four united Fleets, which made so great a Figure at Sea: But the Appearance of the British and Dutch Fleets could not be very agreeable to him, which prevented the Defigns he had formed, it was thought. against Denmark itself, after his Disappointment at Wifmar. On his Return, his Czarish Majesty and the King of Denmark held a Council of War, wherein the Dispofitions for the Descent in Schonen were concerted, and the Troops ordered to be in Readiness to imbark: But these Orders were unexpectedly countermanded, and the Project, which had been so much talked of, was laid aside, after the vast Expence which the Danes and Muscovites had been at for the Transportation of the Forces, and other Preparations. His Czarish Majesty was pleased to declare that he thought the Season too far spent, and that it would be better to defer it till the Spring. The Reason of this sudden Alteration will be seen hereaster. The King of Denmark, having in vain endeavoured to perfuade him to execute what was fo far advanced, thought proper to vindicate his own Conduct, by publishing a Manifesto, in which he charged the Czar with being the Cause of disappointing the projected Descent upon Schonen. His Czarish Majesty, however, knowing his own fecret Motives, did not think fit to publish any Answer to it; but having caused all his Forces to reimbark, they failed on the 23d of October for Mecklenburg, and being arrived there, Orders were given for their March through Pomerania into Poland. On the 26th the Czar was nobly entertained at Copenbagen, and having taken Leave of the Court, fet out with the Czarina the next Day for Hamburgh. He passed the Belt on the 28th, and viewing Tonningen and Frederickstadt, pro-

While the Danes and Muscovites were making the necessary Preparations for putting their Project in Execution, the King of Saveden retired with his Forces out of Norway, in order to oppose his Enemies in Schonen. He quitted Swinfund on the 28th of August, and after having caused the Bridge to be broken down, and a small Fort to be thrown up at that Place, he left the Count de la Gardi, with four Battallions of Infantry, and about 1000 Horse and Dragoons, to command at that Pass. On the 12th of September he went to visit the Princess his Sister at Wadstena, and from thence the next Day arrived at Lund in Schonen, where he fixed his Head-Quarters: But he put himself in Motion again to return to Norway, upon the Design of making the Descent being laid aside, which was brought about by Baron Gortz, who had projected a strange Revolution in the Affairs of Europe, by making Peace between his Mafter and Peter Alexiocoitz. The Plan was too flattering to those great Princes to be refisted by either of them; and England, Poland, Denmark, and Pruffia were to feel the Effects of it. Goriz perfuaded the King of Sweden, that he would have ample Amends made him for relinquishing the Places the Czar was Master of, and himself in no Condition to retrieve, by having the Honour of re-placing Staniflans on the Throne of Poland, by fetting the Crown of England on the Head of the pretended Son of James II. and by restoring the Duke of Holfiein to that Dutchy. Besides, that being united to the Czar, there was nothing they might not undertake. The Czar, on his Part, had for some Time been secretly discontented with the Allies, who were all for preventing his having any Footing in Germany, and would not fuffer any of his Forces to be at the Siege of Wilmar; and this Discontent of the Czar was, perhaps, what prevented the utter Ruin of the King of Sweden. The first Step taken in Gortz's Scheme, was by Dr. Areskine, the Czar's Phyfician. He founded Prince Menzikoff, who was charmed with the Defign, and foon brought the Czar into it. But how defirous he was to clear himself of any such Imputation, we shall immediately see.

From Lubeck the Czar went to Havelberg, where he had a private Interview with the King of Pruffia. These two Monarchs conferred together for two Days on the Affairs of Poland, and particularly concerning the City of Elbing, which the late King of Pruffia had resigned for a considerable Sum, of which neither Principal nor Interest had been paid. The Czar asterwards returned to Hamburgh and Altena, where he staid a Day longer than he at first intended. A Person of Distinction among the Costacks, Nephew to the samous Mazeppa, called Count Wrynorowski, being a little before arrived at Hamburgh, was seized at the Request of the Muscovite Minister, as a Subject of the Czar: But as he was engaged in the Service of the Savedes, they declared for him, and threatened the Hamburghers with the highest Resentment, if they delivered him up to the Czar. This Affair took a happy Turn for the Hamburghers; for the Count

defired

defired of the Magistrates, that he might be conducted to the Czar at Altena, and wrote a very submissive Letter to his Majesty, to pray him to grant him Audience. He was accordingly conducted to Altena, where he was guarded by the Danes in his Lodgings. The next Day the Czar went to see him, before whom he fell on his Knees, and asked his Pardon, Life, and Liberty. His Majesty raised him, and said, Fear Nothing, I have more Goodness towards you than you imagine; tell only all that you know. His Majesty then caused his Sword to be returned to him, and he was fent to Schwerin. This Count was brought very young into the Swedish Party by his Uncle, General Mazeppa; but came to Hamburgh as foon as he could, to ask Pardon, the Czarina having promifed to intercede for him. His Czarish Majesty had a Sword fet with Diamonds presented him by the Magistrates of Hamburgh, whom he affored of his Friendship, and then fet out for Amsterdam, where he arrived on the 17th of December in the Evening.

Prince Dolgoruki, who was the Mediator, in the Czar's Name, between the Poles and the Saxons, at length engaged both Parties to confent to a Treaty, and a Congress was accordingly appointed at Lublin; but all that could be done there, was to bring them to an Armistice, which was foon violated, and the Congress transferred to Warfaw; and the Obstinacy of the Confederates giving Room to fear there would be no more done here than at Lublin, the Czar ordered General Rome to enter Poland with a Body of Troops, to support that Party which was most pacific. Upon the Arrival of these Troops, the Deputies of the Confederates declared, that they could not diffolve the Confederacy, nor proceed farther in the Treaty, till Prince Dolgoruki had fent Orders for them to withdraw: But the Mediator answered, That the Muscovites had marched into Poland in Pursuance of the Agreement made at Dantzick: That his Czarish Majesty should act against such as disturbed the publick Tranquility: That feeing they had chosen the Czar for Mediator, it did not belong to them to prescribe Laws to him; but that they ought to conform themselves to the Measures his Majesty thought most convenient for the Establishment of Peace, which he advised them to con-- clude;

clude; promising, that immediately after the Conclufion of it, he would cause the said Troops to retire. The Confederates replied, That a Mediator ought not to make use of Arms, but hear what the Parties at Variance had to fay, and endeavour to reconcile them without Menaces. But they were given to understand, that though what they alledged might be true between private Men, Princes in Arms followed other Maxims. In the Conclusion, Prince Dolgoruki declared in plain Terms, That the Troops of his Master should not withdraw out of the Polifb Territories, before the Treaty was actually figned. Upon which the Deputies declared they would proceed no farther in the Treaty, and so the Conferences broke up. After which the Deputies applied to the Pope's Nuncio, and the Imperial Ambasiador, to defire the King to infift on the Retreat of the Muscovites. The King's Plenipotentiaries did accordingly, and fent to acquaint the Deputies, that they approved their Instances in that Particular; but that the surest Way to obtain it, was forthwith to conclude a Peace. In fine, the Deputies, after many Debates, contented themselves with a Declaration signed by the Mediator, That the King's Plenipotentiaries engaged, that his Majesty should use his Endeavours with the Czar for the Retreat of his Forces, immediately after the Conclusion of the Peace. Then the Mediator read the Project for the Suspension of Arms; but that not being agreed to, the King once more declared, that he would forthwith fet out for the Army. This alarmed the Confederates, who defired that the Conferences might begin early the next Morning; which being agreed to, the Article for a longer Sufpension of Arms was figned by the Bishop of Cujavia, on the Part of the King, and by the Deputies of the Confederacy. Count Fleming refused to fign it at that Time, because no Provision was made in it for the Subfiftence of the Saxon Troops: But in another Conference, some Alterations having been made in this Article, Count Fleming figned it, and the next Day fent Orders to the Saxon Troops to publish the Prolongation of the Suspension of Arms, and observe it themselves, upon Pain of incurring his Majesty's Displeasure. Other Articles agreed on in the Conferences were, That the King

King might be out of the Kingdom 3 Months in the Year: That the Saxon Ministers should not concern themselves with the Assairs of Poland: That the King might keep a Saxon Guard, not to exceed 1200 Men, and to be maintained at the King's own Charge: That the Commanders of them should take an Oath of Fidelity to the King and the Republick: That no foreign Troops should be brought into the Kingdom, nor should these 1200 be augmented by new Levies; with some others of less Moment. There were, at this Time, in Poland 30,000 Russians, under General Ronne; and General Baur had brought 5 or 6000 more out of Lower Saxony, for whom he exacted Quarters in Polish Prussia and Great Poland. And his Czarish Majesty did not think proper to recal them immediately, less the Consederates should take up Arms again.

The Russian Monarch, who had set Prince Menzikoff at the Head of the Regency in his Absence, was expecting his Confort at Amsterdam, when a Courier brought him the News, that on the 13th of January, 1717, at the Instant she was preparing to set out for Wesel, she was delivered of a Prince, which died the same Day it was born. His Majesty passed his Time at Amsterdam, and the Places about it, in making judicious Remarks relating to Commerce and Navigation: He vifited the Ship-Carpenters Yards, the Storehouses of the East-India Company, and those of the Admiralty and principal Merchants; and faw again the little Cottage where he had lodged at Sardam, in his first Journey to Holland. The Czarina arrived at Amsterdam on the 10th of February, and was received in the fame Manner as the Czar had been. On the 9th of March following their Majesties went to the Hague, and being at the House of Prince Kurakin, were complimented by the Deputies of the States of Holland, and by a Deputation extraordinary from the States General.

They continued at the Hague till the 4th of April, during which Time a Discovery was made in England of some Intrigues of Baron Gortz and Count Gyllembourg, which tended to introduce the Pretender in Great Britain. Count Gyllembourg, who was clothed with the Character of Envoy Extraordinary, was put under an Arrest at London, and all his Papers seized. The States General arrested Baron Gortz, and young Gyllembourg, in Holland, at the Request of the King of Great Britian. All the Letters found among their Papers were immediately published, by which it appeared, that a Design had been carried on to raife a Rebellion, which was to be put in Execution in the Month of March; and that the King of Sweden was to make a Descent in England with 10,000 Foot, and 4000 Horse, a sufficient Train of Artillery, and Arms for 10 or 12,000 Men more.

Some of the Letters of these Ministers, especially of young Gyllembourg, wrote from the Hague on the 17th of November 1716, intimated, not that the Czar had any Share as yet in the Plot, but that they were in hopes of bringing him into it. This gave Occasion to accuse his Czarish Majesty of having been consulted in this Project. There were likewife fome Paffages relating to Doctor Areskin, the Czar's Physician beforementioned. His Majesty therefore, on the 12th of March, caused M. Wesselowski, Secretary of the Embassy, to present a Memorial to Mr. Stanbope, to be laid before the King of Great Britain. In which his Czarish Majefty " protested his Innocence of the whole Conspiracy. and shewed the Unreasonableness of supposing he should concert Measures with the King of Sweden his implacable Enemy; urged feveral Inftances of his Friendship to the King of Great Britain, both as fuch, and as Elector of Hanover, and offered to enter into fresh Alliances with his Majesty, and to grant his Subjects all reasonable Advantages in Trade; requiring, at the Conclusion, an Explication of these Matters, and of his Britannic Majesty's Resolution to the Contents of this Memorial." Upon Examination of this Piece by the Ministers, it was found that some Articles of it related to his Majesty as King of Great Britain, and others as Elector of Hanover; for which Reafon two feveral Answers were ordered to be returned to it, one by Secretary Stanbope, and the other by the Chancery of the Electorate. His Britannic Majesty acknowledges the Friendship of the Czar, declares he has no Suspicion of his conspiring against him, and gives his Reasons for the several Particulars of his own and his Ministry's Conduct, of which his Ruffian MaMajesty had complained, especially for the repeated Instances they had made, to prevail on him to withdraw his Muscovites out of the Empire.

The Czar left the Hague on the 4th of April, to go to Paris. His Court was small, but chosen; and the Czarina accompanied him as far as Rotterdam, from whence she came back to the Hague, and then to Amsterdam, where she waited his Return. His Majesty passed thro' Zeeland in his Way to Antwerp, where the Princes of Holstein-Ploen and de la Tour, appointed to attend him while he was in Flanders, came to receive him in the Emperor's Name. On the 14th he arrived at Bruffels. and passed from thence, by the Way of Ghent and Bruges, to Dunkirk, to view the Ris-Bank there, having Defign to make one on the same Model at Cronslot or Petersburgh. On the 7th of May, his Majesty arrived at Paris, where very great Preparations were made to receive him. Being conducted to the old Louvre, he found there a magnificent Ambigu prepared for his Entertainment, composed of 8000 Dishes of Flesh, Fish, Fowl, and Fruits. He was lodged in the Hotel de Lesdigulieres, where he the next Morning received a Visit from the Duke of Orleans, then Regent, with whom he discoursed for above an Hour. When that Prince had left him, his Majesty spoke of him in such Terms as not only did Honour to the Regent, but to himfelf, in being capable of forming fo folid a Judgment of that great Politician. The Regent was no less charmed with the Understanding and Behaviour of the Emperor of Ruffia: So that the Interview of these two great Princes was not unlike that of Hamibal and Scipio. On the 10th, the King of France, accompanied by the principal Officers of his Houshold, and followed by a Detachment of the Life Guards, came to visit his Czarish Majesty, who went down to receive the young Monarch at his Coach, and conducted him to his Apartment, where they flaid together fome Time. The Day following the Czar, accompanied by the Lords of his Train, returned the Vifit to the King, who came to receive him in the fame Manner. The same Day the Provost of Merchants, and the Aldermen, in their Habits, went to wait upon his Cravilla Majerly, and brought him the usual Presents of the City. The fame Day the Czar went to the Place Royal. that of Victoires, that of Louis le Grand, and to fee the Arfenal; and on the 12th he went to the Gobelins, and to the King's Garden, and in the Afternoon to the Observatory. On the 14th in the Afternoon, he came to the Palace Royal, to make a Vifit to Monfieur the Duke of Orleans, who conducted him into his Apartment, and shewed him his Gallery of Paintings. The Czar went afterwards to Visit Madame, who received him at the Door of her Apartment, and presented to him the Duke de Chartres, and Mademoiselle de Montpensier. After the Visit, the Duke of Orleans led him into the Lodge of the Palace-Royal, where he faw an Opera. The fame Day, in the Morning, the Czar went to the Royal Academy of Painting and Sculpture, and faw in the great Gallery of the Louvre, the Plans in Relief of the fortified Towns of the Kingdom; and afterwards walk'd in the Garden of the Tuilleries. The 16th he was at the Hotel Royal des Invalides. The 17th he passed the Day at the Castle of Mendon, where he was regaled by the Duke Regent; and in his Return to Paris, by the Elysian Fields, he found the Guards under Arms performing their Exercise.

His Majesty, a few Days after, went to Fontainbleau, and in the Way dined at the Duke d' Antin's, at Petitbourg. The next Morning he hunted a Stag with the King's Dogs, accompanied by the Count de Thouloufe. He returned at Night to Petitbourg, where the Duke d' Antin entertained him as before. On the 1st of June, he went into the Gondola that carried him back to Paris, his Court following him in other Boats. In the Way he stopp'd at Choise, where the Princess Dowager of Conti received him, and shewed him her Gardens and Apartments. Continuing then his Voyage, and having gone through all the Bridges in Paris, he landed at the Porte de la Conference, and going into his Coach, went along the Ramparts of the City. On the 2d of June, in the Afternoon, his Majesty went to the Royal Abbey of St. Denis, where he faw the Church, the Treasury, and the new Building, in which the Benedictins had prepared a fine Collation. From St. Denis he returned by St. Ouen, w here the Dake des Trefines, with all his Family, attended him. On the 3d the Russian Monarch went from Paris to Verfailles, with all his Court, accompanied by the Marquis de Bellegarde, Son of the Duke d' Antin, who was appointed to do the Honour of the Royal Houses, in the Room of his Father. His Majesty made no Stay at Verfailles, but went to Trianon, where he continued till the 6th, and then went to fee the Castle of Clagny, and the great Aqueducts, and from thence to Marly. the 10th, Monfieur de Verton, the King's Maitre d'Hotel, entertained him with a very grand Fire-Work, preceded by a fine Concert of Musick, and Illuminations, the Night concluded with a Ball. On the 11th, he went to St. Germaine en Laye, and viewed the old and new Castle there; and afterwards to St. Cyr, where he faw Madame de Maintenon, who received him on her Bed. He saw the five Classes, and all the young Demoifelles, and was much pleafed with the Establishment of this House, and the Manner in which the Virgins were educated. On the 12th, he returned to Verfailles, viewed the Apartments and Cabinet of Medals, and the great and little Stables. After which he went to Chaillet, and having made a Visit to the Queen Dowager of England, came back in the Evening, and went to the House of M. de Laurai, in the Mint, where the Duke d' Antin attended him. That Lord caused a Gold Medal to be struck before him, which he presented to him, and his Majesty was surprized to find his own Bust on one Side, with this Inscription, PETRUS ALEXIE-WITZ TZAR, MAG. RUSS. IMPERATOR. On the Reverse was Fame in the Air, holding two Ttumpets, with this Infcription, Vires acquirit eundo; and on the Exergue, Lutet. Parif. 1717. A Number of Medals, with the same Impression on Silver, were presented to the Persons who accompanied him.

On the 13th he received a Visit from the Pope's Nuncio, who making him a Compliment in Italian, was answered by the Vice-Chancellor Schasiroff. In the Evening his Majesty went to the Duke d' Antin's, where he supp'd with the Count de Toulouse. On the 14th in the Morning, he went to see the Royal Printing-House; and being very curious in enquring into the Art, several Proofs were pull'd, to shew him the Method of Printing. He went afterwards to visit the College of the four Nations, founded by Cardinal Mazarin: He viewed the Church and the Library, and discoursing with M. Varignon, the famous Geometrician, he informed himself of all that was necessary for a Foundation of the like Sort: For, befides two Colleges he had already founded, one at Moscow, and one at Petersburgh, he intended to erect others. He went next to the House of the Sieur Pigeon, the Maker of a very curious moving Sphere, according to the Copernican System; which pleased him so well, that he ordered it to be purchased for 2000 Crowns. His Majesty went next to the Sorbonne, where he was received by the Doctors of the -House, for whom he expressed a great Esteem. Here he much admired the Tomb of Cardinal Richelieu, which is looked upon as a wonderful Piece of Workmanship. His Majesty went in the Afternoon up to the Towers of Notre Dame, from whence he had a Prospect of the whole City: And on his Return to the Hotel de Lesdiguieres, he found the Ambassadors of Portugal and Malta, who were come with large Retinues to wait upon him.

On the 15th his Majesty went to see the fine Works at the Gobelins. Among many Pieces of Tapestry, he feemed most delighted with the History of Don Quixot, done after the Defign of young Coypel, of which his most Christian Majesty made him a Present. In the Evening he took a Walk in the Cours. On the 16th, accompanied by the Duke of Orleans, he faw a Review of the Gens d' Armes, Chevaux Legers, the Mousquetaires, and the Life-Guards, which were drawn up on feveral Lines in the Elyfian Fields: He was on Horseback, and went all along the Ranks; and after having feen the Foot Guards perform their Exercise, went to St. Ouen, and supped with the Duke de Tresmes. On the 17th, having spent two Hours at the Observatory, he supped with the Mareschal Villars. The next Day having fent for M. Delifle the Geographer, he discoursed a long Time with him, by an Interpreter, on the Situation and Extent of his Empire, which were better known to himself than to any Body else. To give an Idea of them, he ordered two Manuscript Charts to be brought, which he had had caused to be made of Part of his Dominions, and shewed Mr. Delifle the Situation of a new Fortress he had built in Tartary, in the Acquisitions he had made by the Submission of one of the Tartarian Kings, and by the Junction of 100,000 Calmucks with the other Tartars under his Dominions. His Majesty went afterwards to fee feveral Chymical Experiments, that were prepar'd for him at the Sieur Geofroi's. In the Afternoon, he received a Vifit from the Duke of Orleans, and then went to the Lowvre, where he faw the King of France incognito in his Cabinet. From thence he went to the Palace Royal, to visit the Duke and Dutchess of Orleans. His Czarish Majesty the same Day saw an Operation performed on a blind Man, whom Mr. Wallace, an Englift Oculift, restored to Sight. On the 19th, he went to see the Parliament fitting. He was carried thro' the House of the first President, and conducted from thence, by the Bailiff of the Palace, into the Great Chamber, and placed in one of the Lanthorns, from whence he faw the venerable Magistrates sitting on their high Benches. When the Astembly arose, his Czarish Majesty, at his going away, faluted the August Senate, who were all in their scarlet Robes, and the Presidents in their Fur Gowns. The fame Day the French King went to the Hotel de Lesdiguieres, in the Afternoon, to make a Visit to the Czar; who afterwards went to the Academy of Sciences, where the Members entertained him with whatever they had that was curious or new; and his Majesty was so much delighted with them, that afterwards, when he returned to Petersburgh, he caused Dr. Areskine to write a Letter to the Abbot Bignon their President, desiring to be admitted a Member of their Society; to which they returned an Answer, with Thanks for the Honour he did them, and received another Letter from him, wrote with his own Hand. From this Time he was looked upon as one of their Members, and had the Volumes of their Tranfactions duly fent him, as an Academician.

The Czar, after having heard the Mass of the Pentecoffe, according to the antient Style and Liturgy of the Greek Church, set out from Paris on the 21st, in order to go to the Spaw: He was escorted by 10 Musquetaires.

who were to be relieved fuccessively by the like Number, till he came to Soiffons. He supp'd, and lay the first Night at Livry, at the House of the Marquis of that Name. His Majesty was very liberal at his Departure from Paris. He presented the Marquiss de Livry with his Picture fet with Diamonds, valued at 40,000 Livres; and the Marquiss de Thesse, and the Duke d'Antin, with the like. He left 10,000 Crowns to be distributed to the King's Servants who attended him, befides 15,000 Livres to the Gardiners of Verfailles, and other Royal Palaces. The King would have made him a Present of a Sword fet with Diamonds; but he defired to be excused from accepting any Thing in Gold or Jewels, but accepted four Sutes of rich Tapeflry Hangings out of the Royal Wardrobe, and some Pictures and other Curiofities from the Regent and other Princes. The Czar left a very great Reputation at the French Court, and the Virtuofi were furprized to fee a Prince, born in one of the most ignorant Parts of the World, fo fond of Arts and Sciences.

His Czarish Majesty arrived, by Rancy, Soissons, Rheims, Charleville, Givet, and Bovignes, at Namure on the 25th. He went on Shore at the Gate of Groignon, and was complimented by a Discharge of fix Salvoes from all the Artillery of the Castle and Town. He mounted a Horse that was presented to him by the Count de Hompesch, the Governor, who attended him there, with the chief Officers of the Garrison; and was about two Hours on Horfeback, viewing the Fortifications. Then he returned to the Caftle, where he was entertained by the Count de Hompesch. The Czarfhewed himself very affable, drank several Healths, and was pleased to give a particular Relation of the several Battles and Seiges at which he had commanded in Person, After the Entertainment was over, he took Horse again, and rode to the Governor's House, where he fupp'd. There was afterwards a Ball, at which feveral Ladies entertained him with their Voices and Dancing. He danced with one of them, and flay'd till one o' Clock in the Morning, when he went to lie in his Yacht. The next Day his Majesty faw a Combat of Lances upon the Sambre, and went round the Frotifications of the City, attended by the Count de Hompesch and the Lords of his Retinue. Then his Majesty returning to his Yacht, set out at 110 Clock for Huy He was received at Leige, on the 27th, with great Marks of Respect by the Magistrates, and other Officers, in the Name of the Elector of Cologn. The next Day he went to Aix by Limbourg, and from thence to the Spaw, where he drank the Waters for some Time: And on the 2d of August arrived at Amsterdam, where the Czarina impatiently waited his Return. After two or three Days Repose, their Majesties went to see the Province of Utrecht, in the Parish of Loo, from whence they came back to Amsterdam, and took Leave of Holland on the 2d of September, to go to Berlin, by the Way of Cleves and Magdebourg.

It is no Secret, that while the Czar was at the Court of France, he made Proposals, whereby he offered to pour a numerous Army into the Heart of the Empire, which should be at the Disposition of that Crown, provided they would pay him the Subfidies he demanded : But his Offers there were rejected, as inconfiftent with the Engagements France was under by her Alliance with his Britannick Majesty. It is faid, that the Regent gave Intelligence of what had passed to King George I. However, his Czarish Majesty, during his Stay at Paris, concluded a Treaty of Friendship with France, in which the King of Prussia was included; and, being much pressed to it by the Regent, he promised to withdraw his Forces from Mecklenbourg. The King of Great Britain, knowing that, in his Return from Paris, he would pass by Amsterdam, in August, sent Admiral Norris and Mr. Whitworth to him at that Time, with Orders to affure him, that it wou'd be a great Satisfaction to his Majesty to live with him in the same Friendship as before, and to resume the Negotiation of a Treaty of Commerce. But the Czar infifting on a British Squadron to act against Saveden, under the Orders of the Russian Admirals; this Step of his Majesty had no Effect.

The very Day before the Czar's Return to Amsterdam, Baron Gortz was set at Liberty, who, after having had several Conferences with the Swedish Refident, was admitted privately to an Interview with the Czar and his Ministers at Loo; and having taken upon him to adjust all the Differences between the King of Saveden and his Czarish Majesty, within three Months after his Arrival in Sweden, he fet out thither by the Way of Revel, furnished with a Passport from the Czar, who engaged absolutely to suspend all Operations against his Swedish Majesty, till the End of the faid three Months. His Majesty likewise, before his Return into his own Dominions, being much prefled by the Republick of Poland, to ease them of the Damages they sustained by his Troops in that Kingdom, fent an Order to the Velt-Mareschal Czeremetoss, requiring him to draw off his Forces, and to observe an exact Discipline. Notwithstanding which, the Russian Troops remained in Poland; which was the Occasion of continual Complaints, and gave room to think that the Velt-Marshal had other private Orders.

On the 19th of September, his Czarish Majesty arrived at Berlin, where he was received with all the Formalities. The Czarina arrived on the 22d, being met at some Distance by the Queen of Prussia, and the Margravine. Their Czarish Majesties were lodged at Monbijoux, and magnificently entertained by the Prussian Court, whither the Duke and Dutchess of Mecklenbourg came to pay them a Vifit. Their Majesties continued here but three Days, and then took the Route of Dantzick, with which City, a few Days before the Czar's Arrival, Prince Dolgoruki, and the other Ruffian Miniflers, settled an Agreement, which terminated all Differences between the Czar and them, and which his Majesty ratified on his Arrival. By this Treaty the City of Dantzick promifes to forbear all Correspondence and Traffick with Saveden 'till the End of the War; to fit out and furnish, at their own Cost, three Frigates they had lately built, to act against Saveden, under the Colours of his Majesty of Poland; to pay the Sum of 140,000 Specie Dollars, each of the Value of fix Thymsen, in three several Terms; with other Particulars. From Dantzick his Majesty went, by the Way of Koningsberg, Riga, and Revel, to Peterfburgh, where a Multiplicity of Affairs attended his Arrival.

CHAP. VI.

The Czar punishes some of his Ministers, and makes new Regulations in the State. Gortz's Project pursued. Alarms from the Cubanski Tattars. Miscarriage of an Expedition near the Caspian Sea. Prosecution of the Czarewitz, and his Adherents.

HE Czar arrived at Petersburgh on the 21st of October 1717, after an Absence of 16 Months. Finding the Complaints of his Subjects here very high against the Ministers, he employed the remaining Part of the Year in redressing the Disorders committed in the State, and in punishing the Authors of them. He affisted in the Senate every Morning at 4 o'Clock, and was at the Pains of hearing and examining the Accusations and Defence of the Parties concerned. But as the Affairs of this Inquisition appeared to be greater than was at first expected, an extraordinary Court of Justice was established. In the mean Time the Prince of Wolkinsky, Governor of Archangel, who had been fully convicted, was shot to Death. The Court of Justice was divided into feveral Committees, each of which confifted of a Major, a Captain and a Lieutenant of the Guards, who were to examine into the Causes laid before them, and to give Sentence according to Equity. And in order to remedy the great Want of Money, which appeared at that Time, his Majesty issued an Order, prohibiting the Use of Gold and Silver on Wearing Apparel. Several useless Mechanicks who had been brought into the Country were discharged, others were reduced to half Pay, and divers other Methods were tried that were thought conducive to that End. Several Russians of Distinction now entering into a Society, for the manufacturing of Silk-Stuffs, the Czar granted them a Privilege for many Years, and raifed the Duties on the Importation of foreign Stuffs. He likewife published feveral other Regulations, which were the Fruits of his own Remarks in his Travels, and appointed feveral Councils for the Administration of publick Affairs, like those that had been established by the Duke of Orleans in France.

On the 9th of December M. Weber, the King of Great Britain's Refident, returned to Petersburgh, which he had left during the Czar's Absence, with Orders to affure his Majesty of the King's good Dispositions for maintaining with him the fame Friendship as formerly. He at the fame Time gave the Czar's Ministers to understand, how uneasy his Majesty was at the Interview the Czar had had at Loo with Baron Gortz, and at the Appearances there were of a separate Peace between the Czar and his Savediff Majetty. The Ministers boldly denied that there had been an Interview at Loo: But a little Time after they were obliged to own it. The late Duke of Ormond was come to Mittau in Courland, and had with him Mr. Jernegan, an English Roman Catholick : His Defign was not only to negotiate a Marriage between the Princels Anna Petrowna and the Pretender, but also to go over to Seweden, to perfuade Charles to make Peace with the Czar, and to turn his Thoughts on ferting the Pretender on the Throne of Great Britain: But the Proposal of the Marriage frustrated the last Part of their Scheme; for Baron Gorza had long intended this Lady for the Duke of Holflein, who afterwards married her. Mr. Jernegan was fent to Sweden, to obtain Leave from his Swedish Majesty that the Duke of Ormond might go thither as the Pretender's Minister. Jernegan had Orders to apply to Baron Gortz, which he did accordingly; but the Answer he brought was, that the King of Sweden had great Reasons for not admitting him. He was foon after fent away from Mittau, and Ternegan left to manage the Bufiness at Petersburgh, where he never went out but at Night, nor faw the Czar's Ministers but in Disguise. And while Measures were taking privately for an Congress at Abo, his Czarith Majesty set out for Moscow, where he had not been for 8 Years before.

In the Month of January, 1718, an Express arrived from Ukrania, that the Cuban ki Tartars were approaching toward the Frontiers of Ruffia; but so far from being set on by the Porte, that the Governor of Ajoph had sent Notice of their Design to the Ruffian Officers.

and declared that it was out of his Power to check those Robbers. Upon this, all necessary Orders were given at Petersburgh for opposing them; the Cossacks were ordered to mount; 5000 Dragoons, and the like Number of Infantry, were ordered to join them, and to guard the Lines on the River Don, which the Czar had caused to be cast up, at a vast Expence, to cover his Frontiers. The Grand Signior afterwards, in order to remove all Suspicion, sent a Letter under his own Hand to the Czar, promising that in Case these Plunderers, being defeated, should take Refuge in his Dominions, he would cause them to be purfued with Fire and Sword.

On the 4th of February they received more difagreeable Advices at Petersburgh, relating to an Expedition near the Caspian Sea. Prince Alexander Bakewitz had been fent by the Czar, to take Possession of the River in which the Gold Sand is found, and to discover Mines in the Mountains of Great Tartary, at the Head of 3000 Men; among whom were 300 Saxons, who were taken Prifoners at Pultorva. Their Defign was to raife two Forts on the Caspian Sea, to facilitate the Commerce, and to cover the Galleys that were built for that End. Accordingly they erected Forts with Shells, which lie in prodigious Quantities on the Shore, without the least Opposition at first from the Tartars and Calmucks. But when the Army penetrated further into the Country, through the great Step or Defart, and arrived at the Place where the Gold Sand is found; the Subjects of the Cham of Schirvan taking Umbrage, gathered together to the Number of 50,000, and refused to accept the Presents that were tendered them on the Part of the Czar. However, they feigned Compassion to see so fine an Army in Diffress, and offered to supply them with Water and Provisions, on Condition that they should return Home in feparate Bodies. The General was drawn into the Snare, and dividing his Forces into feveral Detachments, fome of 300, some of 500 Men, in Order to march off, they all fell a Sacrifice to the deceitful Enemy. The Prince was carried before the Cham's Tent, where a Piece of red Cloth was spread upon the Ground, the usual Sign of Blood among the Tartars; and upon his refusing to submit to his melancholy Fate, they first cut him with their Seymetars in the Calves of his Legs, and afterwards massacreed him in a miserable Manner. His divided Forces were all cut to Pieces, except those of the Artillery, who were afterwards employed by the Enemy in the Siege of Mezetz, a frontier Place of Perfia; and by the Help of those Gunners, and the Cannon and Ammunition which they had taken from the Russians, they forced the Governor to furrender, and got a rich Booty in the Place, where there was a Monastery, the Walls of which were lined with Gold Plates. The Muficians. and feveral young Voluntiers, who were most of them Sons of Boyars, had likewife their Lives spared, and were afterwards fold. The Father of Prince Bekerwitz. a Circassian by Birth, had brought himself into Disgrace wich the King of Perfia by refusing to refign to him his Wife: So shaking off his Obedience to that Prince, he came to beg the Protection of the Czar, who received him with extraordinary Honours, promising to restore him to his Territories: But he dying foon after, left to this Prince Alexander, his only Son, the immense Treafures he had brought with him to Muscowy. The young Prince was married to a beautiful Princess of the House of Galliczin, who was unfortunately drowned in the Wolga, some Time before the Fate of her Husband.

It was believed that the Czar would take the first Opportunity of revenging himself on those Tartars, who have nothing to defend themselves but their Scymetars. Bows and Arrows, and very fwift Horses. He intended to fend a less numerous Army against them, which might more easily be furnished with Water and Provifions; and caused new Forts to be raised in their Country, for covering those Mines which he intended to open. The Persians had long before an Eye upon the Gold Sand there; but the Inhabitants choaked up the Mouth of the River Daria on the Caspian Sea, and diverted its Course into the flat Country. Part of Prince Bekerwitz's Commission was to restore Things to their former Condition, with respect to that River, in order to keep open the Communication with the Mountains, and to avoid the troublesome Passage thither by Land. But this Undertaking, and all others, were laid aside for a while, to make way for an Affair which his Majesty had more at Heart than any Thing else, and which may be looked upon as one of the most extraordinary Events of his Life. This was an Enquiry into the Crimes of his Son Alexis Petrozvitz, the Heir Apparent to his Crown, who, during his Absence, had made his Escape out of the Kingdom, in Breach of the Laws thereof.

News being now brought from Novogorod, that the Privy-Councillor Tolftoi was come thither in his Way to Moscow, with the Czarewitz, whom, by his Father's Orders, he had been to fetch from Naples, and whom his Majesty designed to punish in an exemplary Manner, the following Manifesto was published, to satisfy every one of the Reasons of his Conduct in so delicate an Affair.

PETER I. by the Grace of God, Czar and Emperor of Russia, &c.

It is notorious to the greatest Part of our faithful Subiects, and chiefly to those who live in the Places of our Refidence, or who are in our Service, with how much Care we have caused our eldest Son Alexis to be educated. having given him, from his Infancy, Tutors to teach him the Ruffian and foreign Languages, and others to instruct him in all Arts and Sciences, in order not only to bring him up in our orthodox Faith of the Greek Confession, but also in the Knowledge of Political and Military Affairs, and of the Constitution of foreign Countries, their Customs and Languages, that through the Reading of History and other Books, he might acquire the Qualifications worthy of a Successor to our Throne of Great Ruffia. Nevertheless we have seen with Grief, that all our Attention and Care for the Instruction of our Son proved ineffectual, feeing he always fwerved from his filial Obedience, shewing no Application for what was becoming a worthy Succeffor, and flighting the Precepts of the Masters we had appointed for him; but on the contrary frequenting diforderly Persons, from whom he could learn nothing good.

We have not neglected often to endeavour to bring him back to his Duty, fometimes by gentle Means, fometimes by Reprimands, fometimes by paternal Corrections. We have more than once taken him along with us into our Army, to cause him to be instructed in the Art of War, as one of the chief Sciences for the Defence of his Country; taking care to keep him off from any dangerous Occasion, out of Regard to the Succession, tho' we exposed our own Person to those Perils. We have at other Times left him at Moscow, putting into his Hands a Sort of Regency in the Empire, in order to form him in the Art of Government. We have afterwards fent him into foreign Countries, in Hopes, that feeing in his Travels Governments fo well regulated, this would excite in him an Inclination to apply himself to do well. But all our Care has been fruitless, and, like the Seed of the Doctrine, fallen upon a Rock: For he has not only refused to follow that which is good, but even is come to hate it. He only and continually converfed with diforderly Perfons, whose Morals were abominable.

As we were refolved to endeavour by all imaginable Means to reclaim him, and inspire him with an Inclination to converse with Persons of Virtue and Honour, we exhorted him to chuse a Consort among the Princesfes of the chief foreign Houses, as is usual in other Countries, and hath been practifed by our Ancestors, the Czars of Muscowy; and we left him at full Liberty to make a Choice. He declared his Inclination for the Princefs, Grand-Daughter to the Duke of Wolfenbuttle then reigning, Sifter-in-Law to the Emperor of the Romans now reigning, and Coufin to the King of Great Britain; and having defired us to procure him that Alliance, and permit him to marry that Princels, we readily confented thereunto, without any regard to the great Expence which was occasioned by that Marriage. But after its Confummation, we found ourselves disappointed of the Hope we had, that the Change of the Condition of our Son would produce a Change in his bad Inclinations, but found quite the Reverse of what was expected: For notwithstanding his Spouse was, as far as we have been able to observe, a wife, sprightly Princess, and of a virtuous Conduct, he lived with her in the greatest Disunion, while he redoubled his Affection for lewd People, bringing thereby a Difgrace upon our House before the foreign Princes, to whom that Princess was related, lated, which drew upon us many Reproaches. These Advices and Exhortations proved ineffectual: On the contrary, he violated at last the conjugal Faith, and gave his Affection to a Prostitute of the most servile Condition, living publickly in that Crime with her, to the great Contempt of his lawful Spouse, who soon after died of Sickness; and it was believed that her Grief, occasioned by the Life of her Husband, hastened the End of her Days.

When we faw his Resolution to persevere in his vicious Course, we declared to him at the Funeral of his Confort, that if he did not for the future conform himfelf to our Will, and apply himfelf to Things becoming a Prince, we would deprive him of the Succession, without any Regard to his being our only Son, (our fecond Son not then being born); because we would rather chuse for our Successor a Stranger worthy thereof, than an unworthy Son: That we could not leave our Empire to fuch a Successor, who would ruin what the Father hath, by God's Assistance, established, and tarnish the Glory of the Russian Nation, for the acquiring of which we had facrificed our Ease and our Health, willingly exposing our own Life on feveral Occasions: Besides, that the Fear of God's Judgment would not permit us to leave the Government of fuch vast Territories in the Hands of one whose Insufficiency and Unworthiness we are not ignorant of. In short, we exhorted him, in the most pressing Terms, to behave himself with Discretion, and gave him Time to repent and return to his Duty.

His Answer to these Remonstrances was, That he acknowledged himself guilty in all these Points; but alledging the Weakness of his Genius, which did not permit him to apply himself to the Functions recommended to him, he owned himself uncapable of our Succession.

defiring us to discharge him from the same.

Nevertheless, we continued to exhort him with paternal Affection, and joining Menaces to our Exhortations, we forgot nothing to bring him back to the right Way; and the Operations of War having obliged us to repair to Denmark, we left him fat Petersburgh, to give him Time to return to his Duty. And afterwards, upon the repeated Advices we received of the Continuation of his diforderly Life, we fent him Orders to come to us at Copenhagen, to make the Campaign, that he might thereby the better form himfelf. But forgetting the Fear and Commandments of God, who enjoins Obedience even to private Parents, and much more to those who are at the fame Time Sovereigns, our paternal Cares had no other Return than an unheard-of Ingratitude. For, instead of coming to us as he was ordered, he withdrew, taking along with him great Sums of Money, and his infamous Concubine, with whom he continued to live in a criminal Courfe. He put himself under the Protection of the Emperor, raifing against us a World of Calumnies and false Reports, as if we did persecute, and intended, without Caufe, to deprive him of our Succession; alledging, that even his Life was not fafe if he continued with us, and defiring the Emperor not only to give him Refuge, but also to protect him against us by Force of Arms. -The Emperor, tho' informed of his Excesses, and how he had lived with his Confort, Sifter-in-Law to his Imperial Majesty, thought fit, upon his pressing Instances, to appoint a Place where he might refide; and he defired farther, that he might be so private there, that we might not come to the Knowledge of it.

Mean while, his long Stay having made us fear, that fome Misfortune had befallen him, we fent Persons several Ways to get Intelligence of him; and after a great deal of Trouble, we were at last informed by the Captain of our Guard, Alexander Romanzoff, that he was privately kept in an Imperial Fortress in Tyrol: Whereupon he wrote a Letter with his own Hand to the Emperor, to defire that he might be fent back to us. But notwithstanding the Emperor's acquainting him with our Demands, and exhorting him to return to us, and fubmit to our Will; yet he alledged, with a great many Calumnies against us, that he ought not to be delivered into our Hands; as if we had been a Tyrant, from whom he had nothing to expect but Death. In short, he perfuaded his Imperial Majesty, instead of sending him back at that Time to us, to remove him to Naples in Italy, and keep him there fecretly in the Caftle, under a borrowed Name.

Nevertheless, we had Notice from our said Captain of the Place where he was, and thereupon dispatched to the Emperor our Privy-Councillor Peter Tolltoi, and the Captain of our Guard aforefaid, with a most pressing Letter, representing how unjust it would be to detain our Son, contrary to all Laws divine and human; according to which private Parents, and with much more Reafon those who are invested with sovereign Authority. have an unlimited Power over their Children, independantly of any other Judge: And we fet forth on one Side, the just and affectionate Manner with which we had always used our Son; and on the other, his Difobedience; reprefenting, in the Conclusion, the ill Consequences the Refusal of delivering up our said Son to us might occasion, because we could not leave this Affair in that Condition. We ordered those we sent with that Letter to make verbal Representations even in more pressing Terms, and declare that we should be obliged to revenge, by all possible Means, such detaining of our Son.

We wrote likewise to him a Letter with our own Hand, to represent to him the Impiety of his Conduct, and the Enormity of the Crime he had committed against us, his Father; and how God threatened, in his Laws, to punish disobedient Children. We threatened him, as a Father, with our Curse, and, as his Lord, to declare him a Traitor to his Country, unless he returned and obeyed our Commands; and gave him Assurances, that if he did as we desired, we would pardon his Crime.

Our Envoys, after many Solicitations, and the above-faid Reprefentation made by us in Writing, at last obtained Leave of the Emperor to go and speak to our Son, in order to dispose him to return Home. The Imperial Ministers gave them, at the same Time, to understand, that our Son had informed the Emperor that we perfecuted him, and that his Life was not safe with us, whereby he had moved the Emperor's Compassion; but that the Emperor, taking now into his Consideration our true Representations, promised he would give Orders to endeavour, by all possible Means, to dispose him to return to us, and would moreover declare to him that he could not in Justice refuse to deliver him up to his Father, and fall out with us on this Account.

Our Envoys, upon their Arrival at Naples, having defired to deliver to him our Letter, fent us word, that he did not only refuse to admit them, but that the Emperor's Viceroy had found Means, by inviting him Home to his House, to present them to him afterwards against his Will. He did then indeed receive our Letter, containing our Paternal Exhortation, and threatening our Curse; but without shewing the least Inclination to return; alledging still a great many Falsities against us, as if, by Reason of several Dangers he had to apprehend from us, he could not and would not return; and boafting that the Emperor had promifed not only to protect him against us, but even to set him upon the Throne of Russia against our Will, by Force of Arms.

Our Envoys, perceiving this evil Disposition, tried all imaginable Ways to prevail with him to return: They intreated him; they expatiated upon our Affurances towards him, and upon our Threats in Case of Disobedience. They declared, that the Emperor would not enter into a War with us on his Account; and many other Representations did they make to him. But he paid no Regard to all this, neither shewed any Inclination to return to us, till the Imperial Viceroy, convinced of his Obstinacy, told him in the Emperor's Name, that he ought to return; for that his Imperial Majefly could not keep him from us, nor embroil himself with us upon his Account.

When he faw how the Cafe stood, he at length resolved to return Home, and declared his Mind to our Envoys, and to the Imperial Viceroy. He likewise wrote the fame Thing to us, acknowledging himself a Criminal:

And in this Manner he is arrived here.

And albeit now our Son, by fo long a Course of Difobedience against us his Father and Lord, and particularly for the Dishonour he hath cast upon us in the Face of the World, by withdrawing himself, and raising Calumnies of us, and for opposing his Sovereign, hath deferved to be punished with Death: Nevertheleis, our paternal Affection inclines us to have Mercy upon him. and we therefore pardon his Crimes, and exempt him trom from alf Punishments of the same. But considering his Unworthiness, we cannot in Conscience leave him after us the Succession of the Throne of Russia, foreseeing that he would entirely destroy the Glory of our Nation, and the Safety of our Dominions, which, thro' God's Assistance, we have acquired and established by an incesfant Application.

Now, as we should pity our faithful Subjects, if by such a Successor we should throw them back into a worse Condition than ever they were yet: So, by the paternal Authority, in Virtue of which, by the Laws of our Empire, even any of our Subjects may disinherit a Son; and in Quality of Sovereign Prince, in Consideration of the Safety of our Dominions; We do deprive our Son Alexis of the Succession to our Throne of Russia, even tho there should not remain a single Person of our Family after us: And we do constitute and declare Successor to the said Throne after us, our second Son Peter, tho' yet yery young, having no Successor that is older.

We lay upon our faid Son Alexis our paternal Curse, if ever he pretends to, or reclaims, the said Succession. And we desire our faithful Subjects, of all Ranks and Conditions, that in Conforminy to this Constitution, they acknowledge and consider our said Son Peter, appointed by us to succeed, as lawful Successor, and that they confirm the Whole by Oath before the Altar, upon the Holy Gospel, kissing the Cross. And all those who shall ever, at any Time, oppose this our Willl, and shall dare to consider our Son Alexis as Successor, or to assist him for that Purpose, we declare them Traitors to us and their Country. And we have ordered that these Presents shall be every where published, to the End no Person may pretend Ignorance.

Done at Moscow, the 3d of February, 1718, O.S.

On the 11th of February the Czarewitz Alexis, being arrived with the Sieur Tolftoi at Moscow, waited the fame Night on the Czar, with whom he had a long Conference. The next Day a great Council was held, and his Majesty having resolved to exert, in a very solve was the conference.

folemn Manner, his Justice upon the Prince for his Difobedience, Orders were given for the necessary Preparations to be made for that Purpole. Accordingly on the 14th, before Break of Day, the Guards and Garrison of the City were posted round the Castle, to secure all the Gates and Avenues; and Orders were fent to all his Majefty's Ministers, Boyars, and Councillors, to repair to the great Hall in the Castle, and to the Clergy, to afsemble in the Cathedral. Then the great Bell was toll'd. and the Prince was brought in as a Prisoner; and being carried into the Czar's Presence, who was standing in the Hall, prefented a Writing to his Majesty, containing a Confession of his Crime, and in Tears fell at his Feet. The Czar gave the Paper to Baron Schafiroff, his Vice-Chancellor, and afterwards raifing his Son from the Ground, demanded of him, What was his Defire? The Prince implored his Mercy, and begged he would fave his Life. His Majesty granted his Request; but told him, he had cut himself off from the Hopes of inheriting his Crown; that he must solemnly renounce the Succession, and acknowledge the same under his Hand: Which he answered he was ready to perform. Czar then expostulated with him upon his Disobedience, and asked him. Who were the Advisers of his late Elcape? Upon which the Prince drew near and whispered him, and they went together into an adjoining Room, where it is supposed he named the Persons, because soon after three Couriers were dispatched several Ways.

His Majesty and the Prince being returned into the Hall, the Prince figned an Instrument, setting forth, That sinding himself unqualified for Government, he therefore disclaimed any Right of Succession to the Crown. Then several Articles, containing a Deduction of the Causes of his Majesty's excluding his eldest Son from the Succession, were read aloud. This being done, the Ministers, Boyars, Officers, and others, who were present, swore upon the Gospel, and subscribed an Oath, importing, that the Czar having declared that he had excluded from the Crown the Czarewitz Alexis Petrowitz, and had appointed his second Son the Prince Royal Peter Petrowitz to succeed him; they owned the Legality of this his Majesty's Decree, acknowledged the faid Peter Petrowitz to be the undoubted Successor to the Crown, engaged to stand by him with their Lives against any that should dare to oppose him, and never to adhere to Prince Alexis Petrosvitz; or affift him in the Recovery of the faid Succession. Then the Company repaired to the Cathedral, where the Czar, in a long Speech, fet forth his Son's undutiful Behaviour: After which, the Clergy fwore and subscribed the Oath abovementioned. This being ended, the Company was dismis'd, and his Majesty returned to his Apartment. The faid Oath was afterwards administred to all the publick Officers, and other Inhabitants of Moscow, who were not present at the Solemnity; and Orders were sent for doing the like all over the Russian Empire, and in his Majesty's Armies abroad. The Prince was kept under Confinement, and no Body admitted to him but the Sieur Tolfloi, and fuch others as were appointed by the Czar.

On the 18th of February, at Midnight, the House of M. Kikin Commissioner of the Admiralty, and formerly the Czar's great Favourite, was furrounded by 50 Grenadiers. The Czar's Displeasure being signified to him in his Bed, he was forthwith put in Irons, and was carried away in fuch Hasle from Petersburgh, that he had hardly Time to take Leave of his Lady. Siberian Czarewitz, and all the Servants of the Ruffian Czarewitz, had the same Fate, and were most of them carried away fettered on the 22d to Mofcozu. Orders were fent, at the fame Time, to Prince Menzikoff at Petersburgh, to seize the Kneez Wassili Wolodimirowitz Dolgoruki, and to fend him with a strong Guard to Moscow. He was Lieutenant General, Colonel of the Guards of Preobrazinsky, Knight of the Order of the Elephant, and General Inquisitor of the Commission for enquiring into the Mismanagement of the Czar's Revenues. Prince Menzikoff went to his House with a good Number of Soldiers and notified to him his Difgrace; upon which Dolgoruki delivered up his Sword, with these few Words: I have a good Conscience, and but one Head to lofe. Prince Menzikoff went with the like Commission to the Senator, Peter Matuewitz, Apraxin; to Abraham Fedrowitz Lopuchin; to the Senator Samarin; to Woinoff; to Woroff; to Ivan Wassilequitz Kikin, Alexander Kikin's Brother; and Nine other Persons. After this the Prince, according to the Orders sent from the Czar, called together the Army, and the States of Nobility, Burghers, and Peasants, to take the Oath of Fidelity to Prince Peter Petrowitz; which Ceremony was personned with great Pomp on the 9th of March, in the Church of the Holy Trinity.

The Grand Inquisition at Moscow still went on. There were two different Processes, one of which related to the Czarewitz, and the other to the late Czarina. and Major General Gleboff: The former was finished at Petersburgh, and the latter at Moscow. The Concourse of People at Moscozu was extraordionary on this Occasion. The whole Court was there, with the greater Part of the Generals and superior Officers, and the Chief of the Clergy and Nobility of all Ruffia . The Procession of the Clergy, who at different Times went with their whole Train to the Czar's Palace, to the Trial of their Brother the Bishop of Rostoff, made a noble Appearance: But what most deserved every one's Attention, was to hear the Czar himself, contrary to the Custom of his Predecoffors, make Speeches to the Clergy and great Men in the Hall, reprefenting to them and the People, with his natural Eloquence (in which Accomplishment, as well as that of expressing himself in Writing, he had no Equal among his Subjects) the Danger to which his Government had been exposed, and the Horror of the Crime of High Treason. Upon which, Dossifei the Bishop of Rostoff, and Pustinoi the Confessor of the late Czarina, were divested of their Ecclesiastical Habit, and delivered up to the fecular Arm.

On these Solemnities the Czar appeared in his usual Dress, being naturally an Enemy to all Pageantry, and affecting a plain Habit and small Retinue. Even at the Time we are speaking of, in the midst of the Disturbances of his own Family, he had never above 2 or 3 Servants attending his Sled, in which, by Night as well as Day, he was carrried up and down the City.

The Senator Samarin was acquitted; as was also Count Peter Matuewitz Apraxin, Senator, and formerly Governor of Astracan, But the Prince Wassil Woodimirowitz Dolgoruki, Lieutenant General, was ordered to be continued under close Confinement. The other principal Persons involved in this Grand Inquisition, besides the Czarewitz and Kikin, were the former Czarina Ottokefa Federospna, of the Family of Lopuchin; her Father Confessor: Maria Alexewna, the Czar's Sister by the half Blood; the Czarewitz of Siberia; the Boyar Stepan Gleboff; Doffifei Bishop of Rostoff; and the Treafurer of the Monastery of Susdal: Of whom the Boyar Gleboff, the Bishop Doffifei, Kikin, the Treasurer of the Monastery of Susdal, and another Russian, were executed in the publick Market Place of the City of Moscow, on the 26th of March. Gleboff was empaled alive, and the others broke on the Wheel. The Corpfe of the Bishop was burnt; but his Head, with those of Kikin, and the other Russian, were put on high Poles, on the 4 Corners of a square Wall erected for that Purpose, and the empaled Corple of Gleboff placed in the Middle. Baklanofsky, the Czar's Page, and some Nuns, had their Sentence mitigated, but fuffered severe corporal Punishments. This Baklanofsky had been the Spy of Kikin, even in the Czar's Closet, and when the Czar was writing an Order to Prince Menzikoff, to fend Kikin Prisoner to Moscow, he stood behind him all that Time, and going directly to the Post-House, dispatched an Express to Kikin at Petersburgh, who arrived there almost at the same Time with the Courier of the Czar, but yet too late. The Czar fufpecting the fudden Disappearing of the Page, sent into the City to enquire what he had been doing, and fo his Practices were discovered.

Afrosini, the Czarewitz's Mistress, was set at Liberty, not only in Consideration of the open Confessions she had made, but also because, by her Persuasions, she had much contributed to the Czarewitz's Return. She was of very mean Extraction, being a Finlandish Captive; and she pretended, that the Czarewitz forced her to comply with his Will, threatening her with Death on Refusal. It is maintained by several, that after her first Lying-in, and upon her conforming to the Russian Faith, she was actually married to the Czarewitz on their Journey, by a Grecian Priest, who was likewise seized at Leipzig, and carried Prisoner to Russia. This Circum-flance appeared the more probable, because having obtained his Majesty's full Pardon, and had several lewels restored to her, with this Declaration, that if she had a Mind to marry, the should receive a Portion out of the Czar's Treasury; the made this Answer: I first yielded to one Man's Will out of Force, --- benceforth no other shall come near me.

Mance

The Emperor of Germany being not at all fatisfied with fome Expressions used in the Czar's Manifesto, particularly where it fays, " That his Imperial Majesty had not only advised that unfortunate Prince to return Home. but even threatened to refuse him his Protection, if he did not comply with his Father's Defires; his Imperial Majesty notified to the Diet of the Empire, That the Czar had been misinformed in that Point; and that he had never perfuaded that Prince to return Home: On the contrary, that if he had intimated to his Imperial Majesty his Refolution not to do fo, he would not have refused him his Protection, to which he had so just a Claim, both by the Law of Nations, and by his being so nearly related to him. The Emperor wrote, on this Occasion, a Letter to the fame Purport to his Czarish Majesty.

The Czar arrived at Petersburgh, from Moscow, on the 4th of April, and immediately went to the Dock, and ordered the Men of War newly built there to be launched, as foon as the Harbour was clear of Ice. His Majesty having taken Umbrage at the Armament made by the States General, at this Time, for the Baltick, as if it were defigned to compel Sweden to make a separate Peace with the King of Great Britain, Prince Kurakin, his Ambassador, presented a Memorial to the States on that Subject; and their High Mightinesses being distatisfied with some Expressions used by that Minister, it was refolved that their Deputies for foreign Affairs should make an Answer to the said Memorial, which was communicated accordingly. After expressing their High Mightinesses Surprize at the Contents of the said Writing, and at the Information given to his Czarish Majesty, it sets forth, "That their High Mightinesses have hitherto observed an exact Neutrality in Relation to the War in the North, and their Intention is to continue the fame; but that the Damage they have hitherto fuffered by that War, has made them always wish that it might be entirely terminated, the sooner the better, by a general Peace; and that if their High Mightinesses could in any Manner contribute to it, with the Consent of all the Parties that are in the War, they should be extremely willing to do it."

About the latter End of May, the first Conference was held between the Plenipotentiaries of the Czar and the King of Sweden at Aland, to which Place the Treaty was transferred from Abo, by the Desire of Baron Gortz. The Russian Fleet was, at the same Time, ready to put to Sea from Gronslot, which the Czar intended to command in Person; and an Interview was likewise projected between the King of Prussia and his Majesty at Memel: But when his Prussian Majesty had been 2 Days at that Town, in Expectation of seeing him, the Czar was obliged to send an Excuse, on Account of some important Affairs which required his Presence at Petersburgh.

THE

HISTORY

OF

PETER The Great, CZAR of Muscovy.

The THIRD BOOK.

CHAP. I.

Trial of the Czarewitz. His Sentence and sudden Death.

The Czar orders an Account of it to be given in a circular Letter. Endeavours to suppress any false Reports concerning this and his other Affairs. He punishes the rest of the Criminals in the late Conspiracy.

OST People imagined, upon the Execution of fo many confiderable Perfons, that the whole Bufiness of the Conspiracy was finished, and that the Grand Inquisition would be set aside: But it soon appeared, to the use of at Moscow, had not been sufficient to discover the whole Truth of that Affair; nor would they have been able to draw more Light from the remaining Prisoners, had not the Mystery been unravelled by intercepted Letters. The Czar therefore faw himfelf necessitated to establish a second High-Court of Justice. To this End he convoked the Chief of the Russian Clergy, with all posfible Speed, to Petersburgh: And having besides established another Court, confifting of the Ministers, Senators, Governors, Generals, and superior Officers of his Guards, his Majesty for eight several Days continued some Hours on his Knees, imploring God, with Abundance of Tears, to inspire him with such Thoughts as the Honour of his holy Name, and the Welfare of the Rustian Nation required. On the 25th of June, 1718, the Sessions of this Criminal Court were opened in the Hall of the Senate, whither his Czarish Majesty repaired, with the whole Body of the Clergy and fecular Judges, after having first caused solemn Service to be performed in the Church of the Holy Ghost. The whole Assembly having taken their respective Places, at several Tables, the Doors and Windows were fet open, in order to give free Admittance to all forts of Persons, Upon this the Czarewitz was brought into Court, under the Guard of four Under-Officers; and upon his Appearance, his Majesty made a brief Declaration of the Causes why he had called them together, and ordered all the Writings to be publickly read, which concerned this Affair; the most considerable of which here follow in order.

Astonishment of every one, that all the Tortures made

Part of his Crimes, be already known to the whole World, by a Manifetto which was published of them at Moscow; yet there are daily discovered such unexpected and surprising Attempts, as far surpass what has been already published; and shew with what Baseness and Villainy the Prince endeavoured to impose upon his Sovereign and Father; what grievous Perjuries he committed against God, with the imaginary Illness he feigned, to prevent an Inquiry into his ill Practices, and the Discovery of his pernicious Intrigues. All this shall be laid open with Perspicuity and Order, by giving a full Account of the Matter from its first Beginning.

M

The Czarewitz Alexis had hardly attained to the Age of Reason, before his Czarian Majesty, his Father, employed all Sorts of Means to form his Mind for managing the Affairs of the Government, and to instruct him in the Art of War, as is related in the Manifesto of Moscow. The fame Cares were continued for feveral Years, without any Benefit or Progress. His Majesty expected his Amendment from Day to Day, by a Change of Conduct, and an Alteration of Manners; but observing the Prince opposed himself to all his good Designs, he declared to him his Intentions by Writing, and demanded of him his last Resolution. Thus in the Year 1715, on the 11th of October, upon his Return from the Funeral of the Princess of the Crown, espoused to the Czarewitz, his Czarian Majesty went in Person to the Prince, and gave him the following Writing.

A DECLARATION to my SON.

7 OU cannot be ignorant of what all the World is acquainted with, under how fevere an Opprelfion the People groaned from the Swedish Yoke, before the Beginning of the present War. By the Usurpation of fo many maritime Places, which were necessary to our State, they cut us off from all Commerce with the rest of the World, and we saw with Regret, that they had also cast a Veil before the Eyes of the Clearest-sighted. You know very well what Pains it has cost us in the Beginning of this War, (in which God alone has led us, as it were by the Hand, and whose Providence still conducts us) to gain Experience, and oppose ourselves to the Advantages which our irreconcileable Enemies had gained over us. We submitted to this Trial with Resignation to the Will of God; not doubting but that it was he who laid it upon us, till he had brought us into a good Way, and we were accounted worthy to prove by Experience, that the fame Enemy before whom we have formerly trembled, could also tremble in his Turn, and perhaps with a feverer Terror. These are the Advantages which, next to the Divine Assistance, we owe to 700

Chap. r. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. - 243

our Labours, and the Labours of our faithful and affectionate Children, our Subjects of Russia.

But whilft I reflect upon the Prosperity which God has heaped upon our Country, if I turn my Eyes upon the succeeding Generation, my Heart is more fill'd with Grief at the suture Prospect, than I enjoy Satisfaction for the past Blessing, whilst I observe you, my Son, to reject all the Means that may render you capable of governing well upon my Decease. I charge your Incapacity upon your Want of Inclination, as you cannot excuse yourself by any Desect in your Understanding, or Strength, as the God had not savoured you with sufficient Abilities. For the you are not of the most robust Complexion in the World, yet you cannot complain of a weak Disposition.

To talk of the Exercises of War is burthensome to you, tho' it is by them we have emerged from our former Obscurity, and made ourselves known and esteemed by all the Nations round us. I would not advise you to make War without a lawful Caufe; all that I aft of you is to apply yourself to learn the Art of War. For it is impossible to govern well without knowing the Rules of Military Discipline, tho' it should be no otherwife useful than in the Defence of our Country. I could lay before your Eyes a great Number of Examples, to confirm you in the Truth of what I fay; but I shall only mention to you the Greeks, with whom we are united in the Profession of the same Faith. From whence came the Fall of their Empire, unless from the Neglect of Arms? It was Idleness and Indolence which weakened them, and made them a Prey to Tyrants, and subject to that Slavery they have fo long groaned under.

You are much mistaken, if you think it is sufficient for a Prince to have good Generals to act under his Command. All Mens Eyes are fixed upon the King; his Inclinations are studied and pursued, as all the World perceives. My Brother, for Instance, during his Reign, was fond of Magniscence in Dress, and took Delight in Horses. This was by no Means the Taste of the Country; but the Inclination of the Prince soon gained Ground among his Subjects, who are led to mistake him in what he loyes, as they disregard what he hate

If the People are so easily given to change in an Affair of Pleasure, will they not be apt to forget, in Course of Time, and even more easily abandon, the Use of Arms which cannot be exercised without some Labour and Pains if they are not constantly inured to it?

You have no Inclination to learn the Bufiness of War, nor apply yourfelf to it, and confequently can never poffibly be acquainted with it. How then can you command over others, and judge of the Reward which they deferve who do their Duty, or punish those who neglect it? You can do nothing of yourself, and will be obliged to judge by the Eyes and Affiftance of another, like a helpless Bird who is fed by its Dam. You urge, that your Want of Health will not allow you to support the Fatigues of War; but this Excuse is no better than the rest. I do not require Fatigues from you; I should only be glad to see fuch an Inclination in you, which is not in the Power of Sickness to prevent. Enquire of those who lived in my Brother's Reign: His Health was far more indisposed than ever yours was; he was unable to manage a rough Horse, and could hardly mount one; but he loved Horses, and for this Reason there never was, and perhaps never will be again in the Country, fo fine a Stable as he had. You fee by this, that Success does not always depend upon Labour, but upon Inclination.

If you think that the Affairs of some Princes are attended with Success, tho' themselves be not present in the War, you are certainly in the right; but tho' they be not present, their Inclination is there, and it is the Business they understand. For Instance, the late King of France did not always make War in Person; but every one knows how fond he was of Military Expeditions, and how many glorious Exploits he performed; so that his Campaigns have been named the Theatre and School of the World. Nor was his Inclination confined only to Military Affairs; he had regard also to Mechanick Arts, Manusactures, and other Establishments, which have rendered his Kingdom more flourishing than those of his Neighbours.

And now, after these Remonstrances, I return to my first Subject, which concerns you.

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 245

I am a Man, and by Consequence must die; and whom shall I leave behind me to finish what, by God's Grace, I have begun, and preserve what, in Part, I have received? A Man, who, like the Sluggard in the Gofpel, hides his Talent in the Ground, and neglects to exert the Faculties which God has given him. Call to Mind the Obstinacy of your Temper, and the Perverseness of your Disposition. How often have I reproached you with them, and even corrected you for them? and for how many Years have I defifted from speaking any longer of them? But all has been to no Purpole; and my Reproofs have been fruit-lefs. I have only loft my Time, and beaten the Air. You do not so much as strive to grow better, and all your Satisfaction feems to confift in Laziness and Inactivity. What you ought to be most ashamed of, as being a real Misery, you seem to be delighted with, without forefeeing the dangerous Confequences attending upon it, with Reference both to yourfelf and the whole State. It is a great Truth St. Paul has taught us, when he fays. If a Man cannot govern his own Family, bow fhall be be able to govern the Church of God?

After having confidered all these Inconveniencies, and reflected upon them, as I fee I have not been able to engage you by any Motive to do as you ought, I have judged it convenient to lay before you in Writing this Act of my last Will, resolving still to wait a little longer before I come to a final Execution of my Purpole, to try whether you will amend or no; and if not, be affured that I will deprive you of the Succession, and cut you off as an unprofitable Member. Do not think, that because I have no other Child *, I say this only with a Defign to fright you. I will certainly do what I fay; if it shall so please God. For as I spare not my own Life for the Good of my Country, and the Safety of my People, why should I spare you, who will not be at the Pains to be worthy of them? I shall rather chuse to transmit them into the Hands of a worthy Stranger, than give them to an unworthy Son.

PETER_

^{*} This Letter was written eighteen Days before the Birth of the Carewing, Peren Pernowitz.

The Answer of the Czarewitz to his Czarian Majesty, written three Days after the Birth of the Czarewitz, Peter Petrowitz.

Most Clement Lord and Father,

I Have read the Writing your Majesty gave me, after the Interment of my late Spoule. I have nothing to reply to it, but that if it is your Majesty's Pleasure to deprive me of the Succession to the Crown of Russia, by Reason of my Inability, your Will be done. I even earnettly request it at your Majesty's Hands, as I do not think myself fit for the Government. My Memory is much weakened, and without it there is no Possibility of managing Affairs; my Mind and Body are much decaved by the Diftempers to which I have been subject, which renders me uncapable of governing fo many People, who must necessarily require a more vigorous Man at their Head than I am. For which Reason I should not aspire to the Succession of the Crown of Russia after you, whom God long preserve, tho' I had no Brother, as I have at prefent, whom I pray God alfo to preferve. Nor will I ever hereafter lay Claim to the Succession. as I call God to Witness by folemn Oath; in Confirmation whereof, I write and fign the present Letter with my own Hand.

I give my Children into your Hands; and, for my Part, defire no more than a bare Maintenance fo long as I live, leaving all the rest to your Consideration and good Pleafure.

Your most Humble Servant and Son.

ALEXIS.

His Majesty afterwards wrote a second Letter to the Czarewitz, which he tells him shall be his last, requiring him either immediately to change his Conduct, or take upon him the Monastic Vow: In answer to which the Czarewitz declares his Resolution to do the latter, and desires his Majesty's Consent for so doing After which the Czar, before his Departure into Foreign Countries, visited the Czarewitz at his House, to bid him Farewel. He found him in Bed, as though lajen I'CWID he had been fick; and yet he was hardly parted fro him, before he went to an Entertainment with the Dia Michael Voinou.

His Majesty then demanded of him what Resolut he had taken; and the Czarewitz affirmed to him aga with folemn Oaths, that he wished for nothing w a more eager Passion, than to embrace the Mona State. His Majesty represented to him the Difficult attending upon a young Person, who should enter i fuch an Engagement: That he ought to confider w of it before-hand, and then fend him his Resolution But it would be much better for him to return into Way his Majesty had pointed out to him, than to come a Monk; and to this End he gave him still Months Time longer to confider of it: Upon which bade him farewel.

The fix Months passed, and his Majesty received News from the Czarewitz on this Head; which liged him to fend him a Letter under his own H: from Copenhagen, dated the 26th of August, command his immediate Presence with his Majesty in the War, an actual Compliance with his Promise of a Mona Vow, and a Letter specifying the Time and Place of taking it: But the Czarewitz, in Contempt of his N jesty's Orders, pretending, when he left Petersbur that he was going to attend upon his Majesty, made Escape by the Way; and, as he was on his Journ wrote a fraudulent Letter, falfly dated from Koning Be instead of Lizuau, to prevent his Father from sending a Body after him, as he expresly owned in his Con fion,

Upon the Advice which his Majesty received of Escape at Amsterdam, he immediately dispatched the fident Wefelozofki in quest of him; and afterwards Mr. Rumanzow, Captain of the Guard; and laftly, fr Span, Mr. Tolftoi, Privy-Councillor, and Captain of Guard, with the faid Captain Rumanzow; by whom Majesty wrote a Letter with his own Hand, on the 10 of Tuly, 1717, in which is the following Paffage. " you comply with me, I affure you by this Present, Promise to God, and his Judgment, that I will not pur you; and if you will submit to my Will, and be

M 4

s III

affe ing n ure b E+ BY

CTES 3000 lity

de ef. eq.

an M er r,

dient to me now, upon your Return, I will love you more than I have ever done. But if not, by the Virtue of the Power I have received from God, as a Father, I lay upon you my eternal Curfe, for the Contempt and Offences you have committed against your Father; and as your Sovereign, I affure you, that I shall find Means to deal with you under that Capacity, in which I hope that God will affift me, and take my just Defence in Hand."

The Czarewitz answered thus: " I have received. your Majesty's most gracious Letter, by Messieurs Tolstoi. and Rumanzow, in which, as also by Word of Mouth, I am most graciously assured of Pardon, for having sled without your Permission, in case I return I give you most hearty Thanks with Tears, in my Eyes, and own myself unworthy of all Favour : I throw myself at your Feet and implore your Clemency, and befeech you to pardon my Crimes who have deserved all kind of Puniffment. But I rely upon your gracious Affurances; and submitting to your Pleasure, shall set out immediately from Naples to attend your Majesty at Petersburgh, with those whom your Majesty has fent."

On the 3d of February, of the present Year 1718, the Czarewitz was brought to Moscow by Messieurs Tolstoi and Rumangow, and carried before his Czarian Maielly into the great Hall of the Castle, where, in the Presence of all the People, he made Confession of his voluntary Flight, and at the same Time presented a Writing under his Hand, acknowledging his Transgression, and imploring Mercy. His Majesty then told him, That it was his Will he should truly declare all the Particulars and Circumfrances of his Escape; who had advised it, with whatever bore any Relation to it : That if he told the Truth without Disguise, Reserve, or Restriction, he would grant him his Pardon: But that if he did not make a full Discovery, and name all the Persons who were Accomplices of the Fact, or should conceal any Thing relating to it, the Promise should be void and of no Effect. Whereupon the Czarewitz promifed and engaged to his Majesty, to declare the whole Truth, as before God, without any Dissimulation; and he kissed the Holy Gospels, and the Holy Cross before the Altar of the Cathedral, in Testimony of the Promise he had made Here 4 14 of a full Discovery.

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Museovy. 249

[Here followed the several Heads of Examination, written by his Majesty, and presented to the Czarewitz, with that Prince's Anfaver to every Article, and several additional Confessions, drawn from him one after another, as Evidence against him appeared; by which it was manifest, that he had endeavoured to conceal the most material Particulars: Also the Depositions of the several Witnesses against him, among whom was his own Mistress Afrofini, with aubom he was confronted; proving the several Crimes charged upon him by his Majesty, and detecting divers Circumstances that were not before known, which confirmed the Hypocrify and Prevarication, as well as Guilt of the Czarewitz, who himself confessed, in his last Answer, that he had criminal Deligns, which he meant to execute, even during his Father's Life time, if Occasion offered. But as the Reflections upon these Pieces, which were afterwards read in their Order, contain a Repre-Sentation of what was most considerable in the whole Procefs. I shall content myself with inserting them, and proceed to the Judgment of the Court.

HE better to comprehend the Care his Czarish Majefity has taken to bring back the Czarewitz into the right Way, that he might engage him to become worthy of the Succession; and to let the Publick see how the Czarewitz, on the other Hand, has broke through all his Father's Measures, by the Opposition he has made to them; we shall set the Matter in a still greater Light, tho' it may be amply deduced from the feveral Pieces.

'Tis notorious, by the first Manifesto which was published upon the Arrival of the Czarewitz at Missione, and by the Letters his Majesty wrote to him, with what reiterated Solicitations his Majesty, his Father, exhorted him to make himself capable and deserving of the Succession; and yet, notwithstanding, the Czarewitz always shewed himself refractory. In his Reply to the Letter which his Czarian Majesty had written to him, he did not tell him the Reasons why he would not take Pains, as his Father desired, to make himself capable of the Succession: He only deceived him with falle Oaths, by which he engaged himself to a Renunciation of the Crown, and which he afterwards not only broke, but aspired to Succession by ill Practices.

Ms

His Czarish Majesty, who saw into the naughty Inclinations of his Son, again exhorted him, by other Letters, to form himself for the Government; and reprefented to him, to intimidate and engage him to a Compliance with his Will, that if this was absolutely impossible for him, he should then embrace a Monastic State. He plainly faw that the Czarewitz's Renunciation of the Succession was no more than an Amusement, and altogether void of Sincerity, as afterwards appeared plainly by the Confequence: For he was fo far from giving a clear and positive Answer to his Czarish Majesty's Letter, who exhorted him to a Determination, that he had flill Recourse to Subterfuges, and answered only in a vague and undetermined Manner, by Oaths and Intreaties, that he might be allowed immediately to retire into a Convent; which, notwithstanding, were altogether fraudulent.

For which Reason his Majesty advised him, upon his Departure from Petersburgh into foreign Countries, not to enter so soon into a Convent, because the Engagement was difficult for a young Man to observe, and gave him still fix Months Time to consider of it; at the End of which he was to write to his Majesty what Part he would take. He used him thus, in hopes that he might change his Opinion, and, by a better Conduct, conform to the Will of his Father, and make himself deserving of the Succession, by a ferious Application to his Duty.

The Czarewitz, not caring to answer any Thing at that Time upon this Subject to his Father, pretended to be sick; but his Majesty was scarce gone from him, before he went to an Entertainment with Michael Voinou. The six Months passed, and the Czarewitz took no Notice of the Choice he was to make. His Majesty, who saw his Deceit, wrote to him again from Copenhagen, to repeat his Exhortations concerning the Succession; and ordered him to come to him, that he might learn the Business of War; but that if he desired to retire into a Convent, he required that he would make choice of his Monastery, six the Time of his Retirement, and write Word back to his Majesty, who would neither prescribe the Time, nor assign the Place. It evidently appears by his Majesty's three Letters, that he earnestly wished he would make himself capable of the Succession: That he had no Inclination to force him to become a Monk, but, on the contrary, was desirous to dissuade him from it, and left his Choice to his own free Determination. The Czarewitz seemingly made choice of a Convent of his own proper Motion: However, all his Promises, which were confirmed by so many Oaths, were found deceitful. For it has actually appeared, that the Czarewitz aimed at the Succession, of which his Majesty had not only deprived him, but also forced him, by his powerful Exhortations, to pretend to it, by labouring to make himself worthy of it.

Chap. 1. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 251

But in Contempt of all this, the Czarewitz made his Escape, and took Refuge with the Emperor, demanding his Assistance and Protection, to aid him even with an armed Hand; and he has said that the Emperor had assured him by the Count de Schonborn, Vice-Chancellor, that he would procure him the Russian Crown, not only by good Offices, but also by Force of Arms; insomuch, that the Czarewitz not only hoped for his Father's Death with Expressions of Joy, but also sought it; and when he was told there was a Rebellion raised in the Country, he declared his Satisfaction at the News, and was resolved to join the Rebels if they had called him, whether his Father was living or dead.

One might convict him from his own Confession, That when he wrote in his Answer, which he gave to his Father, that his Insirmity was so great he did not defire the Succession, he told him a manifest Falsheod. He took Physick only to appear sick, if Mention was made of any Journey he did not care to take, as his Father defired; when in reality he was perfectly well. Insomuch that we may judge by all these Circumstances, that he aimed at the Succession, not in the Manner his Father was desirous to leave it him, namely in the proper Order, but after his own Manner, by foreign Assistances, or the Forces of Rebels, even whilst his Father was alive.

Tho' the Czarewitz had faid in his last Confession, that his not having owned his Letter from Naples, to the Metropolitan of Kiovia, was to be imputed to his Forgetfulnes, this also has been found to be absolutely falls:

For fince he has remembered the Particulars in Matters of far less Consequence, which were the Subject of his Discourse with several People some Years ago, as appears by his Examination, how could he have forgot this Circumstance of having wrote to the Archbishops, which is a Point of far greater Importance?

There appears in this Excuse of Forgetfulness not only a direct Falshood, but also a very malicious Disposition; for when Afrosini had maintained to his Face that he had writ to the Archbishop from the Fortress, and had fealed the Letter in her Presence, he had a Mind to conceal the Bufiness, by the Pretence of a Plan of the Attack of Belgrade, which he fent back fealed to the Secretary of the Viceroy of Naples: However, he afterwards owned that it was not the Plan, but the Letter to the Archbishop of Kiovia, which he had fealed. The Excuse he also made, of having forgot to own in his first Confession, what concerns the Czarewna Mary Alexicauna, Dubrofski, and Ebarlakof, who were acquainted with his Escape, was also a Falshood, as appears from his having afterwards declared he had Compassion upon the Czarewna. It also appears by the Report of the Resident Weselowski at Vienna, that the Imperialifts did not force the Czarewitz to write Letters to the Senate and the Archbishops.

His Czarian Majesty, in his Letters to the Czarewitz at Naples, promifed him only his gracious Pardon for his Escape, if he would return to him. He not only pardoned him upon his Return, but also extended his Fayour fo far, as to promife him a general Forgiveness for all he had committed, if he would make a fincere Confession of all he had done, and discover his Accomplices without any Referve; declaring to him at the fame Time, that if he kept back any Thing, or concealed any Person who was an Accomplice in this Affair, his Pardon should be null and void. Yet we have clearly feen in what Manner the Czarewitz, contemning the paternal Clemency and Pardon he had obtained, concealed a great Number of Persons, Letters, and Facts, as also his pernicious Designs of joining the Rebels, and entering into their Devices. 'Tis therefore evident, that he has not only had no real Intention of discovering all his Crimes, and making amends by a fincere Repentance, but that he has also disguised and concealed what had passed, that he might be able to resume again his Designs for the Future, and renew what hitherto he has not been able to effect.

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 253

As they were reading the Matters above related, his Majesty again verbally examined the Czarewitz touching all his Crimes that were proved in those Pieces, and how every Thing had passed; and, after a great many Questions upon the Points of most Importance, of which his Majesty shewed him the Proofs for his Conviction, the Czarewitz confessed before the whole Assembly of the States, to his Father and Lord, that he was guilty of all that was found in the Writings which had been related.

The Audience being ended, and the Czarewitz carried back, his Majesty caused an Ordinance to be issued out to the Archbishops and secular States, which he had figned with his own Hand; commanding them to fearch the Holy Scriptures, and the Civil and Military Laws, relating to the present Case, and pronounce Sentence against the Czarewitz in Conformity thereto. And on the 16th of June, Peter Tolftoi Privy-Councillor declared, by Order of his Majesty, to the Ministers, the Senate, and the States Military and Civil, That as he had put into their Hands the Trial of his Son Alexis Petrowitz, that they might pronounce Judgment upon it, he willed that it should be done in the ordinary Form, and with all due Examination: For which Reason his Majefty authorised them to examine the Czarewitz, if they found it convenient, upon any Point whatfoever; to make him appear before them, and put fuch Questions to him as should be necessary.

Upon this express Order of his Majesty, the Ministers, the Senate, and the States who were affembled, convened to interrogate the Czarewitz upon several Points; who being summoned to appear before the Tribunal of the Judges, in the Hall of the Regency of the Senate, and Declaration having been made of the Orders they had received from his Majesty; he was told, that the they were very much afflicted at his late Conduct, they were notwithstanding obliged to obey their Orders; and, without having regard to his Person, to question him upon the faid Articles, which they read to him, requiring of him an Answer thereto, by a true Confession, attended with fufficient Proofs. The Czarewitz accordingly gave in his Answer the 17th of June; owning, that he had founded his Hopes of getting the Crown upon those who were affected to the antient Customs, and the Discourse of several Persons, particularly his Confessor James, Nicephorus Vafenski, the Czarewitz of Siberia, Dubrofski, and John Affonaffief, who affured him that he was beloved by the People; with other Particulars.

After these Pieces were read in Presence of the Miniflers, the Senators, and the States affembled, they ordered, that fuitable Authorities should be fought out of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, the Constitutions of the Empire, and the Military Laws, which might be applied to the present Case, to judge what Punishments these Transgressions had deserved. Which being done, it was refolved with one Confent, before the Sentence was pronounced, that the Ministers and Senate should call the Judges appointed for this Tribunal, one after another, and hear every Man's Opinion from his own Mouth. The Ministers in like Manner declared each their Sentiment; which, tho' feparately given, amounted unanimously to one and the same Judgment; declaring by Oath, and upon their Confcience, that according to the Laws, Divine, Civil, and Military, the Czarewitz was worthy of Death, for the Crimes alledged and proved against him.

On the 21st of June, his Czarian Majesty ordered the Senators, by the Privy-Councillor Peter Telfloi, to come into the Hall; where, being affembled, the faid Privy-Councillor laid before them certain Confiderations. prefented to his Czarian Majesty by the Clergy, and which they had extracted from the Holy Scriptures, the Fathers, and the Ecclefiaftical Conflitutions, by all which they found the Czarewitz worthy of Death, but referred the Judgment to the Secular Power, as what did not beand with the colle long to their Spiritual Authority.

On the 24th of June, the Ministers and Senators being affembled in the Chancery of the Senate, the Privy-Councillor Peter Tolftoi laid before them another Declaration of the Czarewitz, in Confirmation of his Confessions of the 19th of June; as also the criminal Examination of his Confession James, who was degraded from the Ecclesiastical Dignity; and the Copy of some Interrogatories written by the Hand of his Czarian Majesty, and delivered to the said M. Tolsoi, for the Examination of the Czarewitz, which, with that Prince's Answer, written in his own Hand, are as follow:

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 255

O to my Son in the Afternoon, and put down in Writing the Answers he shall give to the following Questions:

I. What is the Reason why he has not obeyed me, and refused to do what I required of him, or apply himfelf to any Business, contrary to the Practice of the World, besides the Sin and Shame attending upon it?

II. Whence it is that he has been so little asraid of me, and has not apprehended the Consequences of his Disobedience?

III. Why did he defire to have the Succession otherwise than by Obedience, as I have formerly asked him myself?

—And examine him upon every Thing else, that bears any Relation to this Affair.

Anfaver of the Czarewitz, dated June 22d.

I. THO' I was not ignorant, that to be disobedient, as I was to my Father, was opposite to the Practice of Mankind, and was also both a Sin and a Shame; yet this arose from my having been brought up from my Infancy with a Governess and her Maids, from whom I learned nothing but Amusements and Diversions, and Bigotry, to which I had naturally an Inclination. The Persons to whom I was intrusted, after I was removed from my Governess, gave me no better Instructions, particularly Nicephorus Vasenki, Alexis Basili, and the Naraskins.

My Father being careful of my Education, and defirous I should apply myself to what became the Son of the Czar, ordered me to learn the German Tongue, and other Sciences; which I was very much averse to. I applied myself to them in a very negligent Manner, and only to pass away the Time, without having an Inclination to learn any Thing. And as my Father, who was then frequently with the Army, was at a Distance from me, he ordered Prince Menzikoff to have an Eye upon me. Whilft I was with him, I was obliged to apply; but as foon as I was out of his Sight, the Naralkins and Valenfki, observing my Inclination was only bent to Bigotry and Idleness, to keep Company with Priests and Monks, and drink with them, they not only diverted me from Business, but took a Pleasure in doing as I did. As they had been about me from my Infancy, I was accustomed to observe their Directions, to fear them, and comply with them in every Thing; and thus by Degrees they alienated my Affections from my Father, by diverting me with Pleasures of this Nature; so that by little and little, I had not only the military Affairs, and other Actions of my Father in Horror, but also his Person itfelf, which has always made me wish to be at a Distance from him.

When I found myfelf entrufted at Mokeow with the Government of the Empire, finding I was at full Liberty and Master of myfelf; instead of considering that my Father had put it into my Hands to train me up, and form me for the Succession after him, if I would make myself capable of it; I gave myself up still to the Pleafures I was addicted to, with the Priests and Monks, and other People of that Temper. Alexander Kikin, when he was with me, constantly took a great deal of Pains to consirm me in this disorderly Way of Life.

My Father having Compafion on me, and defiring to make we worthy of the State to which I was called, fent me into foreign Countries; but as I was already grown to Man's Estate, I made no Alteration in my Way of Living. It is true indeed, my Travels were in some Respects useful to me, but were insufficient to erase the vicious Habits which had taken such deep Root in me.

II. It was this naughty Difposition which prevented my being apprehensive of my Father's Correction for my Disobedience: I freely owned it; for the I was really asked of him, yet it was not with a filial Fear; I only sought for Means to get from him, and was no wife concerned to do his Will, of which I here give you a plain Instance.

William.

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 257

When I came back to Petersburgh, to my Father from abroad, he received me in a very gracious Manner: Amongst other Things, he asked me whether I had not forgot what I had learned, and I told him, No. He ordered me to bring in my Draughts; and fearing that he would make me defign in his Presence, as I knew nothing of the Matter, I studied how to hurt my Hand, fo that it should be impossible for me to do any Thing at all: I charged a Piftol with Ball, and taking it in my Left Hand, I let it off against the Palm of my Right, with a Defign to have that through it. The Ball misted my Hand, but the Powder burnt it fufficiently to wound it. As the Ball entered the Wall of my Closet, it may be feen there still. My Father observing my Hand to be wounded, asked me how it came. I told him an evafive Story, and kept the Truth to myfelf. By this Means you may fee that I was afraid of my Father, but not with a filial Fear.

III. As to my having defired the Succession, otherwife than by Obedience, all the World may eafily guess at the Reason: For when I was once out of the good Way, and was resolved to imitate my Father in nothing, I fought to obtain the Succession by any the most wrongful Method: I was even desirous to come at it by a foreign Assistance, and if I had got it, and the Emperor would have put in Execution what he promifed me, of procuring for me the Crown of Russia, even with an armed Force, I should have spared nothing to have obtained it. For Instance, if the Emperor had demanded Ruffian Troops in Exchange for his Service, against any of his Enemies, or large Sums of Money, I should have done whatever he pleafed, and given great Prefents to his Ministers and Generals over and above. I would have entertained at my own Expence the auxiliary Troops tie · should have lent me; to put me in Possession of the Crown of Ruffia; and, in a Word, have thought nothing too much to have obtained my Defire."

The Persons appointed by his Czarian Majesty, being affembled in the Hall to give Judgment, after having heard all that has been said, read, and related, and made mature Resections upon it, with one unanimous Consens.

pronounced and ordered the following Sentence to be figned; and accordingly fet their Seals to it with their own Hands.

June 24th, 1718. Y Virtue of the express Ordinance of his Czarian Majesty, signed with his own Hand, on the 15th of June last, for the Judgment of the Czarewitz Alexis Petrosvitz, for his Transgressions and Crimes against his Father and Lord; the under-written Ministers, Senators, States Military and Civil, after having heard the Originals and Extracts of the Testimonies given against him, more than once read, as also his Majesty's Letters of Exhortation to the Czarewitz, and the Answers he made to them, written with his own Hand, and other Accounts belonging to the Process: And, in like Manner, the criminal Informations, Confessions, and Declarations of the Czarewitz, as well written by his own Hand, as made by Word of Mouth to his Father and Lord, and before the Persons under written; have declared and acknowledged, that the', according to the Rights of the Ruffian Empire, it has never belonged to them, being naturally Subjects to his Czarian Majesty, to take Cognizance of an Affair of this Nature, which depends folely upon the absolute Will of the Sovereign, whose Power is not limited by any Law; yet submitting to the faid Ordinance of his Czarian Majesty, their Sovereign, who grants them this Liberty, and after mature Reflections, and upon their Conscience as Christians, without Fear or Flattery, or Respect of Persons, having only before their Eyes the Divine Laws that are applicable to the prefent Case, the Canons and Decrees of Councils, the Authority of the Holy Fathers and Doctors of the Church; and farther, being instructed by the Considerations of the Archbishops and Clergy, assembled at Petersburgh, which correspond with the Laws of all Russia, and particularly the Conflitutions of this Empire, the Military Laws and Statutes, and are agreeable to the Laws of feveral other Nations: The Persons under-written, having consulted together, have unanimously agreed, without Contradiction, that the Czarewitz, Alexis Petrowitz, is worthy of Death, for his aforefaid Crimes against his Sovereign and Father. ther, he being the Son and Subject of his Czarian Majethy; infomuch, that tho' his Czarian Majetty has promifed to the Czarewitz, in the Letter fent him by M. Tolfioi, Privy-Councillor, and Rumanzow, Captain of the Guard, to pardon his Efcape if he freely and voluntarily returned, as the Czarewitz himfelf as thankfully acknowledged in his Answer to this Letter, where he has specified, that he thanked his Czarian Majetty for the Pardon which he had only given for his voluntary Flight; yet has he fince rendered himself unworthy of it, by his Opposition to the Will of his Father, and by his other Transgressions, which he has renewed and continued, and because, among other Things, he did not voluntarily return.

And tho' his Majesty, upon the Arrival of the Czarewitz at Moscow, where he delivered in a Confession of his Crimes in Writing, and asked Pardon for them, had pity of him, and, at the Audience he gave him on the faid third Day of February, promifed him Pardon for all his Transgressions; his Czarian Majesty only made him this Promise with an express Condition, That he, the Czarewitz, should declare without any Restriction, or Referve, all that he had committed and contrived till that Day against his Czarian Majesty, and discover all the Persons who had been his Counsellors and Accomplices, and in general, all who had been acquainted with his underhand Dealings; but that if he concealed any Person or Thing, the promifed Pardon shall be null and void: Which Condition the Czarewitz then aceppted, at least in Appearance, with Tears of Acknowledgment, and promifed by Oath to declare all without Referve. His Czarian Majesty also confirmed the same Things to him the next Day, under his own Hand, in the Interrogatories which he caused to be given to him.

Notwithstanding this, the Czarewitz returned very infincere Answers and Confessions; concealed not only Persons, but also Affairs of Consequence, and grievous Transgressions; and particularly his Designs of Rebellion against his Father and Lord, and his ill Practices, in attempting to usurp the Throne of his Father, during his Life, by several wicked Pretexts; founding his Hopes and Wishes, for the Death of his Father and Lord, upon the Declaration of the common People in his Favour, which he flattered himself with. All which has fince been discovered by criminal Informations, after he had refused to declare it of himself.

Thus it is evident, by all these Proceedings of the Czarewitz, and the Declarations he has made by Word and Writing, and lastly by that of the 22d of Twie, of the Present Year, that he was not pleased the Succession of the Crown should devolve to him by his Father's Death, in such a Manner as his Father would have left it him, according to the Order of Equity; but that he defired it, and had a Defign to obtain it, even during the Life-Time of his Lord and Father, contrary to the Will of his Czarian Majesty; and not only by Insurrection and Rebellion, which he expected, but also by the Affistance of the Emperor, with a foreign Force, which he had flattered himself to have at his own Disposal, even at the certain Hazard of the Kingdom's Ruin, and the Alienation of every Thing from the State, that would have been demanded of him for that Affiftance.

From hence therefore it appears, that the Czarewitz. by concealing all his pernicious Defigns, and Abundance of Persons who held Intelligence with him, had determined to referve to himfelf an Opportunity hereafter. when a favourable Occasion should present itself, of refuming his Defigns, and putting in Execution his horrible Enterprizes; and has hereby rendered himfelf unworthy of the Clemency and Pardon which were promifed him by his Lord and Father; as he has also owned himfelf, as well before his Czarian Majesty, as in Presence of all the States, Ecclesiastical and Civil, and publickly before the whole Affembly.

Since therefore the aforefaid Laws, Divine and Ecclefiaftical, Civil and Military, and particularly the two last, condemn to Death without Mercy, not only those whose Attempts against their Lord and Father have been declared by Evidence, or proved by Writing, but even those who have conspired only in Thought to rebel, or have had a bare Intention against the Life of the Sovereign to usurp his Empire: What may we think of a Defign of Rebellion, which has hardly had a Parallel in the World and is joined to an horrid double Parricide

sasing

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 261

against his Sovereign, first as the Father of his Country, and next as his own Father by Nature? A Father in himself most merciful, who has brought up the Czarewitz from his Cradle with a more than paternal Care, with a Tenderness and Affection which have shewn themselves upon all Occasions; who has endeavoured to form him for the Government, and instruct him in the Military Art, with incredible Pains, that he might render him capable and worthy the Succession to so great an Empire.

It is with an Heart full of Affliction, and Eyes streaming down with Tears, that we, as Subjects and Servants, pronounce this Sentence; considering that it does not belong to us, as such, to enter into a Judgment of so great an Importance, and particularly to pronounce a Sentence against the Son of the most mighty and merciful Czar, our Lord. However, it being his Will that we should enter into Judgment, we declare by these Presents our real Opinion, and pronounce this Condemnation, with a Conscience as pure and christian, as we think we can answer it at the terrible, just, and impartial Judgment of the Great God.

To conclude: We submit this Sentence we now give, and the Condemnation we at present make, to the Sovereign Power, and Will, and merciful Review of his Czarian Majesty, our most merciful Monarch.

Signed ALEXANDER MENZIKOFF, and above one bundred and twenty more.

The Assembly of the Clergy, and the Court of secular Judges, having thus declared their Opinion in Writing, and pronounced a formal Sentence, condemning the Czarewitz to Death, a new Session was held on the 6th of July in the Morning, and the Czarewitz brought out of the Fortress into Court, under Guard, where he was obliged to repeat the Confession of his Crimes, and to hear the Sentence of Death signed by the Secular Judges read to him; after which he was sent back into Custody.

The next Day, being Thursday the 7th of July, early in the Morning, News was brought to the Czar, that the violent Passions of his Mind, and the Terrors of Death, had thrown the Czarewitz into an

the Marks of a true Penitent, and begged our Pardon, which, according to Christian and Paternal Duty, we granted him : After which, on the 7th of July at 6 in the Evening, he furrendered his Soul to God, Although this be a great Affliction to us, we nevertheless judge it has happened by the particular Providence of God, for the Good and Repose of our Kingdoms; so that it is with a Christian Duty and Submission we receive this Affliction from the Hand of God, &c.

On the 9th of July the Corple of the Czarewitz, being laid into a Coffin covered with black Velvet, and a Pall of Gold Tiffue spread over it, was carried from the Fortress, attended by several Persons of the first Rank, to the Church of the Holy Trinity, where it was laid in State. Four Officers of the Guards were in waiting near the Body, and gave Leave to a vaft Number of People to kiss the Hands of the Deceased. The Preparations for the Funeral being finished, on the 11th in the Evening, the Corpfe was carried from the Church of the Holy Trinity back to the Fortress, where it was deposited in the new Burying-Vault of the Czarish Family, and put mext to the Coffin of the Prince's late Confort. The Czar, the Czarina, and the Chiefs of the Nobility of the Court, followed in Procession. The Czar, as well as the rest of the Mourners, carried each a small Wax Taper lighted in their Hands; but they wore no Mourning-Clokes, and the Ladies were only dreffed in black Silks. Those who affisted at the Funeral, relate that the Czar was bathed in Tears during the Procession, and the Service at Church, where the Priest had chose for the Text of his Funeral Sermon the Words of David: O my Son Abfalom, my Son, my Son Abfalom.

Various Reports were fpread concerning the Death of the Czarewitz, very many not believing that he died a natural Death. Some reported, that he was obliged to take a poisoned Draught in his Prison; and others went so far as to charge his Majesty with the Cruelty of whipping him to Death with his own Hands. But fure the great Caution with which he proceeded against him, and the many Instances he gave of his paternal Affection towards him, are fufficient to flew the Improbability of his treating him with fuch Inhumanity, notwithstanding he had conspired against his Life, and, what was dearer to him, his Country.

Chap. I. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 265

The Czar thought it not improper to filence any injurious Reports concerning this Event; and accordingly complained at the Court of Vienna of the Imperial Refident at Petersburgh, for having wrote false Advices relating to the Differences in his Family, and the pretended Revolt of his Troops in Mecklenbourg; and defired the Emperor, that the Resident might be recalled. He made Instance, at the same Time, by his Minister at Viema, that the Letter wrote by the late Czarewitz to his Imperial Majesty, wherein he complains of his Father, and calls him Tyrant, might be communicated; but this was declined by the Imperial Court. His Czarish Majefly likewife, having received Information that the Sieur de Bie, Resident of the States General at his Court, had given wrong Advices of the Affairs of Muscowy, he caused that Minister to be examined, and his Papers feized. The Proceedings in which Affair were fully fet forth in a Memorial, presented on that Occasion to the States. Their High Mightinesses answered it with great Submission, acknowledging the Fault of their Minister, and leaving it in his Majefty's Breaft either to let him continue or not in that Quality.

In Justification of these Proceedings of the Czar to stifle the Rumours of the Publick, and his going so far as to infringe the Law of Nations on that Account, we are to consider how tender an Affair this was, and how much more it concerned him to vindicate his Conduct with regard to a Son and Heir to his Crown, than any other Subject. It will not be necessary to enter into a particular Detail of all the Proceedings against every Accomplice in this Conspiracy; but the Discovery being made by Steps, at length appeared a large and frightful List of those who had engaged in the horrid Design of destroying the Great Peter, and in an Instant overthrowing the glorious Labours of his whole Reign. Persons were embarked in it of all Degrees, of every Age and Sex; and the Czar gave them all up to the Severity of the Law.

Some were racked, some beheaded, others hanged, and many were impaled alive. Those who were not condemned to Death, received the Knout and the Batoass: and not a few were banished into Siberia for the miserable Remainder of their Days. Prince Dolgoruki having been deprived of the Order of the Elephant, it was remitted back to the Court of Denmark, and he himfelf fent into Exile to Casan. But before he departed, he obtained an Audience from the Czarina to take his Leave of her, and endeavoured, in a very moving Speech, to justify himself from the Crimes laid to his Charge; and at the fame Time told her, he had nothing left in the World but the Clothes upon his Back. Her Majesty gave him a favourable Hearing, and afterwards fent him a Prefent of 200 Ducats. He left Petersburgh in a shabby black Coat, and a long Beard, and every Way in a mean Condition, to end his Days on the Estate of the rich Stroginof near Calan; from which Province, about the fame Time, returned Renchild the Savedish General, after having been n Years a Prisoner of War, since the famous Battle of Pultowa. He was conducted to Abo in Finland, there to be exchanged for the two Russian Generals, Gollowin and Trubelkoy, taken Prisoners in the Battle of Narva, in the Year 1702. As to the divorced Czarina, Mother of the unhappy Czarewitz, and the Princels Mary Alexesuna, his Majesty's half Sifter, they were both closely confined; the first in the Castle of Sleutelbourgh, where no one was permitted to speak to her, and even her Food was conveyed thro' a Hole in the Wall; and the other was shut up in a Monastery, on the Banks of the Lake Ladoga.

CHAP. II:

Negotiations at Aland. Death of the King of Sweden, and Execution of Baron Gortz. King of Poland enters into a Treaty with the Emperor and the King of Great Britain. Alterations in the North by the King of Sweden's Death. Sir John Norris arrives in the Baltick. The Czar makes a Descent into Sweden. Exposulates with the King of Great Britain. Banishes the Jesuits. Sets up Assemblies at Petersburgh. Falls ill, and recovers.

TIS Czarish Majesty had now Leisure to regard his foreign Affairs, and to attend to the Conferences of his Ministers with those of Sweden, which, as was faid before, had been transferred to the Island of Aland, where the King of Sweden had ordered commodious Apartments for the Plenipotentiaries. Baron Gortz, leaving Count Gyllembourg here, went to the King to know his last Intentions, and returned to Aland in Auguff, 1718. The Czar was then with his Fleet at Hangoe, from whence he went to Abo, to be nearer to the Negotiations. The Ministers of the Northern Allies. who had followed him to Revel, were obliged to remain there; only Baron Mardefeld, the Prussian Envoy, was permitted to go to Abo. All the Instances made by their Britannick, Danish, and Polish Majesties Ministers, for obtaining the same Permission, were in vain.

It was agreed that Baron Gortz should return once more to his Master, to procure his Approbation of the Plans of Peace prepared at Aland. For this Purpose he departed at the End of September, and the Conferences were in the mean Time continued with Count Gyllembourg. The main Point which the Czar had in View, was to keep not only Ingria, and Part of Carelia, but also Revel with Esthonia, and Riga with Livonia. Baron Gortz, it seems, stattered the Czar that the King of Sweden would consent to those Cessions, in Consideration of the Succours which his Czarish Majesty was to furnish to that King, as well for re-establishing Stanislaus on the Throne of Poland, as for retaking from the Kings of Great Britain and Denmark what they had taken from the Crown of Saveden. As to the King of Prussia, he was to be included in the Treaty. But the Czar, the better to make his own Terms, engaged to prevail upon his Pruffian Majesty to restore Stetin, with its District, for an Equivalent to be given him fomewhere elfe. The Plans concerted between Baron Gorte and M. Osterman, for these several Purposes, were found among the Papers of the Baron, after his tragical Death. Those Pieces plainly shew, that a Design was formed to conquer Norway. The Czar was obliged to affift his Squediff Majesty, by Force of Arms, in that Expedition : and the two contracting Parties promifed to unite all their Forces against Great-Britain, if it should intermeddle: which feemed to have a View to the Interest of the Pretender, and a Design of attempting an Invasion in Scotland in his Favour, after the Conquest of Noravay.

The fore-mentioned Plans feemed to be framed by the Musicovite Court: For it is certain, that the King of Sweden was refolved to infift on the Restitution of Livenia and Esthonia, and was very far from being willing to yield up Revel. But the Czar, who had a Mind to keep all his Conquests, except Finland, caused the said Plans to be drawn up to his own Liking, and then gave them in Trust to Baron Gortz, in Hopes that the powerful Affistance which he offered the King of Sweden, would prevail with him to confent to these extraordinary Cessions: And it was known that Baron Gortz gave the Ruffian Plenipotentiaries to understand, that he was not without Hopes of perfuading his Swedift Majesty to accept the Plans, which he was carrying to him from the Czar.

While these Projects were in Agitation, the Czar's Resident at London continued to propose Plans of Operation against Sweden, and to profess his Czarish Majesty's Defire of living in Friendship with the King of Great Britain; which Protestations were the Cause of sending the Resident Jefferyes to Petersburgh. He set out from London in October. Admiral Norris, who was still in the Baltick with his Squadron, had Orders to go with Mr. Fefferyes to the Czar's Court : But when the Reficent arrived at Copenhagen, on the 11th of November, he found that Admiral Norris had failed with his Fleet fome

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 269

fome Days before towards England, which obliged him to continue his Journey alone to Petersburgh, where he did not arrive before the 15th of January, 1719.

His Instructions were, to make the most obliging Return to the Advances made by the Resident Wesselowski, and to declare that, as to the Plans of Operation, they chiefly regarded the Crown of Demnark, seeing it lay most exposed, and was threatened with an Invasion in Norway. However, the Resident was to intimate, that it was not easy to concert with the Czar the Operations for pushing on the War, at the Time when he was actually negotiating with Saveden at Aland, and when all Europe was expecting every Moment to hear that their Peace was made. The Refident had Orders also, modestly to complain of the good Reception the Jacobites found at the Czar's Court, who had employed feveral of them in his Navy, and had lately confiderably augmented their Pay, for encouraging them to flay in his Service. He was likewife to complain, that the Czar's Minister at Paris had done his utmost to divert the Regent from figning the Quadruple Alliance; and that Prince Kurakin, in his Station, employed the most pressing Inflances to hinder the States from acceding to it, and was labouring to form Engagements between his Court and that of Spain.

The Czar, in the mean Time, kept exactly the Promife he had made to Baron Gortz, not to disturb his Master during his Expedition against Noravay; and having undertaken nothing in his Sea Campaign, returned to Petersburgh on the 15th of September, where he found the Czarina delivered of a Princels, who was named Natalia. His Majesty ordering his Vessels to Cronslot, and Preparations being made to lay them up and unman them, no one doubted but the Peace was as good as concluded; yet the King of Denmark, who faw the Storm he was threatened with, caused the most earnest Instances to be made to the Czar for his Affiftance, either by Ships or Subfidies, or by a Diversion in Old Sweden. But all was equally refused, and the King of Saveden was fo well affured that the Czar would suspend all Operations, that he fent for his Batallion of Guards, and great Part of the Garrison of Stockholm, to the Frontiers of Noravay.

N3

Baron Gortz, after a very short Stay at Aland, set out from thence to go to the King a third Time; and it was not questioned but this third Journey would give the finishing Stroke to the Peace, when all Hopes of it were blasted by the Death of the King of Sweden, which happened in the Night between the 29th and 30th of November, O.S. at Frederick/ball, a Town of Norway. His Majesty had already taken the Fort of Guldenlew, which would have foon made him Mafter of the Place. altho' bravely defended by the Governor. He went about 9 at Night to visit the Trenches, and standing with his Body exposed to a Battery of Cannon, a Ball of half a Pound struck him on the right Temple, and made a large Hole in his Head, which lay on the Parapet, with the Left Lye beaten in, and the Right out of its Socket. Thus ended, in the 36th Year of his Age, the rapid Course of that most extraordinary Prince. Charles XII. whose Intrepidity in all Dangers made him perform fuch Exploits, as the Relation of them will hardly gain Credit with Posterity. Patience of Labour, Temperance in Living, Modesty in Success, and Liberality to his Friends, were Virtues he possessed in the highest Degree; but his Rashness and Obstinacy were Failings that cost his own Country as much, or more, than his Enemies. If he had been more prudent and less implacable, he might not perhaps have been cut off in the Flower of his Age, but have lived a happy, as well as a glorious Monarch.

The Death of Charles entirely changed the Face of Affairs in the North. Baron Gortz, who was not yet informed of the King's Death, was arrested as he was going to feek him at the Siege of Frederickshall. He had drawn upon himself the Hatred of all the Nation, by the pernicious Counsel he had given their King, and by the Haughtiness with which he had treated the Nobles; to whose Resentment he now fell a Sacrifice, being condemned by them to the Scaffold, where he died with great Resolution. The Sentence pronounced on him was, to be beheaded by the common Hangman, and to have his Corple buried under the Gallows. Having heard this Sentence with great Composure, he faid, he had prepared for Death for feveral Days, but had not expected the last Part of his Sentence, which he thought too hard. A little before his Execution he made his own Epitaph, in these Words: Mors Regis, Fides in Regem, est Mors mea. The King's Death, and my Loyalty to him, are the Occasions of my Death. Several Persons who were in the Confidence of Gortz, were likewise arrested, and an Officer was dispatched at the same Time to Aland, to seize on Secretary Stambke, and all his Papers; by which the Muscovites were apprifed of the Death of the King of Sweden, and that the Army had proclaimed Ulrica, his Sifter, Queen. This News for fome Time confounded the Czar, who faw all his Projects of Cession and Peace overthrown, which M. Ofterman had concerted with Gortz; but his Disquietudes were distipated, as foon as he reflected on the miferable Condition to which Squeden was reduced, and the Divisions that he thought must arise in the very Bosom of the State. However, the Re-union of Men's Minds in Favour of the new Queen, and the Refolution of the States to raise four Armies, and fit out a good Fleet, left him no Hopes. but by making a confiderable Descent into the very Heart of Sweden; unless that Nation, intimidated by the Profpect of the Continuance of that War, should consent to receive those Laws he intended to impose upon it; and to leave a Door open for this Purpole, his Majesty signified his Defire that the Congress of Atand might go on.

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy 271

In the mean Time feveral other Persons, concerned in the late Czarewitz's Treason, were publickly executed at Petersburgh. Abraham Fedrowitz Lopuchin, Brother to the late Czarina Ottokosa; James Pussinoi, the Czarewitz's Confessor; Iuan Association, his Master of the Horse and Consident; Dubrosk, a Gentleman of his Court, and Vionow, the Steward of his Houshold, had their Heads cut off; and 4 others had the Knout given them. One had also his Tongue cut out, and his Nose cut off. The Bodies of those who had been beheaded, lay exposed for some Days in the Market-Place, and then were twisted upon Wheels. Immediately after this Execution, his Majesty went to his Council of War.

N4

which were then fitting, to whom he made the following Speech.

My Brethren,

Do not believe there is a Man among you, who does not know by the Light of Nature, and by the Knowledge he has acquired in the Affairs of the World, that the two first and principal Duties of him whom God has appointed to govern Kingdoms, are, to protect his Subjects against the publick Enemy, by leading in Person his Armies to Battle in Time of War; and to maintain domestick Peace among his People, by rendering speedy and impartial Justice to every one, and by punishing Offences in Persons of the most elevated Condition, as duly as in the meanest Peasant. You know what I have done from the Beginning of my Reign till now, with respect to the first of these Duties; and as to the second, I have given you a most remarkable Instance of the Power God has given me, to fet afide all the Confiderations in the World when Justice is to be done, and when the Safety of my People require my doing it without Delay, and with Rigour. You have feen me punish the Crimes of a Son, who was ungrateful, an Hypocrite, perverse and ill-defigning, beyond all that can be imagined, and of those who were Accomplices in his Wickedness: And I hope I have thereby secured my main Work, which is to render the Russian Empire for ever powerful, and all my Dominions flourishing: A Work which has cost me to much Toil, and my Subjects fo much Blood, and fo great Treasures; and which the first Year after my Decease would have been utterly overturned, and trampled under Foot, if I had not taken care of it in the Manner I have done. This great Affair being, by the Grace of God, concluded, it is Time I should turn my Attention to the repressing the Infolence of those who have dared to abuse the Power which I gave them to govern the Provinces of my Empire, and their Inhabitants, in the Quality of my Lieutenants; feveral of whom, in Violation of their Oaths, have fet their Feet on the Necks of my poor People, and have enriched themselves at the Expence of their Sweat, and of their Blood. Now as the People have, in my Opimon.

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Museovy. 273

nion, too well deserved, (by all they have been obliged to furnish in Recruits, in Horses, in Money, and in Provisions, to support my just Cause, against the Enemy with whom I have been 18 Years at War, and to supply my other pressing Occasions) that I should interpose for their Relief against those Blood-suckers; I have resolved to establish a Tribunal, of which my General of Foot, Adam Adamewitz Weide, whom I have never yet found faulty in any Thing, shall be President; the Lieutenant Generals Butterlin and Schlippenbach, the Major Generals Galliczin and Jagoscinsky, and the Brigadiers Wolkoff and Uflaffold, shall be Affesfors. This Tribunal shall examine strictly the Management of the Persons whole Names I shall give them, in the Administration of their Offices, and shall pronounce Sentence against those who shall be found Criminals. I hope the establishing this Tribunal, will prove a Means to restrain every one for the future within the Duties of his Employment, and to induce them to execute, in the best Manner, the Powers with which they shall be intrusted."

Prince Menzikoff being accused before this new Council, 1. Of having preferred his own Advantage to that of his Master, in the Government of Ingria; 2. Of having connived at the Commerce of contraband Goods; and 3. Of having maintained a fecret Correspondence with a Minister of Saveden; he was found guilty, and having delivered up his Sword, went to his own House, to be there under Confinement, till his Majesty's Pleafure should be known. Prince Dolgoruki pleaded his own Cause with so much Eloquence, that the Judges thought fit to make report to the Czar before they gave Sentence, The Grand Admiral Apraxin was found guilty of Frauds and Embezzlements in victualling and paying the Fleet; and as the Czar took from him the Order of St. Andrew, it was believed he would have been capitally punished. The Senator Apraxin, Brother of the Admiral, and formerly Director-General of the Sait Works, was accused of converting to his own Profit, 100,000 Crowns a Year of their Produce. Several others were likewife called to Account and found guilty. But when every Body expected that fevere Punishment would be inflicted on them, the Czar was prevailed upon, by the Remembrance of their former Services, to restore them to his Favour, on Condition of only being largely mulcted.

About this Time died Dr. Arefkin, the Czar's first Physician. The English Jacobites were supposed to have lost a good Friend in this Gentleman; but it was said, that his Relation, Sir Harry Stirling, was well received at the Court of Russia, and had the Care of the Pretender's Affairs in his Stead. The Doctor, by his last Will, bequeathed all his ready Money to his Brothers and Sisters; and all his Estate to the Princes, eldest Daughter of the Czar; and to the Hospital of Edenburgh the Money that should arise from the Sale of his Moveables. He was interred with great Funeral Pomp, on the 4th of January, 1719, the Czar himself assisting in the Procession, and, according to the Custom of the Country, carrying a lighted Torch in his Hand.

On the 15th Day of the same Month, Mr. Festereyes, the British Resident, arrived at Petersburgh, and a few Days after had an Audience of the Czar, to whom he made a Speech in the German Tongue, to this Effect: "That the King of Great Britain had ordered him to make his Majesty the most friendly Compliments on his Part, and to acquaint him how entirely the King was satisfied with the Representations which M. Wesselowski had from Time to Time made in his Name: That nothing could be more acceptable to the King, than the Affurances his Czarish Majesty had given him by his faid Minister, that he would explain himself in such a Manner, as should demonstrate his fincere Intentions to maintain a good Understanding with him: That for that Reason, his Britannick Majesty had resolved to send Sir John Norris, with the Character of Envoy Extraordinary, to his Czarish Majesty; but that he, Mr. Jeffereyes, had been detained so long by the contrary Winds, that Sir John Norris was failed from the Sound before his Arrival at Copenbagen. " The King being informed of this Difappointment, and being unwilling to let flip any of the Advances made by his Czarish Majesty, had sent Orders to him to continue his Journey, and to open the Instructions defigned for Sir John Norris; pursuant to which

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 275

Instructions, he was to return his Majesty Thanks, for the obliging Declaration he had been pleased to make at the British Court; and to assure his Majesty of the perfect Esteem the King his Master had for his Person, and his Desire to establish an entire Confidence, and to enter into Engagements of the most lasting Friendship with his Czarish Majesty." The Czar answered in the Russian Language, That he thanked his British Majesty for the Assurances he gave him of his Friendship; and that he would endeavour to cultivate it on his Part, to the utmost of his Power.

In the Beginning of February, his Czarish Majesty ordered M. Ofterman to come to Petersburgh for new Instructions, and the Conferences went on between M. Bruce and Count Gyllembourg: But Ofterman was not fent back to Aland till the Beginning of April, when the Queen of Saveden was come to a Resolution of naming Baron Liliensted to supply the Place of Gortz at the Congress, where he arrived in the Month of June. In the mean Time his Czarish Majesty, having been at Olonitz, to drink the Waters of that Place, by which he found much Benefit, went to Ladoga, fituated on the Mouth of the River Wolkofa, which he had rebuilt: His Defign in which was to have a Castle there, and a Magazine of Provisions, for the Use and Convenience of a prodigious Multitude of People, whom he had drawn from feveral Parts of his Empire, to cut a Canal as far as-Sleutelbourg, and make a Communication between the Rivers Wolkofa and Neva, and thereby prevent the dangerous Passage of the Lake Ladoga, in crossing which above 100 Ships were lost every Year one with another. In this Undertaking there were employed, at this Time, about 12,000 Men, and a great many more afterwards.

His Majesty, upon his Return to Petersburgh in the Beginning of March, being informed of a Treaty concluded between the Emperor, the King of Great Britain as Elector of Hanover, and the King of Poland, took it so ill of the last of those Princes, that he wrote him a very sharp expostulatory Letter on the Occasion, which he caused to be dispersed among the States of the Kingdom. Augustus resented this Usage so much, that in his Answer, he threw out severe Reproaches against the Czar, concluding with these Expressions: "Thro' the Happiness of the Times, and the Assistance of our Friends, we have now attained to that Strength, as to be able timely and courageously to oppose all Insults, with which ill-minded Persons may threaten us,"

When M. Ofterman returned to Aland, in the Month of April, it was less to negotiate than menace the Savedes; for his Czarish Majesty had ordered him to declare, That unless they accepted, in two Months Time, of the Conditions proposed, they must expect a Visit from 40,000 Plenipotentiaries, auho avould force them to it with Savord in Hand. But the Death of the King of Sweden, whose Ambition had given too much Umbrage to his Neighbours, had changed the Dispositions of all Europe with regard to that desolated Kingdom. The Protestant Powers especially deliberated, whether it could be for their Interest to suffer the Czar to tear from it its best Provinces. The King of Great Britain had concluded with France the famous Quadruple Alliance, in which it was stipulated, that the Enemy of any one of the contracting Powers should be deemed so to all the rest: For which Reason France took Pains to reconcile Saveden with the King of Great Britain, and succeeded in her Defign; and his Brittannick Majesty going this Summer to Hanover, nominated the Lord Carteret to be his Ambaffador at the Court of Saveden, whither Coloned Baffewitz went before, being charged with the Affairs of that Electorate. His Excellency the Lord Carteret arrived at Gottenbourg the 18th of June, and in a few Days after at Stockholm. His first Care being to remove the Difficulties relating to the Navigation of the British Subjects in the Baltick, he presented a Memorial to the Queen of Sweden, which had all the defired Effect; her Majefty's Answer containing all the Concessions that the Court of Great Britain could expect. Having thus adjusted the Affairs of Commerce, the Ministers of the King of Great Britain, with those of Saveden, entered into a double Treaty; the first containing a Renovation of the Alliance between Great Britain and Sweden, and the other between her Savedish Majesty and the Elector of Hanover. By these Treaties Bremen and Verden were to remain

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 277

main with the King of Great Britain, for a Million of Crowns to be paid upon the Ratification of them; and in case the War should continue in the North, his Britannick Majesty obliged himself not only to pay an Annual Subsidy of 300,000 Crowns to Sweden, but to act with his Force against the Czar, and to procure for Sweden the Restitution of her Provinces, and of his States to the Duke of Holsein. A short Time after the King of Prussia, for the Cession of Stein and its Districts, made a Treaty with the Queen of Sweden, very much the same with that of the King of Great Britain.

His Czarish Majesty, before he was thoroughly acquainted with these Negotiations, considering how great a Check the Maritime Powers might be to to his Defigns, endeavoured to keep fair with them, by communicating a Declaration to their Minsters of his Readiness to grant them a free Commerce, under certain Restrictions relating to particular Commodities, and of his Defire to live in Amity with them. But on the 3d of July, the English Admiral, Sir John Norris, arrived with his Squadron of Men of War in the Road of Copenhagen, which very little pleased his Czarish Majesty, who, at his first coming into the Baltick, had wrote the Admiral a Letter dated on board the Ingermanland Man of War, of the Muscowite Fleet, June the 7th, 1719. O. S. and requiring him to fend in Writing the Occasion of his coming into the Baltick, particularly whether he was to commit any Hostilities against him, or his Dominions. The Admiral answered him in the mildest Manner, defiring he would fend to the King, his Master, to be satisfied of his good Intentions. But his Letter was fo far from making the Czar eafy, that he faw himfelf not only abandoned by his Allies, but those Allies gone over to his Enemy. As foon as he perceived this Change of Affairs, he went about executing the Descent with which he had threatened Saveden. And to oblige them to hearken to Propositions of Peace, and to give the Publick an Account of the Motives of this Expedition, which could not but prove very bloody, he published a Manifesto from on Board his Fleet, in order to vindicate his own Conduct from the Behaviour of her Swediß Majesty. The Queen of Saveden answered by a Counter-Manisesto; wherein she endeavoured to shew, that what his Czarish Majesty had dispersed over the Kingdom of Saveden, at the same Time that his Troops were putting all to Fire and Sword on the Coasts of that Kingdom, had no other View in it than to attribute the War, and those Obstacles which prevented a solid Peace, to Causes that were nothing less than real; her Majesty not doubting but her Subjects would very eafily fee thro' the Artifice of that Writing, which came from her avowed Enemy, to make false Impressions on them; and persuaded herfelf, that they were convinced of her Dispositions to procure Repose to her Kingdom by a good Peace; but that what had hitherto prevented it, was that, by the Conditions offered to her, the Czar was for referving to himfelf all that he had taken from Saveden, except Finland; although it was he himself who had first undertaken the War, and had continued it all along with the utmost Severity; having burnt and plundered many Places, even while the Negotiations of Peace were going on. Her Majesty left her Subjects to judge what they were to expect from the Proximity of fuch a Neighbour, who was in a Condition to penetrate even into the Heart of the Kingdom with his Arms; and if it would not be more honourable for them to follow the Steps of their valiant Ancestors, than suffer themselves to be amused by the vain Promises of their Enemies, and draw upon themselves a Yoke, which would prove more insupportable than Death itself.

It was high Time, indeed, to think of opposing the Ruffians, who had already ruined feveral Maritime Places in Saveden; their Expedition being conducted in the following Manner. Admiral Apraxin having held a Council at the Island of Capel, took his Course towards the Daelder Isles, making by the Way several considerable Persons Prisoners; and upon Intelligence received from divers Parts, he judged it would be most for the Czar's Service for him to return to the chief Copper-Mines, which he ruined, and burnt the Woods on that Side, together with feveral Gentlemens Seats. He arrived with his Fleet at Landfort on the 19th of July, having taken upon his Rout two Ships laden with Corn, and bound to Stockholm from Koning burg. He was refolved to go the next Day to South-Telge, and in the mean Time had detached 50 Coffacks of the Cavalry, who advanced within a League and a half of Stockholm, defeated an Out-Guard of Swedes, and brought back with them a Corporal of the Guards, and eight of his Men. All this was but the Prelude to the general Descent intended by the Russians. The Hereditary Prince of Hesse-Caffel, therefore, went to Waxholm with Count Ducker, to give necessary Orders. They perceived from the Coast of Suder-Arm, some Russian Gallies, detached from the Fleet, to examine the Entrance of the Scheeren. They learned also, that the Czar had above 40,000 Men abroad, that were defigned to make an Invasion in the Kingdom. His Royal Highness therefore departed for Tuna, where the Army was formed, confishing of 14,000 Foot, and 6000 Horfe, Three Days after, they had Advice that a great Number of Russian Gallies were seen on the Coast of Romausen, above Noorder Telge. Night following the Regiment of Foot-Guards marched towards Stockholm, and were followed by some others that were to encamp at Stock-Sund, about half a League from that Capital. The next Day, News was brought that the Russians were perceived near Ofter-Kamingden, within three Leagues of Stockholm, having burnt Griven Haven. and the Country Seat of M. Hopkin, Secretary of State. Upon which a Detachment was fent on that Side, to prevent their penetrating any farther. But the Russians continued to ravage the Country, and burn the Houses all along the Scheeren. They divided their Gallies into three Squadrons; one of which went between Noord and Suder-Telge, another to the Coast of Geefle, and the 3d towards Nikoping. On the 27th of the same Month, a Detachment of Coffacks and Cavalry landed at Sandmar, and advanced as far as Westerhaning, four Leagues from Stockholm, where, meeting with 12 Swediff Troopers, they put them to Flight, and killed their Captain. Another Party going on Shore, burnt Bo, with the fine House of Count Tessin, within two Leagues of the Capital. The Prince of Helle coming thither with some Troops from the Camp at Tuna, the Russians were obliged to retire: And his Royal Highness returning into the City at Night, it very much recovered the Spirits of the Inhabitants. The Prince went the next Day to Carelfberg to the Queen, his Spouse, to give an Account of what had passed. It was known at the same Time that Admiral Norris was arrived in the Road of Copenhagen, with a large Squadron of English Vessels, from whence the Savedes had hopes of a favourable Diversion.

In the mean Time, the Russian Fleet advanced on the 28th as far as the Mouth of the River of Stockholm, with a Defign to furprize 19 Barks loaded with Provisions for the City: They took five; but the rest escaped under the Cannon of Fort Dalero. The 20th they burnt Vagelbro, Malmoe, Sab, Sand, Wofly, Bratelund, Furstabolm, and Herembro, besides several Churches and Houses, the Inhabitants of which faved themselves in the Capital. On the 30th the Prince of Heffe-Caffel caused his Army to advance towards the Sea, and took up his Quarters at Jours-Holm, about a League and a half from the City. The Russians fent towards the North, and burnt several Towns and Villages, and among the rest the whole Island of Soderoen, and all the Parish of Boertilles, with all the Works that depended upon it; the Towns of Ofkammer and Oregrund, and the Parish of Hokoyavud. As it was in those Places that the most considerable Iron Mines of the Kingdom lay, the Ruin of them was almost an irreparable Loss to the Savedes. They did not spare even the Lands of Thoras, belonging to M. Rumpf. the Resident of the States General of the United Provinces. On the first of August 2000 Russians landed at Ofterwick, near the Suder-Telge, and obliged a small Detachment of Swediff Troops to retire, with the Lofs of three or four Men. The Enemy thought the Ruffians had a Defign to land all their Forces at that Place; but they only fet fire to the Town of Suder-Telge, of which one half was redeced to Ashes, and at the Approach of a Regiment of Horse, they retired to their Gallies. On the 2d the Russians burnt several other Towns and Houses about Suder-Telge, and endeavoured to fet fire to the Woods to ruin the Mine-Works. Some of the Russian Troops were repulfed, and several of their Men taken Prisoners. Others went into Oftrogothia, where they did irreparable Damage. On the Northern Coast they burnt Furstenar, and Ortula, where there were Mines of great

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 281

Consequence. In the Night between the 6th and 7th they took a little Fort near Nikoping, defended only by 30 Men. They afterwards burnt the Town, that was well peopled, and carried on a confiderable Trade. Five thousand Russians, a little after, seized on Lossa, which was a Mine from whence the best Iron in the whole Kingdom was taken: They carried 13,000 Tons of it on Board the Gallies, and afterwards ruined the Works. The Inhabitants of Norkoping, understanding how the Town of Nikoping had been used, chose to set fire themselves to their own Town, after they had drawn out their best Effects. It would be difficult to enter into an exact Detail of all the Executions of the Russians at this Time : But we must content ourselves with the Accounts published at Petersburgh by Order of the Czar, to eternize the Memory of them. According to the Calculations made there, Admiral Apraxin, for his Part, had burnt and destroyed 6 good Towns, 11 Caftles or Palaces of Brick, 109 of Wood, belonging to Noblemen, 826 Villages and Hamlets, 3 Mills and 10 Magazines, two Mines of Copper and 5 of Iron. Major-General Lefly, on his Part, had reduced to Ashes 2 Towns, 21 Castles or Noblemens Houses, 535 Villages and Hamlets, 40 Mills, 16 Magazines, and o Mines of Iron, for one of which the Swedes had offered 300,000 Rix-Dollars, to fave it from Ruin. They destroyed the Corn and Forage, and killed all the Cattle and Horses that they could not carry off with them. They put on Board their Vessels all the Iron they were able, and the rest, to the Number of 80,000 Bars, they threw into the Sea.

The Design of the Czar, in all these Burnings and Devastations, was to bring the Court of Sweden to accept of such Conditions as he was willing to impose upon it. To which Purpose, he sent Councillor Oserman thither, charged with a Commission to make the hardest Propositions. He stopt about half a League from the City, whither the Court of Sweden having sent some Ministers to him, they sound that, agreeable to the Project of Peace at Aland, he demanded nothing less than the absolute Cession of Estbonia, Ingria, and Carelia, comprising the Towns of Revel, Wybourg, Narva, and Keckstooln:

and

and the Ceffion of Livonia for 40 Years. These Propositions were rejected with Scorn: The Congress of Aland broke up; the Ministers retired; and the English Squadron, which, till then, had remained in the Road of Copenhagen, sailed towards the Ports of Sweden; but found that the Russians had retired to their own Harbours 8

Days before.

The Ruffians were highly displeased at a Rumour which was spread Abroad on this Occasion; and therefore published an Account, which they said had been first of all printed at Revel, entitled, " A true Relation of the Return of the Russian Fleet to Revel and Cronflot, taken in authentick Journals, and published to confute the false Reports of those that envy the Glory of his Czarish Majefty's Arms, and had spread a Report, as if the said Fleet had fled upon the Advice of the joining of the Englifb and Swedish Fleets." It contained a Journal of the Motions of their Fleet for some Time before, and afferted, that the Seafon of the Year was the only Caufe of their Retreat; they not hearing of the faid Conjunction till after it was made. But notwithstanding this Account, it was generally thought that the Approach of the British Fleet was the true Occasion of this Motion. It was on the 26th of August that Sir John Norris arrived at the Dablers: The next Day the Prince of Heffe and the Lord Carteret paid him a Visit on board; and on the 3d of September the Queen, and the whole Court, went on Board, and were entertained by the Admiral at Dinner; after which there was a Ball, in which her Majesty danced. The Admiral was received with great Honours at the City of Stockholm, where his Presence was very agreeable to the Savedes. On the 8th of the fame Month Mr. Berkeley, Son of the Lord Berkeley of Stratton, fet out from Stockholm with the Letters from the Lord Carteret and Sir John Norris, to the Czar, offering his Britannick Majesty's Mediation, for making Peace between his Czarish Majesty and the Queen of Sweden. Mr. Berkeley carrying these Letters to the Russian Plenipotentiaries, before their Departure from Aland, they would neither undertake to fend them to the Czar, nor give him a Passport for Petersburgh, as in the Account above; but General Bruce contented himself to answer

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 283

my Lord Carteret, "that the Contents of those Letters were so singular, and so little agreeable to the strict Ties and the Friendship that subsisted between their Czarish and Britannick Majesties, that he could not prevail with himself to do that which he desired, without having sirst received the Orders of the Czar."

Upon this Answer being given, the Sieurs Jeffereyes and Weber received Orders to leave the Court of Petersburgh, and retire to Dantzick: Which was enough to to shew the King of England's Disposition to the Czar, Besides, his Czarish Majesty had learned that Admiral Norris had Orders to join Sweden, in opposing the Operations of the Russian Fleet: Whereupon the Czar caused all the English Merchants in his Dominions to be arrested, and threatened to conficate all their Effects, which amounted to above fifty Millions, if the British Nation made War upon him: And at the same Time, to cast all the Blame on the Court of Great Britain, his Czarish Majesty declared his Intentions to King George I. by a very bold Memorial, which was prefented by his Resident Weffeloruski. It charged his Britannick Majesty with Breach of Treaties, and Violations of Friendship; and was answered by Secretary Stanbope, and the Chancery of Hanover: The Confequences of which we shall see hereafter.

Mean while the Czar, ever watchful over the Welfare of his People, this Year ordered the Jesuits to be banished his Dominions. These reverend Fathers, who have an admirable Art of getting into all Places where they can have any Prospect of Gain, had spared no Pains to introduce themselves into Russia, where the great Superflition of the People was like to prove an inexhaustible Fund for ecclefiaffical Exactions: They had found Means to get a Recommendation from the Emperor; but there being at this Time a Coldness between the Courts of Petersburgh and Vienna, his Czarish Majesty caused an Order to be affixed at the Door of the Roman Catholick Church, requiring them peremptorily to depart within four Days after Notice given. After such Treatment, Posterity is not to expect that the writing Jesuits will beflow any Encomiums on this wife Monarch; who, in the midst of the most important Affairs, did not neglect to improve even the Diversions of his Court. For he this Year caused several Assemblies to be opened at Petersburgh, and had the following Regulations printed in the Rushar Tongue.

I. The Person at whose House the Assembly is to be in the Evening, is to hang out a Bill, or other Sign, to give Notice to all Persons of either Sex. II. The Asfembly shall not begin fooner than four or five in the Afternoon, nor continue later than ten at Night. III. The Master of the House is not obliged to go to meet his Guests, to conduct them out, or to entertain them; but tho' himself is exempt from waiting on them, he ought to find Chairs, Candles, Drink, and all the Necessaries asked for; and also, to provide for all Sorts of Gaming, and what belongs thereto. IV. No certain Hour is fixed for any Body's coming or going; it is fufficient if one makes his Appearance in the Assembly. V. It is left to any one's Liberty, to walk, fit, or play. just as he likes; nor shall any Body hinder him, or take Exception at what he does: As for the rest, it is enough to falute at coming and going. VI. Persons of Rank, Merchants of Note, Head Master, Persons employed in the Chancery, and their Wives and Children, shall have Liberty of frequenting the Assemblies. VII. A particular Place shall be assigned to the Footmen, those of the House excepted, that there may be sufficient Room in the Apartments defigned for the Affembly.

At these Assemblies there is dancing in one Room; playing at Cards in another, or Draughts, or Chess, in which last Game the meanest Russians excel: In a third Room there is commonly Company smoaking, and discoursing together; and in the fourth are Ladies and Gentlemen, diverting themselves with Questions and Commands, Cross-purposes, and such like Plays. Tho none of the Company are obliged to drink more Wine or Brandy than what they ask for, except on transgressing the established Rules of the Assembly, when they are to drink off a certain limited Quantity; yet there are many Russians, who lay hold of that Opportunity of making much of themselves at other Men's Cost, and look upon Assemblies as one of the most laudable of the Czar's Innovations. It falls to the Turn of every great Man at Court, to keep an Affembly once in a Winter at least; and if the Czar pitches upon a particular Person for it, Notice is given to him by the Master of the Police. Plays and Opera's are also now brought to some Degree of Persection at Petersburgh; but were performed in a very aukward Manner in the Czar Peter's Time, who had no Relish for Entertainments of that Kind; but, however, was for encouraging them, as he thought they might help to soften the Moroseness of his People.

Chap. 2. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 285

All the great Defigns of his Majesty had this Year like to have been sinished, by a violent Fit of the Cholick, that threatened his Life while he was at Revel, whither he went to hasten the Equipment of his Fleet, and complete the Fortifications of that Place: But the Vigour of his Constitution, and the Help of Medicine.

once more restored him to reap new Laurels.

CHAP. III.

Negotiations in Poland. Queen of Sweden resigns ber Crown to ber Husband. The Czar's Minister in Great Britain is ordered to depart. British Fleet arrives in the Sound. The Czar declines the Mediation of the King of Great Britain. An Officer arrives from Sweden, to notify the Accession of the Prince of Hesse Cassel to the Throne. The Swedish Vice-Admiral attacks the Czar's Fleet, and is beaten. A Naval Triumph on that Account. The Russians commit great Rawages in Sweden. The Czar makes some Proposals, which are rejected; whereupon he continues his Preparations. Receives the Duke of Holstein under bis Protection. Offers to accept the Mediation of France. A Congress appointed at Niestadt. The Czar fends a Chart of the Caspian Sea to the Royal Academy at Paris. Peace between Russia and Sweden. The Czar is requested to take the Title of Emperor. Thankfgiving for the Peace.

THE Czar began with the Year 1720, to make new Preparations for the Campaign. Seeing himfelf abandoned by all his Allies, and forced to maintain along alone the War with Sweden, supported by an English Fleet, savoured by the Kings of Prussia and Denmark, and ready to make Peace with Poland, he called together a very considerable Army on the Side of Finland, and endeavoured with a numerous Fleet to make himself Master of the Bothnick Gulph.

The Diet of Poland, being affembled, fent the Palatine of Mazovia to his Majelty, to demand Satisfaction for the Damages done by the Marches of the Ruffian Troops, and by the Contributions they had raifed; of which the Czar ordered Informations to be given, that he might punish the Officers who had suffered such Diforders. The Palatine likewise represented, that the Republick had carried their Patience as far as possible, while the Nobility were for getting on Horseback, to rid themselves of the Injuries that were done them by the Russians. His Majesty, who had some Pretentions on Poland that he did not care to relinquish, and who knew the Interest which the Emperor took in the Affairs of King Augustus, was obliged to act with great Caution. for fear the Poles should think of reconciling themselves to Saveden. He left the Management of this Negociation to Prince Dolgoruki, who had been many Years Ambassador in Poland. This Minister, in several Conferences with the Deputies of the Nobility, gave them to understand, that his Master was very well inclined to enter into an Union with Poland; but defired, First, To know whether the Letters that were fent in Answer to his were approved of by the Body of the Republick, fince they swere in fuch Terms as looked like a Declaration of War: Secondly, Whether the Treaty concluded at Vienna, between the Emperor and the King of Poland, was made by Confent of the Republick. He afterwards demanded, that the City of Dantzick should be obliged to execute the Treaty made with the Regency, by which she was engaged to furnish a certain Number of Frigates.

The Deputies answered to the first Question, that when it was not judged proper to continue any longer the last Diet at Grodno, it was resolved that the King, the Primate, and the Mareschal of the Nuncios, should write to his Czarish Majesty as they had done: That those Letters contained only a necessary Remonstrance.

that if the Ruffian Troops still remained in the Kingdom, the Republick would be obliged to take proper Measures, to prevent the entire Ruin of so many Pro-To the fecond Question they answered, That the Republick had no Knowledge of the Treaty concluded at Vienna; but as it was made fince the Diet at Grodno, they could have no Part in it: But that if the King, as Elector of Saxony, had concluded any particular Treaty, he had a Right to it, without rendering any Account to the Republick. As to his Czarish Majesty's Demand, with regard to the City of Dantzick; as the Kings of Poland had always left them in full Possession of their Liberties, and the Republick had maintained no naval Forces, they could not, they faid, oblige the Citizens of Dantzick to make an Armament for the Czar. In short, after many reciprocal Deductions of the Complaints on both Sides, the Deputies declared, that the Republick were refolved to make use of the good Dispositions of the Queen of Sweden towards a Peace; and that the Republick invited his Czarish Majesty to conclude a Peace at the fame Time, or discharge them from their Alliance.

The Palatine made his publick Entry into Petersburgh on the 5th of March. On the 7th he had an Audience of the Czar, before whose Throne he made a Speech, to felicitate him on the Success of his Arms over the common Enemy, and to affure him of the inviolable Amity of the King of Poland and the Republick. This Minister had several Conferences with those of his Czarish Majesty, who told him, that their Master could not renounce his Pretensions to Courland, nor yield Livonia to the Republick: That the City of Dantzick must execute the Conventions made with the Russian Generals; and that the Council of Finances shall examine into what was due from the Czar to the Republick, and from the Republick to his Majesty.

While this passed at Petersburgh, the Treaty of Peace concluded with the King of Prussia was signed at Stockbolm, and another was carrying on with the King of Denmark. The States of Sweden assembled, and the Queen took the Crown from her own Head, to place it on that of the Hereditary Prince of Hesse-Casses, her Royal Confort; who was crowned, to the general Satisfaction of all their Subjects. All these Measures tended little to Peace with the Czar: On the contrary, the King of Great-Britain, now firmly united with the Regent of France, had engaged him to pay the Subsidies which were due to Saveden from the most Christian King: So that at the Time when Saveden was at the lowest Ebb of Credit, she received 600,000 Crowns from the Court of France, with Assurances that the Subsidy, for the Future, should be regularly paid. This Succour, joined to those of England and Hanover, made the Saveder take fresh Courage, and gave his Majesty to understand, that he was not to expect Peace, unless he could bring them to it by Force; which occasioned him to make new Efforts, by re-assembling his Troops in Finland, and augmenting his Fleet.

In the mean Time the Czar's Resident, Bestuchef, presented a Memorial to his Britannick Majesty, which was a Reply to the two Answers of his Majesty. mentioned in the preceding Chapter, to the Memorial of Wesselowski. In this Piece, there is a Recital of the whole Transactions of the War in the North, from the first Beginning of it to that Time; and his Czarish Majesty undertakes to justify every Step he had taken, in the whole Progress of it. But the Reflections that were made, in this Memorial, on the British Ministers, pretending that they were in an Interest different from that of their own Country, and the little Respect that is paid therein to his Britannick Majesty, were Reasons for giving no other Answer to it, than an Order to M. Befluchef to depart the Kingdom. And now, in puriuance of the Measures which the Court of Great-Britain had taken the Year before, as foon as the Seafon of the Year permitted, the British Fleet arrived in the Sound, under Sir John Norris, who was ordered to join the Swedish Fleet, in Support of his Britannick Majesty's Mediation. For this Reason the Admiral, before he weighed Anchor in the Road of Copenhagen, wrote a Letter to Prince Dolgoruki, fignifying the Motives of his coming. The Prince's Answer was no ways satisfactory, and the Czar feemed determined not to accept of this Mediation. He was willing to treat of Peace directly with Saveden; or if there there was to be a Mediator, he would admit of no other than the Emperor of Germany. On the other Hand, as there was no open Rupture between the Courts of Petersburgh and London, his Czarish Majesty was perfuaded, that the British Admiral would keep himself only on the Desensive, and therefore formed an Army, behind the Intrenchments of Abo in Finland, of 80,000 Men, besides the Flying Camp that was in other Parts of that Province. His Majesty also went from Petersburgh to Cronslot, and from thence to Revel, to hasten the Equipment of his Fleet and Galleys, which were in so fine Order, and so great in Number, that the Palatine Mazovia, at his Audience of Leave, could not forbear expressing his Admiration of them, in a Speech which he made to his Majesty, much to the following Purpose.

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 289

MOST ferene, most powerful and great Lord, Czar and Autocrator of all Ruffia, the Ambaffador Plenipotentiary of the most ferene, most powerful, and great Prince, Augustus King of Poland, and of the Republick, is obliged to acknowledge that whoever beholds your Czarish Majesty, beholds every Thing: All the World, Sire, look with Admiration on the Wonders of your Reign, and Posterity will hardly give Credit to them. Your Majesty is equally great in your warlike Enterprizes abroad, and the wife Government of your People at Home. Your invincible Armies, your building fuch powerful Fleets, and fo many noble Fortreffes, are admired on one Hand, as much as your Rules of Policy, the Foundations you have laid of Cities, Palaces, and other magnificent Edifices, are on the other. We, who are ocular Witnesses of them, shall not fail to recount these Wonders in our own Country. The King will hear the Report of them with fo much the more Satisfaction, as we shall return to give him Hopes, that your Majesty will always maintain the Treaties you are entered into with him; and above all, for our own Part, we shall preserve an eternal Achnowldgment of the Fayours you have vouchfafed to shew us.

When this Ambassador went away, there arrived at Petersburgh an Adjutant-General, named Wintemberg.

whor

whom his Swedish Majesty had sent to the Czar, to notify his Accession to the Throne. This Minister had his Audience immediately, and in prefencing the Letters with which he was charged, he made a very short Speech; the Substance of which was, That the Hereditary Prince of Heffe Caffel, by the Confent of the Queen and the States of the Kingdom, was afcended the Throne of Sweden: That his Majesty had a particular Esteem for his Czarish Majesty, with whom he very earnestly defired to conclude a firm and lasting Peace, and maintain a constant Friendship, to which he was willing to contribute all that was in his Power. The Czar answered. That he heartily wished the King of Sweden Joy on his Accession, and thanked him for his Notification of it to him; and faid, that as he was always very far from being against a Peace with Squeden, he had still the fame Inclinations to it, provided his Swedish Majesty would also come to a firm Resolution on that Point. The Swedish Officer was kept for some Time at Petersburgh, that he might be Witness to the Strength of his Czarish Majesty, without the Affiftance of the Allies. His Majesty ordered him to be fhewn his Docks, Yards, Ships, and Galleys, his Palaces, and Part of his Troops; and having admitted him to a private Audience, and given him his Anfwer to the King of Sweden's Letter, ordered a Dispatch of the necessary Passports.

On the 7th of August, the Savedish Vice-Admiral approaching to reconnoitre the Fleet of his Czarish Majefly, commanded by Prince Gallicain, which was under Ameland, and not thinking the Number of Ships fo large as it was, judged it proper to attack them; and one of his Galleys coming too near the Coast, touched on a Rock, where it struck, and was taken by two Russian Galleys; as was another that ran aground. This obliged the Savedes to stand aloof; and afterwards, by the continual Firing of the Russians, to retreat, with the Loss of two Frigates taken from them, and the other two fastened on the Sand-Banks: So that there was taken from them, on this Occasion, 150 Pieces of Cannon, and 400 Sailors; 200 were killed, and 300 wounded. The four Frigates were afterwards carried in Triumph to Petersburgh; at which Ceremony, his Czarde Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 291 ish Majesty and the Czarina were present, and the Shew was exhibited with the greatest Pomp that was possible; because no Victories were so much prized by the Czar as those that he gained at Sea, which he hoped would encourage his Subjects to apply themselves to maritime Affairs. There was a Medal struck on Account of this Victory, on one Side of which was the Bust of his Majesty, and on the Reverse the Representation of a Naval Fight, with this Inscription: Prudence and Valour surmount all Obsacles. His Majesty also, to encourage his Subjects in doing their Duty, made a Present to Prince Galliczin of a Sword set with Diamonds, valued at 30,000 Florins, and distributed a Sum of Money, to the same Amount, among those Officers and Soldiers who had fignalized their Valour.

The Land Forces remained not inactive all this while. Prince Galliczin had attempted an Invasion in Sweden, as foon as the Frost broke, and advanced with his Galleys as far as Aland; from whence he fent Brigadier Famerdins, who came back without doing any Thing. However, this Expedition drew on that Side all the Attention of the Enemy, and favoured the Execution of another Defign, with which the Prince charged Brigadier Mengden, who embarked at Wasa, on the Gallies, with about 5000 Men, with whom he failed directly for the new Town of Uma in Lapland. At his Approach the Swedes immediately retired, and the Coffacks, who first landed, took four Officers and feveral Soldiers, that were in an advanced Post. The Russians afterwards set fire to the new Town, in which there were several Magazines; burnt and destroyed two Gentlemen's Country Seats; 41 Villages, containing above 1000 Houses; 17 Mills; 113 Magazines and other Buildings. After this Expedition, the Detachment returned to Wasa, loaded with Spoil, and without fuffering the least Loss. The Sawedes, on their Side, made a Descent on the Isle of Nargen, but did no great Damage there.

During these Hostilities, his Czarish Majesty, to return the Compliment he had received from the King of Saveden, stamed Adjutant General Romanzoff to go to Stockholm, to selicitate that Prince on his Accession to the Throne, to let him know how true an Esteem he had.

to.

for his Person, and how earnestly he defired to find in him the fame Inclinations to Peace that he had himfelf. Befides his Commission, he had Orders, if he found a favourable Opportunity, to propose an Exchange of Prifoners, and a Suspension of Arms for the Winter-Season. This Envoy was received at Stockholm with as much Splendor, as that of his Swediff Majesty had been at Petersburgh. When he had delivered his Commission, he was answered in the most gracious Terms. He afterwards made the particular Propositions with which he was charged to Count Horn, President of the Chancery; but without Success: For the Count answered him, that the King could not confent to an Exchange of Prisoners, till a Cartel was fettled both for the present and for the Time to come, upon which he had no Instructions. As to the Sufpenfion of Arms, the Swedes thought it needless, fince the Winter always put a Stop, as the Count faid, to all Hostilities in the North. But in this he was much mistaken; for how often has it been seen that the Russians and Savedes took Advantage of the Ice; the first to pass the Bothnick Gulf, the other to cross the Sound. The Savediff Minister added, that even if the Armistice required should be agreed to, it would be of no Use till the Preliminaries of Peace were fettled. Romanzoff had no Instructions to go fo far, but answered wifely, that the Armistice might not only give Room for Overtures of Peace, but even terminate that great Work :- adding. that another Means to contribute towards it, would be to re-establish a Correspondence of Letters between Rustia and Saveden: But he succeeded no better in this last Proposition than the two former, which plainly shewed how little Inclination that Court had for Peace. Nevertheless. M. Romanzoff had all imaginable Respect shewn to him: and as the Czar had kept M. Wirtemberg some Time at Petersburgh, the fame Honours were done in Sweden to M. Romanzoff, who always made one in the Court Parties of Pleasure.

The Season of the Year now forced Admiral Norris to think of leaving the Baltick, where it may be faid he had done much, by fuffering the Ruffians to do nothing. His Czarish Majesty, who did not doubt but this Fleet would return the Year following, and who was convinced.

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 293

by the Conduct of the Court of Saveden, that they were to be constrained to sue for Peace, employed the rest of the Year in making Preparations for a decifive Campaign; and that he might have the less to fear from the British Fleet, he endeavoured to augment his Marine; for which Reason he put upon the Stocks at once 8 or 10 Ships of the Line, of 60 or 80 Guns each; and was fo vigilant in feeing the Work carried on, that they were all ready for Service the next Summer. Being at the fame Time persuaded that the War could not last long, he turned his Thoughts on making Discoveries on the Coast of the Tartarian Sea, on establishing a good Understanding with the Emperor of China, and on bringing to Perfection the Works begun in the Mines of Siberia. Those whom he employed in these Works were able to affure his Majesty, that he had many and very rich Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper, and Lead in his Dominions; and, and by the Affays that had been made of the Ores, it was demonstrable that 30 or 40 per Cent. Profit might be got by them. His Majesty made very wife and prudent Regulations for carrying on these Works, and sent for able Workmen from England, Hungary, and Sweden, to be employed in them.

The Czar was again, at the Close of this Year, attacked with a violent Fit of the Cholick, which made his Life almost despaired of: But Heaven still preserved him to accomplish the great Work of Peace, to confirm his Conquests, and farther to establish the useful Regula.

tions he had made in his Empire.

M. Stambke, the Minister of the Duke of Holsein, had been some Time at Petersburgh. This Prince, being Son of the eldest Sister of the late King of Sweden, pretended a Right to the Crown preferably to the Princess Ulrica, who was the younger Sister; but, beside a Law which took from him all Claim to it, on Account of his Mother's having married a foreign Prince, the States of Sweden had resumed their antient Right of electing their Kings, by which that of Hereditary Succession was abolished. But the Duke of Holsein did not care to submit to this; yet saw himself set at a still greater Distance from the Throne, by the Cession which the Queen had made of the Crown to her Husband. Nevertheless, here had a Party in Saveden, of whose good Dispositions towards him he was willing to take Advantage; but had not Strength enough to afford them much Affiftance himself: And on the other Hand, the King of Denmark had taken from him the Dutchy of Slefavick, which was guaranteed to him by the King of England. In this Embarrassiment he was advised to have Recourse to the Czar, who was the Enemy of Sweden, had but little Reafon to be pleased with the King of Denmark, and had been fo much offended at the Conduct of the King of Great-Britain. M. Stambke made the most of all these Circumstances, to obtain the Protection of the Court of Russia for the Prince his Master, who waited at Breslaw to learn the Success of this Negotiation. All these Reafons, with the Compassion the Czar had for the Circumstances of this Prince, the Esteem he had for the late Duke his Father, and a Defire of repairing the Injuries done to one of his Ancestors by a Predecessor of his Majesty, made him determine very soon to afford him his Protection; and, for the first Proofs of it, he sent him 100,000 Crowns, and an Invitation to come from Breflury to Riga.

Nothing could be more happy than the Prospect of Affairs in the Beginning of the Year 1721, when all Things tended towards Peace. The Journey of Adjutant-General Romanzoff was fo far from being useless, that it may be faid to have produced the great Work. This Minister, being thoroughly informed of his Sovereign's Inclination to Peace, knew how to make it appear to Count Horn, that the Czar's most sensible Affliction was, that he should be constrained to ravage the Provinces of Sweden, to oblige the King to accept of the reasonable Terms he offered him. It is true that he rested here on general Terms: But tho' the Swedes had at first refused to grant a Suspension of Arms, or to agree to an Exchange of Prisoners; yet they afterwards kindly received Prince Mifer ki, after the Return of M. Romanzoff, with Propolitions for fettling a Cartel. This Step of his Czarish Majesty convinced the Savedish Ministry of the Sincerity of that Prince, who gaining continual Advantage over them, did not feem under the Necessity of courting his Enemies

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

Enemies to make Peace: But Peter faw, in the Midst of his Conquests, that his People wanted Peace, and was refolved to undertake any Thing to procure it for them. He thought there was nothing mean in asking for Peace, when he was endeavouring to bestow it on a Nation that flood more in need of it than himself. Prince Miserski, on his Return to Petersburgh, was immediately followed by M. Dahlman, the Swedish Adjutant General; who, under Pretence of fettling the Terms of a Cartel, took an Opportunity to speak of a Peace, and let it be understood that if his Czarish Majesty would continue the Armillice for the whole Year, the King of Saveden would readily come into it. The Czar, who had already regulated the Operations for the Campaign, apprehended that this might be only a Trap laid for him; and judged, with good Reason, that a Suspension of Arms for a whole Year would be giving fo much Time to his Enemies to take fresh Measures; and so the Peace, instead of being forwarded, might be longer delayed: And therefore he rejected the Proposition; but let the Swedills Minister know, that he was not against accepting the Mediation of France, which M. Campredon, the Minister of that Crown at Stockholm, had in some Sort offered to him. The Court of Sweden were no fooner informed of this Declaration, than they caused M. Campredon to set out for Petersburgh, to know what were the Propositions of his Czarish Majesty. This Monarch proposed to M. Campredon the same Conditions with which M. Ofterman was charged when he fent him to Stockholm, and the same that he had proposed to the King of Great-Britain. The French Minister being returned into Sweden, a Place was immediately named for the Congress: which was Niestadt, or Nieustadt, a little Town in Finland, some Leagues from Abo. The Czar himself preferred this Place to Abo, with regard to the Swedillo Ministers, who, he imagined, might not be well pleafed to fee the Preparations that were there carrying on.

It was during the Time of this Negotiation that the Czar received the agreeable News from Constantinople. that his Minister there had changed the last Treaty concluded with the Porte into a Treaty for a perpetual Peace: The Ratifications of which were immediately dispatched, of the Grand Signior's Orders to the Cham of Tartary, to ftop the Incurions of his People into the Ruffian Provinces. As to the Treaty with Sweden, the Czar could not but apprehend that the British Ministers would do what they could to oppose it: For which Reason he resolved, by a refined Stroke in Politicks, to endeavour to sow a Differition between that Nation and her Ministers; and with this View published the following Ordinance:

T is notorious in what an unjust and disobliging Manner our Resident was sent back from the Court of Great Britain; which being so sensible an Affront, it would naturally have engaged us to have made Reprisals, but that we saw very plainly, that this was done without any Regard to the Interest of England, and only in Favour of that of Hanever, for which the Ministers of Great Britain not only neglect the Friendship of foreign Powers, but even spare not their own Country. It is for this Reason, that we are unwilling any Damage should accrue from thence to the English Nation, who had no Share in this unjust Proceeding; and therefore we allow all Security to that Nation, and full Power to trade to all Parts of our Dominions.

The Plenipotentiaries on both Sides were foon after named, and ordered to repair to Niesladt. The King of Sweden named Count Liliensled and General Stromsield, and the Czar committed his Affairs to General Bruce, and the Privy-Councillor Osterman, whom he honoured with the Title of Baron.

It was about this Time, that the Czar examined into the Diforders that were crept into the Offices for the Receipt of Money, where, notwithstanding there were several 100 Inspectors, he was able to make such a Reformation, as was not only a great Ease to his People, but to gain above 100,000 Roubles a Year to the Imperial Treasury. At the same Time also, the general Tariff was prepared, which was afterwards introduced into all the Ports of Russia. But no Business more employed his Majesty's Care, than to perfect the Canal that was begun below Ladoga, and was to make a Communication between the Baltick-Sea and the River Wolga; which falling into the Caspian-Sea, he was in hopes would enable him to open a Trade with China, the Indies, and Persia, and supply them with European Commodities: But as this was a Work that required larger Sums of Money that could be well spared in a Time of War, it was one strong Motive, among others, to make him defire the Accomplishment of his pacifick Measures. the mean Time, he fent 10,000 Dragoons, and as many Calmucks, to affift in the Undertaking. Some Time before this, he had fent certain Geographers and Aftronomers to take an exact Survey of the Caspian-Sea, of which they made the Chart, which shews that Sea to be of a very different Form from what has been formerly represented by the Geographers. This Chart, with a Letter of his own, and another from his chief Physician, he fent to the Royal Academy of Sciences at Paris, by Mynheer Schoumaker, his Library Keeper, which were very gratefully received by them. The Librarian being introduced into the Academy by M. de L' Isle, the King of France's Geographer, and prefenting his Letters, they were read by M. de Fontenelle, Secretary to the Academy. After which the Marquis de Croiffy, at that Time Prefident, made a handsome Speech in the Name of all the Members, to return Thanks to his Czarish Majesty for the Honour he had done them; and it was ordered that the Chart should be carefully preserved, among the Archives of the Academy.

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 297

In the Month of April the Duke of Holstein arrived at the Russian Court, which was then at Riga; where he was received in the most gracious Manner, his Czarish Majesty promising to make his Interest his own. He was also well received by the Czarina, who arrived soon after, but had escaped a most imminent Danger in passing the Ice upon the River Aa, which broke immediately after she was got over. The Czar made some short Stay at Riga, regulating several Things, with respect to the Inhabitants of Livonia, both Nobles and Peasants. His Majesty sent, at the same Time, Orders into Courland, as well for those Troops that were already there, as for those that were expected; by which the Polanders.

05

perceived, that they were not likely to recover that Province with fo much Ease as they had hoped for.

M. Campredon, the French Minister, having passed thro' Stockholm at Petersburgh, had several Conferences with the Ministers of his Czarish Majesty, in which he omitted nothing to procure a Suspension of Arms for that Year: But for the Reason before given, the Czar would not be brought to confent to it. He was given to understand, That his Czarish Majesty's Resolution was absolutely fixed: That he would restore to Saweden all that was taken from it, except Ingria and Livonia, comprehending Esthonia, Carelia, the City of Wybourg, and the District of Helfing ford: That his Majesty would abate nothing of these Articles; but if the Savedes were willing, on these Conditions, the Conferences might begin: That they faw what was demanded on his Side, and therefore the Suspension would be useless; for if the King of Sweden would enter into a Treaty bona Fide, the Peace might be foon concluded. The Plenipotentiaries accordingly very foon repaired to Niestadt, where the Conferences were immediately begun; but not Time enough to prevent the Russian Troops from making some Progress in Saveden. For Lieutenant General Lesty, who commanded in Finland, fet fail from Aland on the 27th of May, and arrived the next Day on the Coast of Saveden, before a Place called Eschun, in the Neighbourhood of Gevel, where he landed the Troops he had on board his Gallies, confifting of 5000 regular Men, and 370 Coffacks. He marched at first along the Coast towards Suderham, and Lukwicksham, and afterwards as far as Uma, which is above 100 Swediffs Leagues, where he met with very little Resistance. He took 1 Standard, 4 Colours, 2 Pieces of Brass Cannon and 5 of Iron, 3 Trumpets, and 10 Kettle Drums. He also took and burnt 6 new Gallies, 2 Merchant Men, and 25 other Veffels; in which they found, befides other Goods, 497 Muskets, and about 4000 Ells of Linnen-Cloth. He burnt a Magazine of Arms and Ammunition; ruined a Manufactory of Muskets, 2 Iron Forges, and 13 Mills; and burnt and deftroyed 4 Towns, 509 Hamlets, 98 Parishes, 334 Barns.

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 299

This Expedition alarmed all Sweden: But the Czar, who defired nothing more than to spare the Blood of his Subjects, caused the Suspension of Arms to be published, as foon as he received Advice that his Plenipotentiaries had agreed to it. The King of Sweden having been brought to confent to the Cession of Livonia and Carelia, the Czar did not refuse certain Advantages to the Swedes, that were capable of making them some Amends for the Injuries he had done them. This Readiness on both Sides of coming into Measures with each other, foon put an End to the Conferences, by figning the following Treaty.

1. There shall be a perpetual Peace and Friendship.

2. Also a perpetual Amnesty, except for the Cossacks.

3. Hostilities shall cease within 3 Weeks after figning the Peace. 4. Sweden yields Livonia, Efthonia, Ingermanland, Part of Carelia, and of the Territory of Wybourg, the Islands of Oyfel, Dragoe, Maen, &c. The Czar restores to Sweden Part of Finland, and gives his Savedift Majesty two Millions of Rix-dollars. 5. Part of Finland shall be evacuated to the Swedes in the Space of 4 Weeks after the Ratifications. 6. The Savedes shall be permitted to buy every Year 50,000 Roubles-worth of Corn at Riga, Revel, and Wyhourg, and to transport it without paying any Duties of Export, except in fuch Years when the Harvest proves bad, or some other solid Reason hinders it. 7. The Czar will not concern himfelf with any Domestick Affairs of Saveden. 8. The Limits described by the Treaty shall be regulated by Commissiaries, after the Ratifications are exchanged. q. Livonia, Efthonia, and the Isle of Oyfel, shall have the same Privileges they enjoyed under former Governments, 10. The Exercise of Religion shall remain as formerly, except that the Greek shall be introduced. 11. Every one shall enjoy the Estates and Effects which he can prove of Right to belong to him. 12. The Confications, Inheritances, and Possessions shall be restored, except the Revenues already eschented. Those who are desirous to do Homage to the Czar may do fo, without being thereby incapacitated to ferve elfewhere. But those who shall not do Homage to the Czar, shall have Liberty to dispose of their Estates in the Space of three Years, and all Mortgages shall be paid off and discharged. 13. The Contributions shall cease forthwith in Finland; but the Russian Troops shall be supplied with Provisions, till they are arrived on the Frontiers. The Czar may carry away the Cannon, and the Inhabitants shall be obliged to surnish Horses for that Purpose. 14. The Prisoners on both Sides shall be released without Ransom, provided they pay their Debts; but such as had rather stay, shall be permitted to do so. 15. The King of Poland is included in the Treaty. 16. As for Commerce, the Swedes shall be treated on the same Foot with the Nations that are most befriended. 17. The Houses of Commerce shall be reestablished, and new ones built in the Towns that are restored.

The Swedish Plenipotentiaries endeavoured to have the King of Great Britain included in the Treaty, as Elector of Hanover; and on that Condition, the Russian Plenipotentiaries proposed that the Dukes of Holstein and Mecklembourg should be comprehended in it: But after some Debates in the first Conferences, wherein the Duke of Holstein's Affairs were mentioned, the Swedes declared they could not treat of any Thing concerning that Prince, and so rejected the Proposition; which made the Russians do the same with respect to the Elector of Hanover.

What Joy the Conclusion of this Peace gave his Czarish Majesty, may be guessed at by the Profusion with which he celebrated the Publication of it; not only at Petersburgh and Moscow, but in all the Courts where he had any Ministers. The Russian Plenipotentiaries were loaded with Favours and Prefents, nor were those of Sweden forgot; his Majesty giving 10,000 Roubles to the first, 8000 to the second, and 2000 to the Secretary of the Embassy. The News of the Peace was carried from one End of the Russian Empire to the other, with Orders to set all the Swedish Prisoners, in Siberia, and other remote Provinces, at Liberty: But his Czarish Majesty fignified to them, that as it was very likely the Squedes would disband Part of their Forces, and that perhaps they would find no Entertainment in their own Country. he was willing to give them the fame Rank in his Troops, as they had in the Service of Sweden; but that they

Chap. 3. PETER I. Czar of Museovy. 301

they should be obliged to make a public Declaration of their accepting any such Offer, that it might not be said, that he had detained them contrary to the Terms of the Treaty. His Majesty's Generosity went so far, as to give Letters of Recommendation to several of those, whose Valour and Fidelity to their King and Country he had been a Witness to; and the King of Sweden paid such regard to those Recommendations, that he raised Rear-Admiral Ebrenchild to the Rank of Admiral on that Account; and his Caarish Majesty, on the Departure of that brave Prisoner, made him a Present of his Picture set with Diamonds.

His Majesty sent Orders to the Governor of Riga, to grant a Church to the Reformed Protestants in that City, which they could never obtain in the Time of the Savedish Government; and gave them other Privileges, to encourage Foreigners of the same Communion to come and fettle there. He restored to the Livonians the Privileges they had been deprived of in the two last Reigns, and for the Defence of which the unhappy Count Patkul may be faid to have died a Martyr. He made other Ordinances, which gave the People a great Idea of the Mildness of his Government; and to such as preferred any other to his, he gave Liberty to retire to any other Place. Seventeen hundred Ruffian Prisoners were now fent back from Sweden, where great Rejoicings were made on Account of the happy Conclusion of the Peace, which, tho' dear bought, was a valuable Purchase to them.

His Czarish Majesty, on his Part, appointed the 22d of October as a Day of publick Thanksgiving for the Peace; but a few Days before he went to the Senate, and made a Speech to the following Purport: "That fince it had pleased God to heap so many Blessings on him during the last burthensome War, and at length to grant him a Peace so glorious, he thought it but a Piece of Justice in him to do the Nation some Favour, in acknowledgment of the Mercies he had received at the Hand of God; and that he could not better acquit himself of this Duty, than by publishing a general Amnesty throughout the Empire." The Senate, having most humbly thanked his Czarish Majesty for his paternal Tenderness, Orders were immediately dispatched to all Parts of the Empire, to set all Persons at Liberty confined in Prisons, or on board the Gallies, to the 22d of October inclusively.

On the 20th of October, the Senate, after Deliberation with the Clergy, refolved, in the Name of the whole Empire, " Most humbly to thank his Majesty for his Fatherly Care and Pains, with which he had applied himself to the Advancement of the Happiness of the Empire, ever fince he had held the Reins of Government; but especially during the last War, in which, by his fole Direction, he had put his Dominions into fo formidable a Condition, and acquired the Nation for much Glory; and to intreat him that he would be pleafed, as a Token of his Subjects Acknowledgment for the fame, to accept the Titles of Father of his Country, Emperor of all Russia, and Peter the Great." For this Purpose, Prince Menzikoff was fent to his Majesty with a Letter from the Senate, praying him " to accept those Titles, and to give them Leave to offer them to his Majefty, on the Day of the Celebration of the Peace in the Church, by a folenin Speech." His Majesty sent Word by the Prince, That he should be glad to speak to some of the Members of the Senate about it. And accordingly the Senators, accompanied by the Vice-President of the Synod, waited on him, and renewed their Request. He feemed a long Time in Suspence, whether or no he should accept their Offer, and, for certain Reasons, defired to be excused: But the Senators very earnestly, repeating their Instances to the contrary, he at length condescended to accept those Titles.

On the Day appointed for folemnizing the Thankf-giving for the Peace, their Czarish Majesties went in the Morning to the great Cathedral; where, after the Liturgy, the Treaty of perpetual Peace between his Majesty and the Crown of Sweden was read in the Presence of the Ministers of the Emperor, France, Prussia, and Holland. Then the Archbishop of Pleskow made an Harangue, in which he rehearfed all the glorious Exploits of his Majesty, and the Favours he had heaped upon his Subjects during his Reign; adding, that he justly deserved the Appellations of Father of his Country, and the Great.

Chap. 3. Peter I. Czar of Muscovy. 303

Great. When his Harangue was ended, the Senate advanced to his Majesty in a Body, and the Count Gollofkin, Great Chancellor, made the following Speech to him in the Russian Language, in the Name of all the States of the Empire.

IT is only owing to your Majesty's illustrious Actions, and the indefatigable Care with which you have always applied yourself to the Affairs of State and War. that we are delivered out of the Darkness of Ignorance, and fet upon the Theatre of the World in Sight of the whole Universe: So that we, who before were Nothing, are now become Something, and are in the fame Rank and Interest with the polite Nations. Where shall we find Words duly to exalt your Majesty's Merits, who hath procured us a Peace fo advantageous to your Empire? But as we know your Majesty does not care for such Panegyricks, we will suppress them. However, left we should be taxed with Ingratitude, we take the Liberty, in the Name of all the States of the Empire, most humbly to intreat your Majesty that you will please to accept the Titles of PETER THE GREAT, FATHER OF THE COUNTRY, AND EM-PEROR OF ALL RUSSIA. The Title of EMPEROR Was granted some Ages ago to your Majesty's illustrious Anceftors, by the Great Roman Emperor Maximilian I. and feveral Powers do actually give it to your Majesty at this Time. The Title of GREAT, which your Majesty hath acquired by your Heroick Actions, hath been already given to you in feveral publick Writings: And as for the Title of FATHER OF THE COUNTRY, we thought fit to give it to your Majesty, as being our Father, whom God hath been pleased to grant us in his great Goodness, without any Merit of our own. We give it you after the Example of the antient Greeks and Romans, who used to give those Appellations to such of their Monarchs as rendered themselves famous by glorious Exploits, and by Acts of Goodness to their People. Therefore we think ourselves obliged, by your Majesty's fatherly Tenderness, most humbly to offer you awhat is already yours without it, and what belongs to you by full Right and Title; intreating, that you would be pleased to favour us according to your known Magnanimity, and most graciously to accept what we now dedicate to your Majesty.

Then the whole Senate thrice repeated, Long live PETER the Great, Father of his Country, and EMPEROR of all Russia; and the whole Assembly testify'd their Applause, by the Sound of Trumpets and Kettle-Drums, At the same Time the Cannon were discharged from the Ramparts, the Admiralty, and 120 Galleys that arrived the fame Day with 23,000 Foot-Soldiers, who had been till then in Finland. This was followed by a Salvo of the fmall Arms of some Batallions of the Guards, and of the Troops that were on board the faid Gallies. and other small Vessels. His Imperial Majesty having answered the Speech, the Senate, making a profound Reverence, gave Thanks to God in Prayer, which was followed by a fecond Salvo of the Cannon and small Arms. A Chapter was then read out of one of the Gospels, and the Metropolitan of Rezan, kneeling, recited the Lord's Prayer with a loud Voice, and the Service ended. Their Imperial Majesties were faluted going out of the Church, with the Acclamations of the People, and a third Discharge of the great and small Arms.

After this, the Senate went in a Body to congratulate the Empress and the Imperial Princesses; who very graciously thanked them. The Emperor and Empress went from thence to the Hall of the Senate, where the Duke of Holstein waited with his Retinue, and all the foreign Ministers, every one of whom congratulated them on their Entrance into the Hall. Then Prince Menzikoff. Count Apraxin, and the Secretary of the Senate, declared the Advancement of feveral Land and Sea-Officers: After which the Affembly fat down to Table, where above 1000 Persons of both Sexes were entertained. The Conduits in the Street ran with Wine: An Ox was roafted whole, and stuffed with Fowls for the Populace; and the Night concluded with Illuminations and Fire-Works. But the Rejoicings continued at Petersburgh for 15 Days, in which was one of those grand Masquerades that the whole Court had a Part in, and which was repeated every Day for 5 or 6 Times.

CHAP. IV.

The Czar assumes the Title of Emperor, and requires it to be given him by foreign Powers. Trade effectually removed from Archangel to Petersburgh. The Bible translated into the Russian Language. The Emperor makes a triumphant Entry into Moscow. Obliges his People to take an Oath, that they will approve of the Person be shall appoint for his Successor. Grounds of the War with Perfia. His Majesty prepares for an Expedition on the Caspian Sea. Makes several Regulations before his Departure. Calls a Synod. Disperses a Manifesto. Journal of his Expedition to Derbent. Good Offices of the French Ambaffador at the Porte. Proceedings against Baron Schafiroff. The Emperor returns to Petersburgh. Reviews his Navy, Gives Ships to feveral Cities. The Duke of Holstein demands the Title of Royal Highness. Consecration of the Little Grandsire. Reception of the Persian Ambassador. Taking of Baku. Discontent of the Turks. A Treaty between Russia and the Porte.

HE Vice Chancellor Schafiroff had Orders to acquaint all the Ministers of foreign Princes, that the Title of Emperor, which his Majesty had been requested to take upon him, was what had been formerly given to his Predecessors by the several Powers of Europe; and shewed them at the same Time a Treaty, a Copy of which his Majesty had caused to be printed at Petersburgh, between the Emperor Maximilian I. and Bafile Iwanowitz, whereby it appeared, that the faid Emperor stiled the Great Prince of Russia EMPEROR and Dominator of all Ruffia. The Subject of the Treaty is an Alliance between those two Monarchs, against Sigismund, who was elected King of Poland in Opposition to the Emperor Maximilian. This Piece was looked upon not only as a Proof that the Title of EMPEROR could not be denied the Czar, but that also the Title of Sovereign of all Russia, which the Poles would not own, had been given him by a Prince who stood Candidate for the Crown of Poland. His

His Majesty, not contented with the Declaration made to the foreign Ministers at Petersburgh, caused his own Ministers abroad to demand it of the Powers to whom they were fent. Some of these consented to it without any Difficulty, and fome waited till others had shewn the Example. The King of Pruffia, the States-General, and the Grand Signior, were the readiest to acknowledge his new Title; the Ambassador of the first making a set Speech on that Occasion. But the King of Denmark had not the fame Complaifance. Perhaps he feared by that to authorize the Demand his Imperial Majesty had made, that all Ruffian Ships should pass the Sound Custom-free. M. Bestuckef, his Minister at Copenhagen, had made preffing Inflances on that Head: But was answered, that the Privilege and Custom of the Sound was an antient Prerogative always belonging to the Crown of Denmark; wherefore the Czar could not infift justly upon obtaining an Exemption, which his Danish Majesty could by no Means agree to. At the fame Time that this was in Agitation, the Russian Monarch, who was always intent on whatever could promote the Trade of his Subjects, contrived a new Method for preferving his thips from rotting, and keeping them in good Repair without any Charge; and that was, to allow the trading Cities of his Dominions a certain Number of Ships, for carrying on their Commerce, upon Condition that the Merchants should fit them out at their Charges. By this Disposition the City of Riga was to have 10 Ships, and the other Towns in Proportion.

The Emperor having found his Defign of transferring the Commerce of Archangel to Peterfburgh impracticable, during the Continuance of the War; now all the Obstacles were removed by the Peace of Neisladt, he renewed the Orders he had formerly given for that Purpose. The Merchants could not help murmuring at this Injunction; but his Majesty made them amends in some Sort, by ordering the Commissioners of Trade to prepare them convenient Store-Houses and Lodgings. This Regulation was followed by another very different, but worthy of the sincere Piety of this great Monarch. Being persuaded of the many Evils that accompany Error and Superstition, and of the great Advantages to be drawn from the pure Fountain of true Religion, he thought that one of the first Uses he ought to make of the Leisure he now enjoyed, should be to procure to his People, plunged by the Remissiness of their Clergy into the most profound Ignorance in Matters of Religion, the Lights which might be received from the Holy Scriprures: For which Reason he caused the BIBLE to be printed at Amsterdam in Holland, in fuch a Manner, that every one might write, at the Side of each Verfe, fuch Notes as should be made by certain Divines chosen for that Purpose. He ordered these Books to be fold at a low Price, and that every Father of a Family should have at least one Exemplar. He likewise commanded all the Clergy in his Dominions to preach, for the future, after the Method used in the polite Parts of Europe, and to advance nothing but what was conformable to the Scriptures.

After having made fo many ufeful Regulations, his Majesty resolved to go and share the publick Joy with his Subjects at Moscow, where it was likewise necessary to reform fome Things. As his Majesty was desirous to enter this antient City in Triumph, and as the People we apprized of his Intentions, most magnificent Preparations were made for the fame. His Majesty went from Petersburgh on the 21st of December, 1721, followed by the Empress, the whole Court, and all the foreign Ministers. He arrived at Moscow on the 25th; but did not enter the City till the 29th, that every Thing might be got ready. On the Day appointed, he put himself at the Head of the Preobrazinski Regiment of Guards, as their Colonel, being preceded by a Company of Grenadiers, and followed be 2 Lieutenant-Colonels of the Guards. Afterwards marched 4 Majors, followed by 8 Captains in the first Rank, and 8 Captain-Lieutenants in the fecond. After these came 16 Colours, carried in two Ranks. The rest of the Officers were posted near their Companies, according to their Stations. The Preobrazinski Regiment was followed by the second Regiment of Guards, which marched in the fame Order, and then by 4 other Regiments.

The Emperor being arrived at the first triumphal Arch, he was received with the Sound of Trumpets, Drums, and a Discharge of the Artillery. When he came to the [econd fecond triumphal Arch, he was complimented by the Archbishop of Novogorod, Vice-President of the Synod, at the Head of the fecular and regular Clergy. The Emperor received this Compliment very graciously, and diverted himself for some Hours with hearing Concerts of Vocal and Instrumental Musick, performed by divers young Students, who fang in various foreign Languages, in Presence of the Duke of Holsein, the Senators, and all the Generals. The Words of this Mufick were the first Airs with Notes to them that were ever feen printed in Ruffia. After this his Majesty proceeded to the third triumphal Arch, erected by Order of Prince Menzikoff; and after having stopped there a while, to fatisfy the Curiofity of the Populace, he continued his March towards the fourth triumphal Arch, erected by the Magiftrates. There he was received by the Prince Troubifkoi, Prefident of the Magistracy, and by the whole Body of the Magistrates, accompanied by a great Number of eminent Merchants. His Majesty declared to them his great Satisfaction, and affured them of his Protection.

This Entry was followed by Feafts, Balls, and other Divertions: Notwithstanding which, his Imperial Majesty held frequent Councils about the Affairs of State; and being defirous to fettle the Succession upon a Prince who might follow his Maxims, (his only Son Peter dying almost * 3 Years before, in the 5th Year of his Age) he thought fit to give publick Notice, on the 23d of February, 1722, by Sound of Trumpet, that all Officers, Civil and Military, all natural-born Subjects, and foreign Merchants, inhabiting within the Capital of Moscow, should repair the next Day to the Castle-Church; where, as many as were in Town being affembled, a Proposal they little expected was made to them, and afterwards distributed to each Person in Print: "That it was his Imperial Majesty's Pleasure, that every Man should swear, and give it under his Hand, that he will not only approve the Choice his faid Majesty shall make of a Successor to the Empire, but moreover acknowledge the Person his Majesty shall propose for that End, as Emperor and Sovereign." An Order was likewife published a few Days after at Petersburgh, requiring the Magistrates, and all other Persons, to subscribe the same Declaration; and all the Grandees of the Empire were commanded to repair to Moscow, to subscribe also upon Pain of Death, and Confiscation of their Estates, except those of the Kingdoms of Astracan and Siberia, who living at too great a Distance from the Court, were allowed to subscribe before their respective Governors. All People very readily took the Oath required, and eagerly pressed to subscribe to the Will of the Emperor, well affured that he would make Choice of no one but who was worthy to succeed him: But they were in the Dark as to the Name of the Person, tho' most Men believed it was Prince Naraskin, a near Relation to the Emperor, who had lived some Years at Amsterdam, where he learned the Mathematicks, Navigation, and the Art of Ship-Building; and from thence had gone into England, France, Italy, and Germany, and continued in those several Parts a sufficient Time to learn their Languages, Customs, and Policy. Every Body allowed that he had a great Genius, and all the Qualities to be wished for in a Prince; and withal, that he was fo well convinced of the Wildom of the Measures the Czar had taken, that no Body was more proper to purfue the fame Views, and perfect what that Prince had fo gloriously begun.

^{*} On the 23d of February, 1719.

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 309

The Act of Succession declared several Motives, which had induced the Emperor to take this Resolution. His Majesty declared, that both Scripture and Reason obliged a Prince to exclude a Person who is either incapable of governing a great Nation, or has such vicious Inclinations, that there may be Reason to fear he would be the Tyrant of his People: That he was so entirely persuaded of this Duty, that if the Person he designed for his Successor should forget himself upon that Account, grow proud, vicious, and insolent, and in short, did not answer his Expectation, he would exclude him, and chuse another more worthy.

This Point fettled, his Majesty prepared for new Conquests, which the Peace he had just concluded with Saveden gave him an Opportunity to make. Hussein IV. had been Schah or King of Persia ever since the Year 1694, when when he fucceeded his Father Shach Solyman III. He was an effeminate Prince, brought up in the Haram, which is the same as the Seraglio in Turky : Ignorant of the Art of Reigning, he was a King only in Name, whilft the Grand Vizier had all the Power. During the Time he was on the Throne of Persia, the Tartars, the Moguls, and the Atabs, made several Irruptions into his Provinces, and were only driven thence by the Force of his Money, which had constant Charms to draw them into fresh Invasions. It was of this Prince that the Czar had obtained a free Paffage for the Ruffian Caravans to China, and with whom the last Treaty of Commerce was concluded.

Candabar is an important City on the Side of Mogoliftan; the Capital of a large Province, inhabited by a foreign Nation, which the famous Tamerlane transported thither formerly from Schirvan, anciently the Great Albania, from whence the People retained the Name of Agbvans. This City, and its Inhabitants, had their particular Princes, Vaffals to the King of Perfia, till the Time of Schub-Sefi, who forced Alimerdan-Kon, Prince of Candahar, to put it under the Protection of the Mogul, to avoid his own Death; and it was not recovered till the Year 1650: Since which Time, Candahar and the Aghwans were put under the Government of some Persian Lord. The last was Georgi-Kan, Prince of Georgia, whom Huffein Schab fent as an Exile to govern Candahar. There was at that Time in the City a Man named Myrr-Weis, who was a Chielentar, or Gatherer of the Tribute. He exercised this Employment with a Difinterestedness and Lenity, that gained him the Affections of all Sorts of People. He possessed great Wealth, which he made use of to do good Offices. Prince Georgi-Kan no] fooner perceived this Management, than he imagined there was fome Defign in it, and informed the Court of his Sufpicions. Myrr-Weis was fent for to Ispahan, where his fine Parts enabled him foon to make many Friends, and to discover the Weakness of a Court quite immersed in Pleasures. He found Means to be sent back to Canda. bar with some Authority, where he was no sooner returned, but he affaffinated Georgi-Kan, and forced the Agbroans.

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

Aghvans to revolt. Thus he raifed himself to the Sovereign Power, which he preserved till his Death in 1717, without the Court of Persia's being able to reduce them to Obedience. He was succeeded by his Brother, whose Name is unknown; but who, being pacifick in his Nature, endeavoured to persuade the Grandees to make Peace with Schab Hussein, without Esfect. While he was labouring to bring this about, he was assafissinated in his Chamber by Myrr-Maghmud, his Nephew, and Son of Myrr-Weis, who was then but 18 Years of Age. It was this Myrr-Maghmud, known in Europe by the salfe Name of Myrr-Weis, who caused a Revolution in Persia, the most association that is to be met with in History.

He began to augment his Forces by constraining the Aghvans of the Provinces of Hasaria to take his Part. There is no Occasion for giving a particular Account of all the Battles fought by Myrr-Maghmud, till he made himself Master of Kirman, the Capital of a fine Province; which, with Ispahan and Candabar, make a Triangle. Huffein-Schah now began to confider what might be the Confequences of this Revolt, against which he had not made use of all the Forces in his Power. He gave the Command of his Army to Lufti-Ali-Kan, Brother-in-Law to the Athemat-Doulet, or Prime Minifter. This Man was an experienced Officer. who first shewed the Agbvans that they were to be beaten, and hardly appeared before Kirman, which the Rebels had taken by the Treachery of the Gaurs, but he retook that important Place, and chased Myrr-Maghmud even to the Walls of Candahar, which he would have reduced, had he had necessary Provisions. He would also have given a good Account of the Revolters next Year, if, during the Time that he affembled his Army under Chiras, his Enemies had not found Means to blacken him and his Brother-in-Law, and render him odious to the weak Huffein, who, without examining into any Thing, caused the Eyes of his Prime Minister to be pulled out, and his General to be put under an Arrest, though they were both innocent of all the Crimes that were laid to their Charge. The Lofs of thefe too great Men first raised the Fortune of Myrr-Magbaud, and was the Ruin of Schah-Huffein, and all Persia. After the Differace of Lufti-Ali-Kan, Myrr-Mayhmud left Candabar, retook Kirman, and making himself Allies in all the Places round about him, advanced towards Ilpahan with 50 or 60,000 Fighting Men. The Revolt of the Aghwans fet a fatal Example, that was foon followed by others, especially the Lesgians, a People about Mount Caucasus, on the West of the Caspian Sea; who seeing the Diforders which the Revolt of Myrr-Maghmud had caused, came down from their Mountains, entered Schirvan, pillaged the Country, and took Szamachi, where they put all to the Sword, and among the rest 300 Ruffians, who were come thither on Affairs of Trade, and whose Effects they also seized, amounting to above a Million of Money.

Whilst this passed in the North of Persta, Myrr-Maghmud made daily Progress towards the South. It would be superfluous to relate all that was done by this new Cromquell, in lefs than a Year, always under the Pretence of bringing to Reason the Enemies of the Schab, to whom he constantly gave such false Accounts, as engaged him to put to Death his best Friends. length, with the Alcaron in one Hand, and his Scymetar in the other, he cried aloud for nothing but luflice, and the Destruction of Hereticks. He came even to the Gates of Ispahan, where, taking off the Mask, he attacked the Schab himself, and obliged him to declare him his first Minister, and Protector of Persia. It was necessary that the Reader should know thus much of those Facts which were the Reasons for the Russian Emperor's carrying his Arms into Persia. The Russian Merchants, pillaged and massacred by the Rebel Lesgians, and the Caravan from China treated in the same Manner by the Ulbecks, were likewise powerful Motives to induce the Emperor to fend an Ambassador into Pesira, to carry the Complaints of these Outrages either to Schab-Huffein, or to Myrr-Maghmud himfelf,

The Rullian Ambassador found Persia in Confusion: Therefore he went directly to the Camp of Myrr-Magbmud, whom Victory obsequiously followed. He had Audience immediately, and declared the Subject of his Commission; remonstrating, that as his Troops, joined with the Ufbecks, had massacred the Subjects of the Emperor, and robbed them of the Treasures that they had brought out of China, the Emperor of Ruffia could not but look upon fuch a Violence as contrary to the Law of Nations, and therefore had a Right to demand a proper Satisfaction. Myrr-Maghmud heard these Complaints, and answered the Ambassador, that for himself, he desired nothing more than to maintain a good Understanding with the Czar, who had been described to him as a Prince as ingenious and prudent, as he was valiant and warlike; but that he would advise him, if he intended to fend any more Caravans to China, to make an Alliance with the Tartars, and to stipulate for the Liberty of passing thro' their Country, or elfe to fend a good Body of Troops to efcort those Caravans: And that, for his Part, he could not prescribe Laws to the Usbecks, his Allies.

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

As foon as the Emperor was informed of this infolent Answer, he gave Orders in all the Eastern Provinces of his Dominions, to affemble his Troops: He armed the Coffacks and the Calmucks, and built at Aftracan, and along the Wolga, Barks, Galleys, and fuch other necesfary Veffels, as he judged he should have Occasion for in an Expedition on the Caspian Sea. Besides the Contempt with which Myrr-Magbaud had fent back his Ambassador, he had regard to the firm Establishment of a useful Commerce, which he always considered as the Basis of the Grandeur of his Empire, and the great Spring of all his Enterprizes. It was with this View, that he built the City of Petersburgh; with this View he preserved the Provinces of Livonia and Carelia; with this View he fet out upon his Travels; and with this View he had founded the Caspian Sea.

The Pretext which the Emperor made use of, to examine this Sea with fo much Exactness, was, that he might discover the Mouth of the River Daria, and go up to its Source: For this River bringing much Gold with its Stream, he thought he should be able to discover Mines of that Metal, over which the River passed, if it was not brought from the Fountain-Head itself. Those who were charged with this Commission, not only brought back Gold, but reported that when they went alhore, and were got about 150 Leagues to the diron.

North-East, they discovered a great Stone Building half covered with Sand; and that entering it, th Presses of a black hard Sort of Wood, contain 2000 Volumes, bound in the Form of large which they intended to have brought with the the People of the Country opposed it, for Fear Structure, which they looked upon as a facre ment, should be profaned: Nevertheless, th wites found Means to convey away 3 Volumes, wh brought to the City of Petersburgh. These Bo large Sheets of a very thick Paper, Supposed to of Cotton, or the Bark of Trees, laid over w Varnishes, one blue and the other black. The ters feemed well shaped, were not joined togeth were painted in white. The Lines were writt zontally; but being all of an equal Length, it c be determined whether they ran from the Lef Right, or from the Right to the Left. Though not known from what Nation those Characters rived, there was Ground to believe they came Calmucks and Moguls, to the Westward of Chi cause the Country of the Calmucks, in the 13 and 15th Centuries, was the Centre of two la pires, under the Successors of Ginghiskan and Tax among which Princes there were some very Befides the Discovery of this Library, the Peasan Neighbourhood produced feveral Statues in Braf they had found in the Middle of the Woods, in t ing-Places of the Calmucks, some of which the posited in his own Cabinet. Hence it is easy to that, altho' Myrr-Maghmud had not behaved with folence he did, his Majesty would never have y Pretence to have transported his Army to the of Persia, which he was now resolved to co in Person, and which confished of above 100,0 among whom were 33,000 of those Troops wl been in every Campaign during the War with Sa

His Majetly, before he left Mofeow, having be feized with a violent Fit of the Cholick, had, of an Accident, caused a Will, written with Hand, and appointing his Successor, to be placed the Records of the Empire: He changed the P.

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 315

of the greatest Part of the Colleges, established a Council of Regency, in which Prince Menzikoff prefided, and made many other necessary Regulations. He also convoked a General Synod, all the Members of which obliged themselves to declare their most fincere Sentiments. according to their Knowledge, to conform to the Regulations which should be there made. They swore in the most solemn Manner, that they would acknowledge themselves to be the faithful Subjects and Servants of the Emperor Peter the First; and after him, of whomfoever his Majesty should declare his Successor in his Will. Having thus caused himself to be acknowledged Sovereign Pontiff of the Ruffian Church, and of Confequence first President of the Synod, he opened it, declaring in general Terms, the Motives that induced him to establish that Assembly. He proceeded to enumerate many Abuses, and to shew the Necessity of having them remedied; and to remove the Cause, by lopping off from the Service of the Church, fuch Priests and Monks as had introduced or encouraged them; forbidding any Person to be admitted to the Priesthood for the Time to come, who had not Qualities requifite for it, whose Life was not exemplary, and who was not as capable as defirous to undeceive the People. To this End, he ordered the Establishment of Seminaries in the capital Cities of Russia, as there were in other Christian Countries. He caused an Enquiry to be made into the Revenues of the Church, which were found to be very rich. But the Common People feemed to be much displeased, that the little Chapels were all abolished, and the Images that flood in Niches therein, exposed in the Streets.

The Nobility of the lower Order having made Complaints of their being oppressed by those of higher Rank, his Majesty, before he set out on his Expedition, established an High-Commission Court, to examine into those Grievances. At Length the Emperor and Empress of Russia went from Moscow, on the 24th of May, for Colomna, with Design to continue their Voyage to Astracan by Water. The Grand-Admiral Appraxim, Lieutenant-General Buturlin, Prince Trubeskoi, the Hospodar Druetrius Cantemir, and the Privy-Councillor Tolstoi, were gone before. It was at Colomna that the Envey of the States-General come to notify to his Majesty the Reso-Jution he had received from their High-Mightinesses, by which they recognized his Title of Emperor. He made his Acknowledgment to the Minister, and declared to him in Return the Orders he had given, that the Ships of Holland should be expedited perferably to those of all other Nations.

While this Monarch was going to begin a War at fo great a Distance, his Fleet and Troops did not remain idle on the Side of Poland and Prussia. Admiral Gordon put to Sea with the Fleet, while the Troops affembled in Courland, Livonia, and the Ukrain; not with the View of undertaking any Thing, but to check the Defigns that any neighbouring Princes might have in the Emperor's Absence.

- The Turks were no fooner informed of the Preparations that were making in the Eastern Provinces of the Russian Empire, but they took Umbrage at them. Bashaws who commanded on the Frontiers of Persia, gave Advice to the Parte, that the Emperor of Ruffia had formed a Project to Subdue the Province of Georgia, in which Case above 400,000 Musfulmans would fall into Slavery; and that it was easy to foresee that the chief View of that Prince, was to make himfelf Mafter of the Caspian Sea. The Grand Vizier made these Suspicions known to the Russian Minister at Constantinople, and fent an Aga to his Imperial Majesty, to penetrate into his Defigns. The Emperor, upon this, informed the Porte of the insolent Behaviour of the Rebel Myrr-Maghmud. But the better to make his Intentions known to the Turks and Perfians, he caused a Manifesto to be published, and distributed all along the Borders of the Caspian Sea, before he began his Expedition; setting forth, "That he did not come with an Intention to reduce any of the Provinces of Persia to his Obedience, but only to maintain the lawful Possessor of them on his Throne, and to defend him against the Tyranny of Myrr-Maghmud and his Tartars, and from the Mischiefs by them committed within the Russian Empire." The Schab Huffein, drove from his Capital by Myrr-Maghmud, had indeed fent three Expresses to his Imperial Majesty, implore his Affistance, on Conditions too advanChap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

tageous to the Russians, for so wise a Prince as Peter to neglect.

July the 29th the whole Fleet fet fail, to the Number of 274 large Veffels. On the 30th, it arrived at the Mouth of the Volga, and on the 31st, at Tschetyre-Burgonoi. August the 4th, at 9, it came to an Anchor at the Mouth of the River of Terki. The same Day Lieutenant Lapachia was fent to the Chefcal of Terki, with Manifesto's printed in the Turkish Language. On the 6th News came from Brigadier Wetteran, that he had beaten a Body of 5000 Men who were come out of Andreoff; and that afterwards he had burnt their City, in which were about 300 Houses. The Ships drew near, on the 7th, to the Mouth of the River of Agrachan; and on the 8th, the Admiral made the Signal for landing the Troops, All the Infantry got to the Shore, and encamped about Noon, notwithstanding the Difficulties they met with. On the 16th early, the whole Body of Infantry began their March towards Tarku. At three in the Asternoon, on the 17th, the Army came to the Passage at the River Soulake; they made two Ferries, and towards Evening the Governors of Gorski and Axay came to wait upon the Czar. The first brought 600 Waggons for the Baggage, and 150 Oxen for the Soldiers Subfillence, befides three fine Persian Horses, with rich Furniture, for his Majefty: The fecond brought 100 Oxen for the Soldiers, and 6 Persian Horses for the Czar.

Being arrived on the 23d within 5 Miles of Tarku, the Cbefcal came out to meet them, and conducted them to the City. At 3 Miles Distance from it they saw the Ruins of a great City, which extended from the Mountains to the Sea-side. Letters came on the 26th from the Governor of Derbent, and other Officers of that City, acquainting them, that they had received with great Satisfaction the Czar's Manifesto; expressing their Joy at his Arrival, and affuring, that they would look upon all such of their Inhabitants to be Traitors, who should oppose his Majesty's Troops. On the 28th, the Army passed the River Manas, and afterwards that of Boinac-Alzi, upon which they found a Bridge of Stone. They saw on the Mountains of this Place several Foundations, which were probably the Remains of an antient City

At Night they came to Old Boinac; and on the 29 encamped near the River Nitzi, in Sultan Underich's De minions. The next Day three Coffacks were fent to the Inhabitants, to require them to fend a Deputation in order to a Conference: But the Guide being returned reported they had been very ill received, and that the three Coffacks had made their Escape. At 3 in the Afternoon the Sultan came and attacked the Coffacts, and afterwards advanced towards the Dragoons; who put them presently to Flight, killed 600, and took 20 Prifoners. The Sultan's Refidence was plundered and burnt: 6 other Villages had likewise the same Fate, and there they found the three Coffacks inhumanly massacred; upon which the Prisoners were put to the Rack. There were among them some Persons of Distinction; who declared, that they did not know the Cause of that Cruelty, but faid it was done by Order of the Sultan himfelf.

The Enemy's Number was 10,000.

September the 1st, 21 of the Prisoners were put to Death, by Way of Reprifal, for the Murder of the Coffacks. Another Prisoner had his Nose and Ears cut off, and was fent to carry a Letter to the Enemy, reproaching them for their Cruelty. On the 2d, the Army encamped near the River of Darback. A Letter came from the Inhabitants of Baku, fignifying their joy at the Czar's Arrival in the Province of Schirvan, atdently defiring to commit themselves to his Majesty's Protection. They drew near on the 3d to the Gardens of Derbent; and the Governor coming out to meet the Czar, at his Entrance prefented him with the Keys. The Army marched through the City, under a triple Salvo of all the Artillery; and afterwards encamped by the Sea Side. They found in Derbent 100 old Iron Guns, and 60 Brass, with a great Quantity of Ammunition. The Russians were received with as much Joy in this City, as if they had come to deliver their own Troops from some Siege. His Majesty staid there some Time, to give the necessary Orders; while the Army marched towards the River Millukenti, 15 Wersts from Derbent, without meeting an Enemy. But the Provisions which they had brought with them being almost spent, and it being impossible to have any brought to them by the Caspian Sea,

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 319

in a Season so far advanced, his Majesty made this River the Boundary of his Conquest for this Year, and, having left a strong Garrison in Derbent, returned to Astracan. On the 25th of September, the Emperor detached 10,000 Cossacks and 4000 Calmucks, to ravage the Territories of the Persian Usmei, and Sultan Mahmut of Utemischof, by Way of Reprisal for their harrassing the Russian Troops in their March. The next Day the Cossacks and Calmucks joining the Bougnakes, immediately sell into their Territories, and after having entirely routed them, put a great Number of the Rebels to the Sword, and took near 400 Prisoners.

During this Expedition, Myrr-Maghmud did all that was in his Power to cross the Designs of the Russians. He had engaged the neighbouring Turtars to harrass them in their March, and was advanced himfelf towards Ghilan with a Body of Troops, which arrived too late for the Czar to engage with them : But the Generals whom he had left at Derbent, having got together the Calmucks, Coffacks, and Tartars, that were near, and . supporting them with their regular Troops, fell with fuch Fury upon the Army of the Rebels, that they were foon put to Flight. Some of the Chams, who had feemed to fubmit, changed their Conduct, as foon as they thought the Emperor at a Distance; others fought the Protection of the Russians; and all Things continued in a fluctuating Condition. Mean while their Majesties being returned to Moscow, entered that City in Triumph, every Body meeting their victorious Sovereign with the loudest Acclamations.

The Power of the Russians, which was shewn in subduing so great a Part of the Country, and especially Derbent, the Key of Persia, began somewhat to dismay Myrr-Maghmud. He had a great Number of Enemies in the Bosom of Persian, who now saw through his Hypocrify; and the Persian, always faithful to their Kings, could not forgive his having dethroned and drove away Hussian. In short, this Rebel could not conside in his Tartans, who disapproved his Ambition: He therefore sent an Ambassador to the Grand Signior, to whom he was to remonstrate, that both the Glory and Religion of the Mussians were interested in opposing the Russian Conquests; that as the Czar had already subdued Dagestan and Schirvan, he would certainly the next Summer throw his Arms into Georgia, where there were several Christian Princes who would lend him a helping Hand; and laftly, that he had been informed, that the Russians entered Persia at the Defire of Hussein. who had promifed to yield to them all they should conquer on the Borders of the Caspian Sea. The Persian Ambaffador acquitted himfelf well of this Commission, and especially as he was charged with magnificent Prefents for the Ministers of the Porte. The Fanizaries and the common People had, for a long Time, breathed nothing but War; the Mufti was a declared Enemy to the Ruffians; old Dowlet-Gerbas, just fet upon the Throne of the Crimea, defired nothing more than an Opportunity of shewing the Hatred he bore them: There was only the Grand Vizier who was for Peace, and he dared not express himself openly, for Fear of irritating the opposite Party; for which Reason, while Preparations were making for War, he fent an Ambaffador to the Emperor of Ruffia, to be informed of his Defigns. The Emperor answered, that the Porte had approved of his having Recourse to Arms, to take Vengeance for the Injuries done to him and his Subjects, by Myrr-Maghmud and his Allies; that the Ruffians had undertaken nothing against the Dominions of his Highness; and, in a Word, that he was fincerely difposed to a faithful Observation of the last Treaty of Peace.

But notwithstanding the Grand Signior seemed well statisfied for the present; yet, that all the Blame might be laid on the Czar, if a War should ensue, the Grand Vizier caused a Manisesto to be published, and communicated to the foreign Ministers, declaring his Resolution to support Flagi Damit, the Prince of Dagestan, who had been driven out of his Territories by the Czar, and had put himself under the Protection of the Porte. The Grand Signior also, to shew that he really intended to declare War with Russia, caused the Inclinations of the Emperor of Germany to be sounded, and an Enquiry to be made, whether he was under any Engagements, in ease of a Rupture, to take Arms in Favour of the Russian.

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

fians. On this Occasion the Emperor Charles did a very feasonable Service to Peter, by affuring the Turk, that his Interests were so strongly united to those of the Emperor of Ruffia, that if he was attacked, he should be obliged to march to his Affistance. The Grand Vizier made his Use of this, to moderate the Precipitation of those, who had already prepared a Declaration of War: But nothing went farther towards obliging the Sultan to renounce his Design, than the good Offices of the Marquis de Bonac, the Ambassador of France, who represented to the Porte, That the Sultan had no Reason to complain of the Emperor of Ruffia, fince he had not carried the War to the Frontiers of Perfia, but with his good Liking, and to revenge fuch Infults as no fovereign Prince could fuffer with Impunity: That he had acted in nothing contrary to the Treaty of Peace subfifting between him and the Porte: That the Cham Flagi Damit, who had put himself under the Protection of his Highness, was a Tributary of Persia, and a Partizan of Myrr-Maghmud: Lift'y, that if the Parte took Umbrage at the Conquelts of the Emperor of Ruffia, he was perfectly disposed not to push them any farther. This Asiarance of the Czar's pushing his Conquests no farther, which was all that the Porte required, made them lend an Ear to the Offices of M. de Bonac, and appear fatisfied without the immediate Reslitution of Derbent.

During this Negotiation, the People of Ghilan, a Province of Persia bordering on Schirvan and the Caspian Sea, where Myrr-Maghmud had ravaged all the Country to prevent the Ruffians having any Subfiftence, had implored the Protection of Russia. This News astonishing the Bashaws of the neighbouring Provinces, that of Ergerum informed the Porte of it, with such Circumstances, as made it believed that the Russians had a Defign upon all Georgia; which had like to have overturned all that Mon-· heur de Bonac had been doing : But an Ambafiador of the dethroned Schah, who arrived at that Time to implore the Affiftance of the Porte, and the Affurances of the Russian Minister, that his Master should fulfil the Promifes of the French Ambassador, put a Stop at Conflantinople to all Thoughts of breaking with Ruffia. In thort, the Grand Signior employed against Persia itself the Preparations he had been making, fince fo favourable an Occasion offered to recover what the Turks had formerly possessed beyond the Euphrates.

These Affairs, how much soever of his Attention they required, did not prevent the Ruffian Emperor from having a watchful Eye on the State of Affairs at Home: For no fooner was he returned, after a Year's Abfence, than he made a Discovery of fresh Criminals; and some of the principal Persons of the Regency were found guilty of Misdemeanors, and condemned to severe Punishments. Baron Schafiroff, Vice-Chancellor, Favourite of his Majesty, and first Minister, was arrested, and put to the Question. It was commanded, that whoever knew any Thing concerning the Matters laid to his Charge, should declare them upon Pain of Death. He was convicted of the five following Articles: 1ft, That he had given to his Brother Appointments unknown to the Emperor and the Senate. 2d, That he had figned Orders unknown to the Senate, without having them registered. 3d, That being Director of the Posts, he had augmented the Postage of Letters, and reserved the Money to himfelf. 4th, That he had concealed 200,000 Ducats in Specie, and to the Value of 70,000 more in Jewels, belonging to Prince Gagarin. 5th, That he had used opprobrious Language to some of the Senators, in full Senate, which was forbid on Pain of Death.

The Evening before the Sentence was to be put in Execution against this Minister, the People were advertifed of it; so that great Crowds were assembled by nine o'Clock in the Morning, before the Senate-House, when Baron Schafiroff was led to the Scaffold, accompanied by two Priests. His Sentence was read aloud to him, which he heard with great Refignation; and having put his Head on the Block, the Instant the Executioner lifted up the Ax, a Herald cried out, Mercy to the Griminal for his Life, by Command of bis Imperial Majefty. Upon which he was taken off the Scaffold, and carried back to the Prison of the Preobrazinski. The Emperor, in Confideration of his past Services, changed his Sentence of Death into that of perpetual Banishment into Siberia, with Confifcation of his Estate and Goods. Other Criminals, as Kirioff, Secretary of the Senate, Major-General Pifaroff, and the Baron's Secretary, were differently punished by the Knout, or otherwise. The Fate of Baron Schafiroff was attributed more to the Intrigues of Prince Menzikoff, whom he had endeavoured to ruin, than to any real Crimes that he had committed.*

The Emperor of Russia, after having given Orders to transport Ammunition, Provisions, Artillery, and the necessary Troops to Astracan, against the next Campaign, took the Route to Petersburgh in the Beginning of March, 1723, whither the Empress and all the Court followed him: But before his Departure, he fent Orders to the Russian Ecclesiasticks in that City, to compose all Differences between themselves and the reformed Clergy, before his Arrival there; otherwise he would severely punish the Authors of their Divisions, he being firmly resolved to take all Protestant Families under his Protection, This shews how firmly he maintained his Power over the Clergy; no mean Conquest in a Prince! His Majesty was no fooner arrived at Petersburgh, than he went to visit the Docks and Ship-Yards, to see the Condition his Ships were in, intending to put a numerous Squadron to Sea the following Summer. He had, moreover, other Views, and was not well fatisfied with the Conduct of Denmark, which had not only made a separate Peace with Sweden, but was in some Measure leagued with the King of England. His Majesty had seen the Court of Denmark, and was acquainted with her Genius and Miniftry, which made him feem refolved to purfue the Difpute with her; 1st, For the Restitution of the Dominions taken from the Duke of Holftein; and 2dly, for the Freedom of his Ships in the Sound. The Emperor imagined he now faw a favourable Opportunity to strike this double Blow; for if he beat the Danish Squadron, nothing could hinder his making a Descent in Jutland and Holflein. By this Management he obliged Denmark to run into fuch Expences every Year, as very much drained their Coffers.

In the Review that his Majesty made of his Navy, he found several Vessels that had been taken from the

The Baron Schafroff was raifed by his Merit, from an ordinary Writer in one of the Courts of Justice at Mofious, to the Dignity of Chancellor.

Squades

Savedes in the last War, to which he joined others built in the Ports of Livonia, and distributed them amongst the Cities of Petersburgh, Riga, Revel, Wybourg, and other conquered Places, in Order to have them always employed in Trade. Twelve Men were to be constantly kept in Pay on Board each Ship, 8 being to be furnished by his Majelty, and 4 by the Magistrates, who were to maintain the whole Number: But in Case one of these Ships should be loft, or become unfit for Navigation, the Magistrates were bound to provide a new Ship in Lieu thereof, of the same Kind and Burthen. By this Courle, and other like proper Methods, his Majesty hoped to accustom his People by little and little, to the Affairs of Commerce.

The States of Saveden being affembled, his Majesty advised the Duke of Holstein to fend M. Basservitz thither, to manage his Interests in that Kingdom, which the Russian Ministers had Orders to Support. That Prince had no longer any Claim to the Succession by Hereditary Right; but he flattered himself that the Swedes, who had always cherished the Blood of their Kings, would prefer him to any other, if the Throne should become vacant; and as one good Step towards it, he moved the States to acknowledge him as next of Kin to her prefent Majesty, and to allow him the Title of Royal Highness. The Secret Committee, to whose Examination this was referred, made a Report, "That having confidered that Affair with all possible Attention, they had found it to be grounded on fo many Reasons, that they could not disfuade the Estates and the King from granting the faid Title to the Duke of Holflein." This Report occasioned great Debates : Some were for having the Bufiness determined on the Spot; but that being opposed, the farther Confideration of it was put off to the Morrow; when the King and Queen wrote each of them a Letter to the States, fignifying their great Surprize, that they should appear so ready to give the Title of Royal Highness to the Duke of Holstein. Their Majesties declared, that they never could confent to it, for Reasons alledged in their Letters. Upon this there arose warmer Debates than before; and not being able to come to a final Refolution, it was judged convenient to invite the Senate in a Body to a Conference with the Committee, to deliberate conjointly on this Affair. The Senate, meeting on the Day appointed, held a Conference with the Secret Committee; and a few Days after the States being reaffembled, their Opinion was read, containing in Subflance, "That having maturely weighed the Reafons for and against this Affair, the Senate could not in Confeience dispense from conforming to the Opinion of the Committee. After reading this Report, it was resolved, without Opposition, to give to the Duke the Title of Royal Highness aforesaid.

The Emperor of Russia was very much pleased with the Success of this Negotiation, in regard to the Duke of Holstein, whom he intended for one of the Imperial Princesses. And as Seveden had now recognized his own Title of EMPEROR, he thought it could no longer be refused by the King of Denmark: For which Reason he fent an Order to his Minister at Copenhagen, to renew his Instances on the three following Articles. I. That the King of Denmark should acknowledge him as Emperor. II. That the Russian Vessels should pass the Sound without paying any Duty. III. That his Danish Majesty should re-establish the Duke of Holsein in the Possession of all his Dominions. These Demands were supported by Orders given to the Admirals, to forward the Equipment of the Rullian Fleet; infomuch that the Danes again expected to be attacked. They armed, and put themselves to great Expences afresh. The Czar went by Cronflot to Revel, and embarked on Board his Fleet, which fet fail in Presence of the whole Court, and all the foreign Ministers. It consisted of 20 Men of War. befides Galleys. But his Majesty deceived the Expectation of all the Speculatifts, and contented himself with exercifing his Navy, as he had done the Year before, without going out of the Gulf of Finland.

Very foon after his Return to Petersburgh, all the Grandees, the Foreign Ministers, and Persons of Distinction, were invited by his Majesty to come to Petersbuff, his House of Pleasure, in order to celebrate a Feast of an extraordinary Kind. It has been before observed, that when the Emperor Peter began to take a Fancy to Strangers, he showed a particular Inclination to every Thing concerning Navigation, the Elements of which he learned in failing on the Periflaufky Lake, with some of his Favourites. Here, for the Diversion of the young Czar, a little Veffel was built, which had, in Miniature, the Form of all the Parts and Rigging of a Man of War. It was this little Vessel that inspired him with the Notion of establishing a Ship-Yard at Veronis, and was the Beginning of that formidable Navy which first shewed itself in the Black Sea, at the Siege of Asoph.

In the last Voyage his Majesty made from Petersburgh to Moscow, he caused a Frigate of his own Building to be brought to this last City, to shew his People; that, by comparing it with their Barks, and the little Skiff he first built, which was still preferved, they might have a perfect Notion of the great Improvements he had made in his Navy. After the Perfian Expedition, when his Majesty returned to Petersburgh, he caused this little Skiff to be transported thither, with a Resolution of preserving it, as a Monument to Posterity, that might flew in what Condition he found his Marine, and to what Perfection he had brought it. His Majesty took this Occasion to give an Entertainment to his Court, which was called, The Confecration of the little Grandfire; for that was the Name he gave to the Skiff. He conducted the Veffel, on a Galliot, in Triumph, to Cronflot, which may be looked upon as the Center of the Ruffian Admiralty. On the 23d of August, he ordered, that the Fleet, confisting of 27 Men of War, should be disposed in Form of an Amphitheatre; after which his Majesty went into the Little Grandsire, being accompanied by the Great Admiral Apraxin, who performed the Office of Quarter Mafter, and by Admiral Cruys, and the Vice Admirals Syvers, Gordon, and Menzikoff, who ferved for Rowers. The Skiff being towed by two Shallops, and moving for fome Time on the Sea, returned to the View of the Fleet, being faluted by a general Discharge of 3000 Guns; and in passing in Review by the Ships of the Fleet, every one struck his Colours, and faluted it one after another: To which this little Bark answered each Time, by a Discharge of 3 small Guns on Board. The Emperor afterwards landing, went into a Gallery adorned with Pavillions, when he was again saluted by a general Discharge of 3000 Guns. The Empress saw this sine Show from the Port, where she was under a Tent with the Ladies of her Court. In the Asternoon she came also, with the Emperor, to see the Little Grandsire, which was brought into the Harbour of the Men of War. Upon this there was a great Feast, that lasted till the next Day.

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 327

On the 24th their Imperial Majesties went by Water to Petershoff, convoyed by all the Flotilla, to the Number of 108 Vessels. The foreign Ministers arrived there at Night, and the next Day the Emperor was fo condefeending, as to offer himself to shew them Petersboff, an elegant Building, and furnished with many valuable Curiofities. His Majetty then carried them along by the Bason and Cascades to Montplaisir, which is a House by the Sea-fide, on the Right of Petersboff, where he generally lodged; and from thence to Marli on the Left, where there are Water-Spouts, each of a Foot in Diameter, which throw the Water up near 40 Foot. Here his Majesty took Leave of the foreign Ministers for the present, telling them, they were welcome to make a fuller Observation of those Curiosities; which when they had done, they went, by the Emperor's Invitation, to dine at the Duke of Holftein's Table, where were prefent the two Princes of Heffe Homburg. On the 26th, their Imperial Majesties gave a splendid Feast to the Nobility of the Court; there being two Tables of 72 Covers each; at one of which fat the Czar and his Lords, and at the other the Czarina and her Ladies. In the Evening his Majesty carried the foreign Ministers, in Coaches, to fee the great Refervoir which supplied his Water-Works, and the Canal from whence it was supplied, of 21 Wersts in Length, and told them, that it was dug in two Months Time, and derived its Waters from the Conjunction of three little Brooks; but that the completing this Work fo foon, was owing to the natural Descent of the Ground. They all returned again to Petershoff upon the Canal.

On the 27th the Little Grandfire was conveyed thither: But the Wind blowing pretty hard, the foreign Ministers did not return to Peterfourgh till the 28th, when the Little Grandfire was likewise brought thither. And on the 10th of the next Month, being the Anniversary of the Peace with Sweden, was held a Grand Masquerade, in Vessels surrounding the Galliot that carried the Little Grandfire, which was put to Sea with all its Ornaments; and his Majesty embarking thereon, conducted it himfelf, under the Discharge of all the Artillery, to the Place where it was to be laid up for Posterity,

In the Beginning of September, Ismael Beck, Ambasiador from the King of Perfia, arrived at Peterfburgh. Upon Advice that he was come to Sleutelbourg, his Majesty fent Melicurs Protallieff and Deviciack, to compliment him in his Name. The fame Day he also fent a fine Yacht for the Ambaffador, with 3 other Veffels for his Retinue, and 4 Sloops for their Baggage. The next Day the Ambaffador went aboard the Yacht, being faluted by the Discharge of 11 Pieces of Cannon; the commanding Officer and Soldiers attending under Arms, and the Drums beating. The Ambaffador going down the River Neva, failed through the whole Flotilla, which was ranged in Order before Petersburgh. As he passed by the Foundery, he was again faluted by 21 Pieces of Cannon, and when arrived before the Palace of Ambassadors, the 13 Guns on board the Yacht were fired alfo. Afterwards he went on board a Sloop, with M. Protaffieff and M. Deviciack, an Interpreter, and 3 other Persons of his Retinue, while 4 of the Sophi's Officers went on board another Sloop. When he came to the Bridge, hard by the Palace of Ambaffadors, he landed there, and made his public Entry.

On the 5th the Ambassador had his publick Audience. being conducted to it with great Ceremony. Before he entered the Hall, he gave his Hanger and Slippers to his Domesticks, who also left their Sabres, Hangers, and Slippers without. Then, having taken the Letter from his Master out of the Hands of his Secretary, he entered, and made his first Obedience; and advancing near the Throne, he repeated the same Thrice, and made a Speech in the Eastern Stile, full of magnificent and lofty Expressions. Afterwards he presented to the Emperor the Sophi's Letter, which his Imperial Majesty gave into the Hands of his Chancellor, who laid it on the Table, and fooke to the Ambaffador to approach nearer to the Throne. The Ambassador coming forward on his Knees, kissed the Border of the Emperor's Robe; who presenting his Hand to him to kiss, asked him after the Health of the Sophi. To which he answered only by shedding Tears, believing that the old Schab was dead, he having been confirmed in his Commission, on the Road, by the young Schab Tahmas. The Chancellor told him, that the Ministers of his Imperial Majesty would return him an Answer to the Letter he had prefented, and that he should be regaled at the Emperor's Table. Upon which the Ambassador retired backwards till he came to the Entrance of the Hall, where the Officers and the rest of his Train had remained during the Time of the Audience.

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

Some few Days after, the Emperor received the agreeable News of the Surrender of Baku, one of the most important Places on the Coasts of the Caspian-Sea, for its Situation, Strength, and Commerce. Major-General Matouschkin having fet sail from Afracan, with 19 Ships, on board which he had embarked with 3000 Men, arrived on the 28th of July before the City; and, after having weighed Anchor, dispatched Major Netschof with a Letter to the Governor, accompanied with another from the Perfian Ambassador, left at Astracan when he passed that Way for Petersburgh, wherein he exhorts the Inhabitants of Baku to put themselves under the Czar's Protection. But the Governor fent a verbal Answer to the Major-General, that he could not admit any Russian Troops into the Place, without an express Order from the Sophi. The Major-General made reply, that if they perfifted to refuse Entrance to his Men, he should be obliged to treat them as Enemies. In short, he caused two Galliots to advance, in order to bombard the Place; but the Inhabitants, to the Number of 1000 Men, well armed, defended themselves with a great deal of Courage to the 8th of August, on which Day the Governor fent 7 of the chief Men of the City to declare to the Major General, that he might enter the Town with his Men; and that had it not been for a malecontent Faction, it would have furrendered fooner: For which Reason they intreated his Imperial Majeky to forgive them. The Major General having promited them Pardon, entered the City with all the Marks of · Honour, and the Acclamations of the Inhabitants. Twenty Pieces of Cannon were found in the Town, with large Quantity of Ammunition. Great Rejoicings were made at Petersburgh on this Occasion; the Place being looked upon of very great Importance, as it would fecure the rest of the Russian Conquests on the Caspian-Sea; and for that Reason, they built large Magazines there, and flored them with all Manner of Provisions.

The Persian Ambassador, knowing all that his Master had to fear from the Turk and Myrr-Magbmud, had frequent Conferences with the Ministers of Russia, to folicit a quick and powerful Succour. He was a Man of Spirit, and thought very juftly, that he should never be able to obtain the Succours which his Mafter's Affairs had fo much need of, without proposing very advantageous Conditions to the Ruffians; wherefore he offered fuch Terms, that the Treaty was foon concluded. It confided of the five following Articles. " I. His Ruffian Majesty promises to his Persian Majesty, King Tachmafeb, his fincere Friendship and Affiltance against the Rebels, that his Persian Majesty may be re-established in his Dominions. 2. The King of Persia yields for ever to his Czarish Majesty the Cities of Derbent and Baku, with all the Countries bordering on the Cashian-Sea; as also the Provinces of Ghilan, Mazanderan, and Aftarabat. 3. His Czarish Majesty will give Orders to his Generals to get as many Horses as shall be necessary; with Proviso that in case a sufficient Number cannot be found, his Perfian Majesty shall be bound to furnish his Czarish Majesty with as many as he shall want, at the Rate of 12 Roubles a Head; to find Camels gratis, for the Carriage of the Baggage; and to provide for the Subfillence of the Army, on Condition that ready Money be paid for the fame. 4. A perpetual Friendship between the two Potentates are herewith established; by Virtue of which, the Subjects on both Sides may freely pass and repass into each Dominion, settle and trade there as they shall think fit: And if in Time to come, they shall have a Mind to remove, they shall be at Liberty to do it without Impediment. 5. His Czarish Majesty promises to take for his own Enemies, all those that are Enemies to the Persian Empire; and that he will look upon those that are at Amity with Persia, as his own Friends; which the King of Persia solemnly promises to observe likewise, with respect to his Czarish Majesty's Enemies and Friends."

Chap. 4. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 331

The Ambassador would have departed as soon as this Affair was concluded; but the Emperor affured him, it would give him Pleasure if he would repose himself for fome Time, and take part in the Diversions of the Seafon; wherein he behaved as a polite Gentleman, and shewed himself to be of an agreeable Humour. The Czar ordered his Navy, his Arfenals, Magazines, and Country-Houses to be shewn him: But he continued in Ruffia no longer than till the End of the Month. On the 25th he had his Audience of Leave with the fame Ceremonies as were observed at his Entry. As soon as he approached the Throne, his Majesty gave the Chan-cellor the Letter, which he had wrote in Answer to that of the Schab, and the Chancellor delivered it to the Ambaffador, charging him, on the Part of his Czarish Majefty, that he would affure the Schab of the entire Friendthip of his Majesty, and his firm Resolution of religiously maintaining the Treaty. The Ambaffador having put the Letter on his Head, made another Speech with true Afiatick Eloquence; and after being permitted to kifs the Emperor's Hand, crawling on his Knees, he withdrew, very well fatisfied with all the Honours he had received.

The Porte was very foon informed of the Contents of this Treaty, with which she appeared not at all satisfied; from whence it was supposed, that that Court had Views of taking Advantage of the Divisions in Persia, by which it might make a more easy Conquest in that Country. Captain Neiplief, the Russian Minister at Constantinople, and the Marquis de Bonac, immediately gave notice of the Dispositions that appeared in the Divan to declare War against the Russians: Upon which his Imperial Majesty communicated in Form to the Porte, the Treaty he had made with the young Schab, inviting his Highness to accede to the same ; declaring, that he had no other View than to affilt an infulted Prince against his rebellious Subject. This Declaration, to which the pacifick Vizier gave a good Turn, appealed the Grand Signior, Signior, who was willing to lend an Ear to the Propofitions of M. de Bonac; who, after having renewed the Affurances of his Imperial Majesty's Desire to continue in Peace with his Highness, drew so hideous a Picture of Myrr-Maghmud, and his Designs, that it was not difficult to bring the Grand Signior to approve the Conduct of the Ruffian Emperor. Nevertheless, many Incidents happened, which very much thwarted the Success that was expected from these Instances. Under Pretence of opposing the excellive Power of the Rulfians, the Tartars armed all their Forces, and there were great Reasons to fear fresh Hostilities from them. But at length M. de Bonac and Nieplief, knowing how to make the best Use of every Circumstance, brought the Divan to appoint Commissaries to treat of a Convention between the two Empires, with regard to the Affairs of Persia; and the following Articles were agreed to. 1. That the Grand Signior may come off with Honour, the Sophi shall fend a folemn Embaffy, to defire the Sultan to fet Bounds to his Conquests, and to consent that the Emperor of Rusfia may execute the Treaty which he has of late concluded with him, 2. The Emperor of Russia shall keep whatever lies between the Mountains of Caucajus and the Coasts of the Caspian-Sea, together with Derbent, Baku, Ghilan, Mascan, Ran, and Ferabat, as far as the River Offa or Ottus. 3. He shall content himself with the meridional Coasts from Ghilan to the River Osla. 4. A reasonable District shall be allowed to the City of Derbent. 5. The Limits of the two Empires shall be fixed between Samachi and Baku. 6. The Ottoman Empire shall have the Provinces of Erivan, Tauris, and Cashin, as far as its antient Limits of Wan and Argura. 7. As to the other Countries which the Porte lays claim to. Endeavours will be used to fatisfy the Grand Signior. especially if he favours Russia in the Article of Trade.

This Treaty, and the other before-mentioned, not only confirmed his new Conquests to the Russian Emperor, but gave him the Prospect of having two rich Provinces on the Coasts of the Caspian Sea, as soon as the Repose of Persia was settled. There was one Way of putting a speedy End to the Troubles in that Country, which was Myrr-Magmud: But it was no easy Matter to engage the Turks to join with Christians, or cure the Jealousy they had of the Russians growing too powerful. However, his Imperial Majesty now saw himself without any Enemies, and free from the Danger of having any soon. But the Hettman of the Cossacks being dead, it occasioned some Disturbance in the Country lying between the Borysthenes and the Don. These People sent some of their Colonels to Petersburgh, to demand, in a rough Manner, a new Hettman, and the Re-establishment of many Privileges: But his Imperial Majesty soon quieted them, by giving them Prince Gallicain for their Chief, whose Valour and Fidelity he knew he might depend on.

CHAP. V.

The Czar publishes a Proclamation for crowning the Empress. Erets an Academy of Sciences. Ceremonies of the Empress's Coronation. The Emperor falls sick. Causes the Oath to be renewed in Favour of the Empress. Makes some new Regulations, particularly in the Administration of Justice. Dies.

HAVING established Peace on every Side of his Empire, his Majesty began to think of putting the Design in Execution, which he had long formed, of causing his beloved Empress Catherine to be solemnly crowned, in his antient City of Moscow; preparatory to which he published the following Proclamation.

E Peter I. Emperor and Autocrator of Muscowy, &c. No body is ignorant of the established Custom which has been observed constantly in Christendom, for the Princes to crown their Princesses, as hath for several Ages been the Practice of the Emperors of the true Greek Religion; namely, the Emperor Basilacus, who caused the Crown to be set on the Head of his Wife Zenobia; the Emperor Justinian, who did the same for his Spouse Lupicina; the Emperor Heraclius.

for Martinea; the Emperor Leo the Philosopher, for his Wife Mary; befides many others, whom it would be too tedious to mention here.

'Tis also well known how much we have exposed our own Person, for the Sake of our Country, during the late War, for 21 Years together; which, by the Help of God, we have concluded, in a Manner fo honourable and advantageous, that Ruffia never obtained fuch a Peace, nor acquired fo much Glory as was gained by this War. The Empress Catharine, our dearest Spouse. was a great Help to us, not only in the faid War, but in other Expeditions, in which the accompanied us voluntarily, and ferved us with her Counfel, as much as was possible, notwithstanding the Weakness of her Sex; particularly at the Battle of Pruth, where our Army was reduced to 22,000 Men, while the Turks were 220,000 strong. It was in this desperate Circumstance, above all others, that she fignalized her Zeal, by a Courage superior to her Sex, as is known throughout the whole Empire. For these Causes, and by Virtue of that Power which God has given us, we are refolved to honour our Spoule with the Imperial Crown, in Acknowledgment for all her Fatigues; which, God willing, shall be performed this Winter at Moscow; and we hereby give notice of it to all our loving Subjects, to whom our Imperial Affection is unalterable, &c.

Magnificent Preparations were made for this Grand Ceremony, and his Majesty having invited the foreign Ministers to Court on that Account, entered the Room where they were, accompanied by Chancellor Golosskin, and Messieurs Tolssio and Oslerman; where, taking his Place in an armed Chair, he spoke to the following Effect in the Dutch Language: "You know, Gentlemen, that I had resolved for some Time to take a Journey to Moscow, with the Empress my Spouse, which has been prevented by Illness; but it having pleased God to reslore my Health, I am now in a Condition to undertake it, and am willing, before my Departure, to desire you, on my Part, to assure your august Masters of my sincere Friendship, and that I will lose no Opportunity of cultivating the same with them. If any one among you has any Commission to execute, he may apply to my Chancellor. I do not doubt but you have received Orders to follow me to Moscow: All necessary Preparations are made for your own Conveyance thither, and that of your Domesticks." But this Journey was again deferred for some Time, on Account of the Affairs of Turky, where, notwithstanding the last Treaty, warlike Preparations were still making on the Sides of the Don and the Pruth. It was at this Time that the Ruffian Emperor. who never ceased from the glorious Labour of improving the Minds and Manners of his People, drew up the Plan of an Academy of Sciences and the Belles-Lettres, confilting of these 11 Articles. 1. The Academy is to be composed of 12 Members, 1 Secretary, 1 Library Keeper, 4 Interpreters, and 12 Pupils. 2. The Sciences to be taught are divided into 3 Classes; Mathematicks, Phyficks, and polite Learning. 3. Every one is to dive into those Sciences, and to improve that in particular, which he has made his peculiar Study. All the Members are to examine the Discoveries that thall be proposed to them, and to declare fincerely, whether they are new, ufeful, and really fuch as they are given out for. They are to make Extracts out of Books, which they shall think proper for the Improvement of Literature, which they are to put into the Hands of the Secretary, with their Remarks. 4. All the Members are to meet once a Week in private, and three Times a Year in publick. 5. Each Member of this Academy shall write a System of the Science he professes, and have a publick Lecture once a Day. They may also have private Lectures for their own Advantage. 6. Every Member is to have under his Direction a Pupil, who is already advanced in Learning, and who shall have a Pension for his Maintenance; and if he makes confiderable Progreffes, he is to fucceed his Tutor. 7. These Pupils shall teach the Beginners the first Elements, and instruct them fo far, as that they may in Time be capable of improving themselves by the Lectures. 8. The Academy shall be immediately under the Emperor, who has taken it under his Protection; and the Members shall not be liable to appear, without the President's Consent, before any other Court of Juffice but their own. 9. The Library, the Chamber of Engines, the Cabinet of Anatomy, and that of Medals, shall be for their Use; and the Money requisite for making Experiments will be furnished them. 10. Each Member shall have a Year's Salary beforehand. They shall have free Lodgings, and sufficient Fuel; and those that come from abroad, shall have their Travelling Charges defrayed. 11. They shall not be empowered to make any Laws, but with the Consent of the whole Academy.

Before his Majesty's Departure from Petersburgh, he received the agreeable News from Stockholm, of his Minister's being likely to conclude a Treaty of Alliance with that Court, which would confirm and explain that of Neiftadt; fettle Limits, and whatever concerned Commerce; and guarantee the Titles and Rights of the Duke of Holstein. This Treaty being accordingly finished, was figned by his Majesty on the 4th of March, the very Day he arrived at Olonitz, to drink the Waters of that Place. He and the Empress arrived at Moscoco on the 1st of April, under a triple Discharge of all the Artillery. They found in the City a Turkifb Aga, with that Nephew of the Marquis de Bonac, who brought with them the Instrument of the Treaty we have before mentioned. The Cham of the Calmucks had likewise sent an Ambasfador thither, and Myrr-Maghmud had contrived to have fome Tartars there disguised, who, if they had not been discovered, might have disturbed the Solemnity of the Coronation, which was performed on the 18th of May. Her Imperial Majesty prepared herself for it, for three Days, by Fasting and Prayer; and the People had notice given them of the Time, on the 16th and 17th, by the Secretary of the Chancery, preceded by an Officer with Drums and Trumpets.

The Cathedral, in which the Coronation was performed, was richly adorned. It was illuminated with a great Number of Branches in Form of Crowns, and there was a very large Silver one in the Middle, of extraordinary Workmanship, full of Wax Candles, all gilt. The Steps of the Altar, and the Pavement of the Church to the Throne, and to the Czarina's usual Seat, were covered with Tapestry wrought with Gold, and the Prelates sat on Benches covered with Crimson Cloth. In the Middle of the Church was a Canopy of Crimfon Velvet, adorned with the Arms of Russia, Casan, Astracan, and Siberia. The Canopy was embroidered with Gold Rais'd-Work. with rich Fringes, Ribbons, Tufts, and Gold Lace; and at the 4 Corners were fine Pillars like Pyramids, covered with Red and Gold Silk. Under this Canopy was the Throne, the Steps and Pavement of which were covered with Crimson Velvet. There were two antique Elbow Chairs in it for their Imperial Majesties, which glitter'd with Precious Stones; and a long Table covered with Cloth of Gold, which hung to the Ground. Their usual Seats in the Church were lined infide and outfide with Cloth of Gold, and the Bottom was covered with red Velvet, trimmed with Gold. The Imperial Princesses, the Dutchesses of Mecklenbourg and Courland, and the Duke of Holftein, faw the Ceremony from Places made for them near the Throne, adorned with Tapefiry and Cloth of Gold, with an Eagle of Gold embroidered, and sparkling with Jewels. The Officers and Gentlemen made also a fine Appearance.

Chap. 5. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy.

At 9 o'Clock in the Morning, the Clergy met in the Church, and read the usual Prayers for the Prosperity of both their Imperial Majesties, whom afterwards they ent tow attend in their Habits, and joined in the Procession, which was very splendid. Prince Gallicain and Count Osterman carried the Imperial Mantle, which was of Cloth of Gold, lined with Ermin; the Clasps of it adorned with a great Number of large Brilliants. Prince Dolgoruki carried the Globe, which was of fine Gold; the Cross adorned with Diamonds, Rubies, Saphires and Emeralds, being the Workmanship of Old Rome. Another Privy-Councillor carried the Scepter enamell'd. and adorned with Diamonds and Rubies. General Count Bruce carried the Crown, which was covered all over with Brilliants, and fine Oriental Pearls. Among other Precious Stones, there was a true Oriental Ruby, of an uncommon Lustre, as large as a Pigeon's Egg, which Supplied the Place of the Globe on the Top of the Crown. The Czar was supported by the Princes Menzikoff and Repnin; and the Czarina was led by the Duke of Holflein, attended by the High Admiral, and the Chancellor; her Train being borne by the Princesses Menzikaji and Trubet kei, the Counteffes Golofikin and Bruce. The Nobility, Officers, Guards, and Heralds made all of them a fine Appearance.

When the Regalia came near the Gate of the Cathedral, all the Archbishops and Clergy went out to the Steps, and two of the Bishops sprinkled the Ornaments with Incense and Holy Water. Then the Clerge marching before them into the Church, the Choir flruck up that Pfalm, beginning, Lord I will fing of thy Mercy and of thy Righteoufness. The Duke of Holstein having led the Czarina to the Throne, retired to his Place, and the Czar led her to her Seat. When their Majesties were feated, the Prelates fat down likewife; but the Gentlemen and Ladies stood all the Time of the Ceremony. When they had fung the Anthem, the Czar flood up, and taking the Scepter from the Table, ordered the Great Marshal to call the Prelates, and enjoin them to proceed to the Coronation: Upon which they advanced towards the Czarina, and the Archbishop of Novogorod made this Address to her: Orthodox and great Empress, most gracious Lady, may it please your Majesty to repeat aloud the Creed of Orthodox Faith in the Presence of your loyal Subjects. After having repeated the Athanafian Creed, her Majesty kneeled down upon a Cushion, and received the Archbishop's Benediction, who consecrated her with the Sign of the Cross, laid his Hands on her, and then taking off his Mitre, recited a Prayer composed for the Occafion. Then the Empress stood up, and the two Archbishops took hold of the Coronation Mantle, and gave it to the Emperor, who, without quitting the Scepter, put it upon the Empress. Then their Imperial Majesties kneeling down again, the Archbishop read another Prayer aloud. After which the Empress rising up, the Emperor took the Crown from the Archbishops, and placed it on her Head; but still kept the Scepter in his Hand. Then the Archbishops pronounced their Benediction, In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoft. While the Czar was still standing with his Scepter in his Hand, the Archbishop put the Imperial Globe into the Empress's Hand; and then their Majesties sat down, and received the Compliments both of the Clergy and Laiety, while the Choir fung the usual Anthem for their profprosperous Reign. After which there was a general Salvo of all the Artillery, and the Bells of all the Churches were rung, as is directed in the Liturgy.

This done, their Majesties, being conducted from the Throne with the fame Ceremonies as they ascended, went up to the Foot of the Altar, and from thence to their uiual Seats. During the Liturgy, the Empress fometimes took off her Crown; which was committed to the Secretary of the Cabinet. After the Prayers for the Communion were fung, the Czar led the Empress, upon a Walk of red Velvet doubled, and Tapestry work'd with Gold, to the Sanctuary, where she kneeled on a Cushion embroidered with Gold. Two Bishops carried the Holy Oil in separate Vessels, and an Archbishop anointed the Empress on the Fore-head, Breast, and Hands, repeating at each, In the Name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoft. Other Archbishops wiped her with Cotton, and put it into a Chafing-Dish upon the Altar. The Archdeacon, who attended with the Holy Sacrament in a Pyx, faid aloud, Approach with Piety and Faith; upon which she received the consecrated Bread from the Archbishop, with a little warm Wine. Two Arch-Priests of the Cathedral carried a Bason of Gold. The Archimandrite of the Trinity Monastery held a Gold Ewer full of Water, and two other Abbots held the Napkin for her Majesty to wipe her Hands. Which done, their Majesties returned to their Seats in the Church; and there was a fecond Salvo of the Cannon. At the Close of the Service, Theophanes, Archbishop of Plescow, made an Harangue, in which he just mentioned the Virtues of the Empress, and shewed how well she had deferved the Crown which she had received from God and her Spouse; and concluded with his Congratulations in the Names of the States of the Country.

When the Office was over, the Duke of Holficin went to wait upon the Empress to the other Cathedral, to which she walked much in the same Order as she came from the Palace, under a rich Canopy, supported by six Major Generals on Poles of massive Silver. The Scepter and Globe were carried before her, and her Train was held up again by the Ladies. At her going out of the Church, the Kettle Drums and Trumpets sounded; there was a third Salvo of the Cannon, and the Bells rung in all the Churches, while the Shouts of the Multitude rent the Skies. Prince Menzikoff walked just behind the Empress, supported by the President of the Finances, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, each carrying a Purse of red Velvet embroidered with Gold, in which were Medals of Gold and Silver, which the Prince threw out among the Populace, while the Empress walked to the other Cathedral. As soon as she came to the Door, an Archbishop met and walked before her with a Crucifix, while the Litanies were singing, and the Empress went and paid her Devotions at the Tomb of the Czarewitz Demetrius, and those of the Czar's glorious Ancestors.

From thence she went to the Monastery of Wosnesenki, the Place of Interment for the Ladies of the Imperial Blood. She was preceded by, I. The Emperor's Horse Guards in green Coats and red Waistcoats, richly laced with Gold, and adorn'd with the Emperor's Coat of Arms in Embroidery. Their Arms and Furniture were equally rich. II. Twenty four Valets; their Coats green, fac'd with red, their red Waistcoats spread with Gold and Silver Lace. III. Twelve Pages in green Liveries, the Facings and Vest of Cloth of Gold. Then came the Empress in a Coach drawn by 8 Horses, and 4 Footmen running before. Above 16 Hevdukes marching on both Sides the Coach, at a proper Distance from the Chamberlains, and other Officers of the Court, who were all splendidly dressed. Lieutenant-General Lesty rode behind the Coach, with 2 Heralds at Arms, and threw Money to the People. Then came fix Negroes drefs'd in black Velvet, edged with Gold; followed by the Counts Apraxin and Goloffkin in a Coach and Six, who conducted the Empress to the Gate of the Monastery, where she was received by an Archbishop carrying a Crucifix, attended by all the Nuns, and her Train was held up by five Ladies of the fecond Rank. After the had performed her Devotion at the Tombs of the Ladies of the Imperial Family, the returned to the Imperial Palace, where the Duke of Holstein handed her out of the Coach, and, had her to his Apartment. Here the Czar expected her. while the Service was getting ready in the Hall of Solemnities. Eld'T'

Chap. 5. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 341

This Hall, for its Bigness and Ornaments, is one of the finest in Europe; and the Windows, being proportionably large, make it very Light. The Roof refts upon one fingle Pillar in the Middle. The Cornices. Pedestals, and all the Wainscot, which are of curious Workmanship, are hung with red Velvet and Cloth of Gold, flowered at China, and the Floor was covered with Persian Carpets of an extraordinary Beauty. A Place was made for the Imperial Princesses, and the Dutchesses of Mecklenbourg and Courland to fee the Solemnity, which was hung with Cloth adorned with Gold Fringe, and Abundance of Ribbons. Round the Pillar a Table was fet with Vessels of Gold and Silver, the Workmanship of Grecia and Rome, adorned with Pearls of the East. and precious Stones. The Table where their Majesties were were to eat, was fet upon a raifed Floor spread with red Velvet and Gold Lace, under a Canopy of the fame hung with Ribbons. The Table where the Duke of Holfiein was to eat alone, was on the Left. There was another beyond for Persons of the first Quality, who affifted at the Coronation; and a third on the fame Side for the chief fecular Prelates, who officiated likewife. Over against this there was one for the Ladies and Gentlewomen, and a Theatre for the Musick.

The Procession entered this Hall in the following Order. I. The Masters of the Ceremonies. II. The two great Cup Bearers. III. The great Steward, followed by the Grand Marshal. IV. The Czar and his two Supporters. V. The Czarina, led by the Duke of Holflein, and supported as in the former Procession. VI. The Chief Ladies of Quality, with the Czarina's Maids of Honour. The other Persons of Note of both Sexes, Clergy and Laiety, placed themselves in two Rows on both Sides. When their Majesties were under the Canopy, the Bleffing was given by an Archbishop, and then the whole Company took their proper Places. The Dishes were laid on by the Czar's Lieutenant-Generals; and as often as he called for a fresh Course, the Grand Marshal gave the Word to the Master of the Ceremonies to go out, who was followed by the Officers in waiting, after whom went the chief Carver, and then the Grand Marshal. The Dishes were carried up in the following Order. 1. The Grand Marshal. 2. The Great Steward. 3. The chief Carver. 4. The Officers who carried the Service; and 5. The Master of the Ceremonies. The Great Steward ranged the Dishes, and took them off, and at every Time bent the Knee; and the others who waited on their Majesties, served them on the Knee. They eat and drank out of Gold, and the Pyramids of Sweetmeats were brought in Basons of Gold. The Duke of Holstein too was ferved by Officers of the first Rank. At the same Time a Stage was erected before the Hall, where the Fountains ran with red and white Wines; and Oxen, and all Manner of Fowls were roafted for the Populace. Before the Court role from the Table, Prince Menzikoff distributed great Medals of Gold, representing the Coronation, to all the Persons of Distinction who assisted at it; and then their Majesties returned to their Apartments, in the fame Order as they came.

This Solemnity over, his Majesty pursued his usual Endeavours to encourage the Commerce of his Subjects, and to advance them in Arts and Sciences: For the Increase of the Latter, he caused a strict Search to be made for all the antient Greek Manuscripts, that had been hid for many Ages in the Convents by Reason of the Ignorance of the Monks. It was found that many of these Manuscripts had been fent to Moscow by Means of the House of Medicis, in whose Country many of the learned Greeks, who fled from the Tyranny of the Turks, were well entertained, and enabled to go from thence to Mostow. His Majesty made also several wife Regulations, and, as Mr. Fontenelle fays, DARED to retrench the Churches and Monasteries that were too rich. He ordered, 1. That for the future, no more than 50 Monasteries for Men should be allowed throughout all Russia. 2. That in each Cloyster, or Monastery, the Number of Monks should not be above 50, tho' it might be under. 3. That no Monk under 40 Years should be received into a Cloyfter, and that for each of them no more than one Rouble per Week should be allowed to subsist on. 4. That those Monks who were at prefent under 40 Years, should immediately go out of the Cloysters, and be employed in some publick Affairs. And as there were many 100 Cloysters in Russia, the Revenues of which amounted to feveral Millions of Roubles, they should be appropriated to the Publick Treasury.

At the latter End of the Year, his Majesty invited the foreign Ministers, and Nobility, to the Ceremony of betrothing the Princess Anna Petrouvna to the Duke of Holflein; the Emperor himself joining the illustrious Pair, by exchanging the Rings, giving them a Kifs, and wishing them a long Life: After which the Archbishop of Novogorod gave them his Bleffing, in a few Words. The Ceremony was closed with the joyful Acclamations of the whole Affembly. The betrothed Princess presented afterwards a Glass of Wine to both their Majesties, to the Duke her future Spouse, and to the principal Lords and Ladies, from whom the received the Compliments of Congratulation. The Feaft was preceded by a curious Firework, and followed with a Ball. Two Days after, the Colleges waited upon his Royal Highness with their Compliments. The foreign Ministers did the same, and were entertained at Dinner, together with Admiral Apraxin, Field Mareschal Repnin, Attorney General Jagusinski, and others. Great Rejoicings were made all over Petersburgh on this Occasion; and his Majesty purchased the Palace formerly belonging to the Admiral Apraxin, for the Refidence of the Duke and his future Spoufe.

But a sudden Damp was put to all this Joy, by the Apprehensions of the greatest Calamity that could befal the Nation, even the loss of that great Prince, who was truly the Father of his Country : For on the 16th of January, he was attended with a violent Cold, which brought on him a Fit of the Cholick, and that being followed by a Strangury, occasioned by an Abscess in the Neck of his Bladder, he continued in great Misery for a Week, without being once in Bed, when his Physicians thought proper to break the Abscess with a Probe; which indeed discharged a great deal of Matter, and gave him much Ease, with Hopes of Recovery: But the Application being made too late, he fuffered most violent Torture for 4 Days more, and then expired, on the 28th of January, 1725, in the 53d Year of his Age; giving all the Tokens of a perfect Refignation to the Will of Heaven, and behaving with the fame Courage and Piety that accompanied all his Actions. Even in the Extremity of these painful Disorders, he laid out fome Time in providing for the Safety of his People, which could be no Way better confirmed, than in the Choice he had made of a Successor; and when he found his End approaching, he gave Orders that the Oath should be again administered, which was formerly taken in Behalf of the Empress. When the Senators and Bishops, who visited him in this Sickness, mentioned the Obligations which the Ruffian Nation lay under to him, for raifing it to fo confiderable a Figure, by reforming fuch a Variety of bad Customs, and introducing so many Arts and Sciences; he told them, that he had forgot to reform one of the most important Points of all, the ADMINISTRA-TION OF JUSTICE; because Law-Suits in Christendom last for Years, and even Ages together, with an infinite Expence; and all this is occasioned by the tedious Pleading of the Lawyers, who perplex human Laws in the fame Manner as too many Divines do the Law of God, inflead of explaining it. To remedy this, he determined, that Causes (as among the Turks) should be carried at first to the Tribnnal of the Magistrate; or ordinary Judge; that Proofs in Writing, and Witnesses should be produced, and the Characters of the latter should be particularly examined, and fo an impartial Judgment should be pronounced; all which would be finished in a few Hours: But if the Party condemned should think himself injur'd, he might appeal from this Sentence to the Senate, or Synod, and, even after a fecond Judgment, to the Sovereign himfelf. Those that were present applauding this Scheme, he commanded an Order to be drawn up, which he figned in his Bed, and it was fent immediately to all the Courts of his Empire. This Order limited the Determination of all Causes to the Term of II Days, and in Consequence of it, all the Suits then depending were decided before he closed his Eyes, which was on the 12th Day from his being first taken ill.

The Princess Natalia Petrowna, the Emperor's 3d Daughter by the Empress Catharine, dying on the 15th of March following, the Funeral Obsequies of both Father and Daughter were performed on the 21st, with most extraordinary Pomp, of which the following is a short Detail.

Chap. 5. PETER I. Czar of Muscovy. 345

A Harbinger of the Court on Horseback. Chief Master of the Ceremonies, holding a Marshal's Staff. Four Pair of Kettle-Drums, each Pair followed by 12 Trumpets, 3 a-breaft. Four Hautboys, and four Pair of Kettle-Drums more. Thirty-fix Pages. Their Governor. Thirty-fix Officers of the Court. Marshall of the Merchants. Thirty-fix Foreign Ministers. Marshal of the Deputies. Twenty-one Deputies from the conquered Towns. Marshal of the Nobility. Twenty one Noblemen from the conquered Provinces. A 2d Harbinger. A 4th Marshal. The Standard of War. The late Emperor's War-Horse, with a Saddle of yellow Velvet, adorned with Pearls and Diamonds. Thirtytwo Standards of the Provinces, with the Arms of each Province, conducted by a Captain. Thirty-two Horses caparifoned in black with the Arms of the Provinces, conducted by two Lieutenants. The Flag of the Admiralty. The Standard of the Empire. The Horse of the Empire, led by two Lieutenant-Colonels. A white Standard, with Inscriptions. The Horse in State without a Saddle. richly adorned. A Gentleman on Horseback, compleatly armed, and followed by two Halberdiers. A Cuiraffier on Foot. A black Standard. The Mourning Horse. Great Master of the Ceremonies. The Arms of Siberia, Astracan, Casan, Novogorod, Wolodimir, Kiony, and Moscow. The same Arms, but larger. The Imperial Crofs. Seventy Chorifters. Fifty Monks. Twenty Priefts. Fourfcore Priors and Abbots. Eight Bishops and Archbishops. Two Marshals. The Archducal Crown, carried by Major-General Gollowin. The Corpfe of the Princels Natalia, carried by 16 Majors; the Canopy supported by 6 Lieutenant-Colonels, and the Pall held up by 4 Brigadiers. Two Heralds of Arms. Four-Swords of the Empire. The Order of the White-Eagle? The Order of Denmark. The Order of Ruffia. The Crown of Siberia. The Crown of Allracan. The Crown of Cafan. The Imperial Globe. The Imperial Scepter. The Imperial Crown of Russia. Three Marshals. Two Majors, with their Swords pointed towards the Ground, attended by 100 Halberdiers. The Corple of the Emperor, drawn by 8 Horses, capacifon'd with black Velvet, with 8 Colonels, and 8 Gentlemen of the Horse or each Side: Twelve Colonels conducted the Corple; 8 Brigadiers held up the Taffels of the Canopy; which was supported by 8 Major-Generals: The four Corners of the Pall were supported by Privy Councillors. Three Marshals. The Empress on Foot, led by Prince Menzikoff, and Admiral Apraxin. The Princesses Anne Petrosuna, and Elizabeth Petrowna; the Dutchess of Mecklenbourg. and the Princess Prescovia Joanowna. The Princess Livorvina Naraskin. The Duke of Holftein. The Great Duke Alexiowitz. The Two Princes Livowina Naraskin. The Officers of the Court. A Marshal. The Ladies of the Empress's Court. Those of the two Princesses. The rest of the Court Ladies. The other Ladies. A Marshal. The Officers of the Colleges. A Marshal. The Bowyers and Gentlemen. A Marshal. The Burghers. The Harbingers .- All the great Personages were properly led and their Trains supported: The Regalia were carried by the great Officers of State and the Army, and the whole was in a Manner furprifingly Magnificent.

Thus did this Son of Glory fet, after illuminating the whole Northern World. We, fays Mr. Hill, who had the Honour to live Contemporaries with this egregious Spirit, were deadened in our Sense of his true Greatness by the Nearness and Familiarity with which we observed it. But when, from the Distance of descending Ages, our Posterity shall look up towards the Records of the present Generation, and inquire in vain for the very Names of some prouder Princes, who reigned with him: his Memory and his Splendor of the never-to be-forgotten Glory, shall cast a Brightness over his Æra, and Millions not yet to be born, till a Thousand Years after his Death, shall remain ignorant of what passed in the Days of their Grandfathers, while they shall be more learned and enlightened than we are in the Character. the Purposes, the Actions, and the Virtues of this illustrious Dignifier of Human Nature.

BO taken by the Czar, 181, Academy of Sciences erected at Petersburgh, 335. Afrosini, the Czarewitz's Mistress, an Account of her, Aland, the Conferences there, 239, 267, 270, 275. Ali-Coumourgi, the Sultan's Favourite, his Influence, 176.

Alt-Ranstadt, Treaty of, 102.

Ambassador, Russian, arrested in London, 123. Satisfaction made for that Affront, 139-145.

Andrew, St. Order of, first instituted, 54.

Ankersteirn, Admiral, his two fruitless Attempts on Cron-

Not, 92, 96.

Anne, Queen of Great-Britain, her Letter to the Czar, on Account of the Arrest of his Ambassador, 139-143. Anne Joanowna, present Empress of Russia, her Marriage and Character, 145.

Anthony, St. a ridiculous Story of him, 56.

Apraxin, Admiral, detains the Garrison of Wybourg, 147. his Ravages in Sweden, 278-281.

Areskine, Dr. the Czar's Physician, dies, 274.

Afoph, first Siege of, 35. second, 37. taken, ib.

Assemblies fet up at Petersburgh, 284.

Astracan, a Rebellion there, 100. suppressed, ib.

Augustus, Elector of Saxony, chosen King of Poland, 42. meets the Czar at Birfen, 74. calls a Diet to oppose the Savedes, 75. fends the Counters of Koning mar to King Charles, ib. lofes the Battle of Cliffau, 71. deposed, 90. goes to the Czar's Army, 99. feizes Patkul, 100. gives up his Crown by a Treaty, 102. wins the Battle of Califb, 103. Congratulates Staniflaus on his Accession, 104. re-ascends the Throne, 132. his Interview with the Czar, 135. displeases his Allies by a Cessation of Arms, 173.

DAkewitz, Prince Alexander, his Catastrophe near the Caspian Sea, 225. his Origin, 226. Bakus

Baku, City of, taken, 318, 329.

Baur, Liutenant-General, takes Catharine, afterwards Empress, at Marienbourg, 82. recommends her to Prince Menzikoff, 84. takes Mittago, 93. furprifes the Staroft Grudzinski, 174.

Beards, long, the Russians Esteem for them, 60. Shaved by the Czar's Order, ib.

Bender, the Action there, 177.

Bestuches, M. presents a Memorial at London, and is ordered to depart the Kingdom, 288.

Bible printed in the Russian Language, 307.

Books in an unknown Character, found by the Russians.

314.

Brancovan, Prince of Wulachia, holds a Correspondence with the Czar, 159. but betrays him, 161.

Bremen and Verden made over to the K. of Great-Britain.

Brunswick, Congress of, comes to nothing, 182. Burnet, Bishop, his Character of the Czar, 47.

CALISH, Battle of, 103. Campredon, the French Minister, Mediator at Niestadt. 295.

Cantemir, Demetrius, appointed Prince of Moldavia, 159. fends to the Czar, ib. goes over to him, 161. kindly treated, 164. His Character, ib.

Carteret, Lord, makes an Alliance with Sweden, 276.

Caspian Sea, a new Chart of it, 297.

Catharine, afterwards Empress, her Origin and Education, 82, 83. taken at Marienbourg, ib. goes into Prince Menzikoff's Service, 84. in Favour with the Czar, ib. her Influence over him, 86. Procures the Peace of Pruth, 162. Publickly married to the Czar, 169. delivered of a Prince, 200. goes to the Czar at Amflerdam, 213. Proclamation for crowning her, 333. Ceremony of the Coronation, 336.

Catharine, St. Order of it instituted, 193.

Cham of Tartary perfuades the Turks to a War with Ruffia, 153.

Charles XI. King of Sweden dies, 46.

Charles XII. King of Sweden, routs the Muscovites before Narva, 67. beats the Saxons near the Duna, 72.

wins the Battle of Cliffau, 78. a Report of his Death, 79. makes Stanislaus King of Poland, 91. imposes his own Terms on Augustus, 102. his Cruelty to Patkul, 106. re-enters Lithuania, 112. wins the Battle of Hollowzin, 115. enters Ruffia, 116. refuses to treat, tho' in great Distress, 122. loses the Battle of Pultowa, 125. retires into Turky, 127. rejects the Offer of Peace, 132. and the Project of Neutrality, 151. His Intrigues at the Porte, ib. reproaches the Grand Vizier for making Peace with the Czar, 162. gets him deposed, 168. censures the English and Dutch Ministers, 171. fets the Turks again upon the Russians, 175. consents to depart on a certain Condition, which being complied with, he still continues obstinate, 176, 177. returns to his Dominions, 189. but continues implacable, ib. 190. retires into Schonen, but returns to Norway, 209. killed before Frederick fladt, 270.

Chetfirds, Russian Officers, 61.

Cliffau, Battle of, 78.

Grim described, 12. invaded by the Ruffians, ib. &c. Cronslot built by the Czar, 92. attacked by the Savedes, ib. 96.

Courtship, Russian, 59.

Courland, Province of, subdued by the Russians, 98.

Couvanski, General of the Strelitzes, raises an Insurrection, 8. his Cruelty, 9. put to death, 10.

Cubanski Tartars suppressed, 201. rise again, 224.

Czar, see Peter.

Czars, John and Peter, their Reconciliation, 24.

Czarewitz, Alexis Petrowitz, born, 29. married at Targau, 166. his Character, ib. returns to Peterfburgh, 167. unnatural to his Wife, 199. brought from Naples to Moscow, 227. a Manifesto concerning his Crimes, ib.—233. his Examination and Pardon, 234. Proceedings relating to his Conspiracy, 235—238. Tried for concealing what he knew, and prevaricating after his Pardon, 241—261. his Answer to the Czar's Declaration, 246. Account of his Flight and Return, 247, 248. Reflections on his Examination, 249—253. further Process against him, 253, 254. Confession in Answer to the Czar's Questions.

255, 256, 257. His Sentence, 258-261. Death, 262. Funeral, 264.

Czarnapata, an Action there, 117.

Czarina, Peter's first Wife, divorced, 33.

Czeremetoff, Velt-Mareschal, deseats the Swedes in Livonia, 80, 81. Marches into Courland, 93. deseated at Gemaurthoff, 94. takes Riga, 148.

D Ankleman, Mr. fent to the Czar by the Elector of Brandenburgh, 41.

Dantzick described, 43. equivocal Conduct of its Citizens, 95.

Daria, River, an Account of it, $13.

Denmark, King of, complains of the Czar, 209.

Derbent, City of, taken, 318.

Diet of Poland, King Augustus distressed by it, 75.

Dolgoruki, Prince, his Negotiations in Poland, 211, 212, 286.

Dorpt taken, 91.

Drefs, Ruffian, ridiculous, 70. reformed by the Czar's Orders, ib. exposed in a Mock-Solemnity, 72.

Dunamuden-skamz taken, 149.

Dutch dissuade the Czar from a War with Sweden, 69.

FASTER, how observed in Russia, 56.

Ebrenschild, Rear Admiral, his Bravery, 185. and Discourse to the Czar when a Prisoner, 187. advanced on the Czar's Recommendation, 301.

Elbing besieged and taken, 145.

Emperor of Germany, complains of the Czar's Manifelto, 238. ferves his Ruffian Majesty in an Answer to the Porte, 321.

F.

Fravenstad, Battle of, 101.

Frederickstadt taken by the Czar, 178.

Funerals, Russian, 60.

G.

GALGA, Sultan, defeated near Afoph, 45.
Galliczin, Prince Bafil, made Prime Minister. 11. his Character, ib. His two Expeditions to the Crim, 12, 13, 15, &c. offers an Accommodation to the Tartars, which is rejected, 18. confents to an Attempt against the Czar Peter's Life, 20. disgraced and banished, 23.

Galliczin, Prince Borice, becomes the Czar Peter's Favourite, 15. removes from Court, and is brought back with Difficulty, 25. difgraced and banished, ib. Gemaurthoff, Battle of, 94.

Globe of Gottorp brought to Petersburgh, 194.

Gollofskin, Count, his Speech to the Czar on giving him the Title of Peter the Great, &c. 303.

Gortz, Baron, his Project, 210, 213, 267, 268. his Execution, 270.

Grudzinski, the Staroft, his Irruption into Poland, 174. Gurfinski, heads a Confederacy in Poland, 202.

Gyllembourg, Count, arrested at London, 213.

HEste-Cassel, Prince, Husband to the Queen of Saveden, his Motions in Opposition to the Ruffians, 279, 280. crowned King of Saveden, 288. notifies his Accession to the Czar, 290.

Hettman of the Coffacks, Juan Samuelerrick, deposed, 12.

See Maxeppa.

Holorozin, Battle of, 115.

Holstein, Duke of, killed at Clissau, 78. [Son of the former] his Claim to the Crown of Sweden, 293. obtains the Czar's Protection, 294. arrives at the Russ fian Court, 297. Obtains the Title of Royal Highness from the Swedes, 324. Betrothed to the Czar's Daughter, 343.

Hussein-schab, King of Persia, his Misfortunes, 310, &

seq.

ACOB the Engineer, his Treachery, 36. and Punishment, 37.

Tefferyes, Mr. his Embaffy to Petersburgh, 268, 269. has an Audience, 274. recalled, 283.

Tesuits banished out of Russia, 283.

John, the Czar, Brother of Peter, joined with him, q. dies, 36.

Isbrant; Mr. his Embassy to China, 33.

Justice, Aministration of, reformed by the Czar on his Death-bed, 544.

K.

KEXHOLM taken by the Russians, 149.
Knout, a Description of that Punishment, 22.

Koningsberg described, 41.

Koning fmar, Countels of, fent to the King of Sweden

L

LAPLA, Battle of, 183.

Le Fort, Mr. his History, 26. taken into Favour, 27. reforms the Drefs of the Russian Soldiery, ib. 28. advises the Regulation of the Finances, 29. His Character, ib. Moderates the Czar's Passion, 30. puts him upon Ship-building, 34. fets out for Holland with the Czar in his Train, 40. Waits upon King William, 45. his Death, and pompous Funeral, 53.

Lefly, Major-General, his Ravages in Sweden, 281, 298.

Lezno, an obstinate Battle there, 119, &c.

Lieuwenhaupt, General, defeats the Ruffians at Gemaur, thoff, 94. fights the Battle of Lezno, 119. furrenders to Prince Menzikoff after the Defeat of Pultowa, 128.

Little Grandsire, a Skiff so called, its Consecration,

Livenia, Province of, entirely subdued, 149.

M.

Marienbourg taken by the Russians, 82.

Marriages of the Russians, 59. a Burlesque one, 72. Another, 196.

Matueof, M. de, an Account of his Affair, 123, 139-

Mazeppa, chosen Hettman of the Cossacks, 14. his History, ib. his Revolt to the Swedes, 118. deserted by his Soldiers, 122. executed in Effigy, 123.

Marvea Matweofna, Czarina Dowager, her Death and

Burial, 201.

Mecklenbourg-Schwerin, Duke of, marries the Czar's

Niece, 204.

Menzikoff, Alexander, his Origin and Rife, 30. takes Catharine, afterwards Empres, into his Service, 84. raises Contributions in Courland, 96. takes Lieuwenhaupt at Perewoloczna, 128. raises Contributions from Hamburg, Lebeck, and Dantzick, 182. feizes feveral great Men at Petersburgh, 235. convicted of Crimes, 273. and muleted, 274.

Meydel, Major-General, attacks Petersburgh, 97.

Mengden, Brigadier, invades Lapland, 291.

Mobilow, an Action near it, 118.

Monasteries retrenched, 341.

Moscow, City of, described, 3, 4, 5. one third of it burnt down, 171.

Muscowy. See Russia.

Muscoviues. See Russians.

Mustapha II. Emperor of the Turks, his Character, 35.
Myrr-Weis, brings about a Revolution in Persia, 310.
Myrr-Maghmud, Son of Myrr-Weis, his Exploits, 211, & feq. worsted by the Russians, 319.

N

NAraskins, their Intrigues, 24, 25.

Naraskin, Prince, supposed to be designed for the Czar's Successor, 309.

Narva, Siege of, 65. Battle of, 67. taken by the Czar, Neutrality of the Empire, Project of, 150.

Niestadt, or Neustadt, Congress of, 295. Treaty of 299. Norris, Sir John, his Appearance in the Baltick disappoints the Czar, 208. arrives there again, and answers a Letter from the Czar, 277. arrives a third. Time, with Orders to join the Swedish Fleet, 288.

Noteburgh in Ingermania taken, 81.

Nyslot taken by the Russians, 184.

O Fficers, Great in Russia, their Authority, 61. Old Wedding, the Czar's fo called, 169.

Oratories, Ruffian, 60.

Ormond, late Duke of, at Mittaw, 224.

Offerman, Mr. his Plan in Conjunction with Gortz, 268.

PATKUL, Count, his tragical Story, 105, 106.

Palatine of Mazovia fent to Petersburgh, 285. his Speech to the Czar, 289.

Patriarchal Dignity, Introduction of it into Russia, 57-fuppressed, 58.

Pernau

Pernau taken by the Russians, 140. Perry, Capt. ill used in Russia, 64.

Perfian Ambaffador at Moscow, 174, another at Peters-burgh, 328, 330, 331.

Perfia, an Account of the Revolutions there, 300, &

Seg.

PETER THE GREAT, his Birth and Descent, 6. succeeds his Brother Theodore, S. in Danger from his Sifter and the Strelitzes, 9. a Plot against his Life, 19, &c. his Character when young, 24, 25. enters himfelfin Le Forte's Company of Soldiers, 28. lowers the Taxes at Le Fort's Advice, 29, takes Menzikoff into Favour, 30. puts away his Wife, 33. builds fome small Veffels, 34. declares War with the Turks and Tartars, 35. his first Campaign, ib. becomes sole Monarch, 36. takes Ajoph, 37. builds a Fleet on the Black Sea, 38. a Plot against him discovered, 40. he punishes the Conspirators, ib. sets out for Holland, ib. goes thro' Riga and Koningsberg, 41. complimented by the Prussian Minister, ib. engages to support King Augustus, 42. passes thro' Dantzick, Hamburgh, &c. into Holland, 43. enters himself at Amsterdam, for a Ship Carpenter, 44. receives News of a Victory over the Turks and Tartars, 45. comes to England, and improves himself in Ship-building, 46, his Character by Bishop Burnett, 47. is entertained with a Mock Fight at Portsmouth, 48. Takes over several Artificers, and enters into a Treaty with some English Merchants, 48, 49. goes to Vienna, and is splendidly entertained there, 49. hastens home on account of a Rebellion, which he suppresses, 52. improves his Marine at Veronis, 53. concludes a Truce with the Turks, 54. begins a Reformation in Church and State, 55. forcibly detains ingenious Men in his Country, 64. Befieges Narva, 65. his Saying on the Defeat there. 68. causes the Russians to be shaved, 69. reforms feveral Customs of his Subjects, 70-74. has an Interview with King Augustus, 74. takes Noteburgh, 81. and Marienbourg, 82. casts his Eyes on Catharine, afterwards Empress, 84, her Influence over him, 86. he enters Moscow in Triumph, 87. Takes Nieschantz, and resolves to build Petersburgh, ib, proceeds in his Delign

Defign, 88. takes Dorpt and Narva, 91. builds Cronflot, 92. enters Poland with his Army, 96. made a Colonel by Augustus, 100. besieges Wybourg without Success, 107. his Letter to the Polish Diet, 108. complains of Augustus, 109. goes to Mosconv, 111. establishes a Dispensary and Hospital, ib. distresses King Charles in his March, 112, 113. appeafes a Sedition, 114. beats General Lieuwenhaupt at Lexno, 119, & Seq. wins the Battle of Pultowa, 125. writes an Account of it, 126. refuses to treat after it, 127. rewards his Officers and Soldiers, 130. offers Peace, which the K. of Sweden rejects, 131. marches into Poland, 133. his Answers to the Saxon and Polish Ministers, 134. his Interview with Augustus, 135, and the K. of Prussia, ib. goes to Mittaw, 136. bombards Riga, ib. enters Moscow in Triumph, 137. receives Satisfaction from the Queen of Great Britain for an Affront on his Ambassador, 139 -145. penetrates into Finland, and takes Wybourg, 147. marches into Germany, 151. endeavours to keep off a War with the Turks, 154. but prepares for it, 155. his Manifesto against the Porte, ib. in great Distress on the Banks of the Pruth, 161. obtains a disadvantageous Peace, 162. his Kindness to Prince Cantemir, 164. goes thro' Warfaw and Drefden to Carelsbad, 165. is present at his Son's Wedding at Targau, 166. proceeds to Petersburgh, 167. offers to become a Member of the Empire, but is rejected, ib. embroiled again with the Turks, 169. publickly married to his beloved Catharine, ibid. makes a Treaty with the Porte, 170. invests Stetin, 171. visits the King of Prussia, 172. receives an Ambassador from Persia, 174. has a fresh Variance with the Turks, which is foon over, 175, 176. takes Frederickstadt, 178. drives Count Steinbock into Tonningen, 179. goes to Hanover, ib. proceeds to Petersburgh, 180. enters Finland, and takes Abo, ib. 181. takes Thavasthus, 181, orders the Trade to be removed from Archangel to Petersburgh, 183. obtains a Victory by Sea, 184, 185. for which he triumphs, 186. and makes a Speech on the Glories of his Reign, 187. makes 2 Regulation in Favour of the Ladies, 190. receives an Embassy from the Usbeck Tartars, 191. refuses a Project for joining Petersburgh to the Continent, and why, 192. fortifies that City, ib. establishes a grand Inquifition upon his Ministers, 193. alarmed by the Tartars, 195. amuses his People with a Mock Spectacle, ib. 196. fets up an Academy, 198. restrains the Funeral Lamentations, 201. fets out with the Czarina for Germany, 203. marries his Niece to the Duke of Mecklenbourg Schwerin, 204. makes a Treaby with the Dantzickers, ib. vifits the King of Pruffia, 205. offended with his Allies at the Taking of Wifmar, 207. projects, with the King of Denmark, a Descent on Schonen, ib. commands the united Fleet of four Nations, 208. Suspends the Descent on Schonen, which offends the King of Denmark, 209. arrives at Amsterdam, 211. protests his Innocence of Goriz and Gyllembourg's Scheme, 214. goes to Paris, has feveral Interviews with the King and the Regent, and views all the Curiofities thereabouts, 215,-220. returns thro' the Netherlands to Amsterdam, 221. his Proposal to the Regent, ib. has an Interview with Baron Gortz, ib. passes thro' Berlin, Dantwick, &c. to Petersburgh, 222. erects an extraordinary Court of Justice, and makes feveral Regulations, 223. publishes a Manifesto relating to the Crimes of the Czarewitz, 227-233. examines and pardons him, 234. but profecutes his Adherents, 235, &c. complains of the Dutch, who answer him, 239. his Declaration to his Son, 242 Questions proposed to the Czarewitz, 255. visits that Prince when dying, 262. publishes a circular Letter concerning his Death, 263. endeavours to filence any false Reports about that Event, 265. prosecutes more of the Czarewitz's Adherents, 265, 271. refuses to affift the King of Denmark, 269. disturbed at the King of Sweden's Death, 271. fets up a Tribunal for an Inquifition on his Ministry, 272, 273. expostu-. lates with the King of Poland on his new Alliance, 275. his Terms to the Swedes, 276. Measures taken against him in Defence of Saveden, ib. is disturbed at the English Fleet, and writes to Admiral Norris, 277. publishes a Manisesto, ib. ravages Saveden, 278-281. his Reasons for so doing, 281. quarrels with the Court of Great Britain, 283. banishes the Jesuits, ib. sets up Assemblies at Petersburgh, 284. falls sick, but recovers, 285. his Refident ordered to depart England 288. forms a great Army in Finland, 289. receives a Minister from the new King of Sweden, 290. obtains a Victory at Sea, ib. returns the King of Saveden's Compliment, 291. augments his Marine, 293. makes new Propositions to the Swedes, 294. his Reafons for defiring a Peace, 295. accepts the Mediation of France, ib. endeavours to fet the English against their Ministry, 296. corrects Disorders in the Receipt of Money, ib. fends a Chart of the Caspian Sea to the Academy of Sciences at Paris, 207. refuses a Cessation of Arms, 298. his Demonstrations of Joy on the Peace of Neustadt, 300. restores the Livonians Privileges, 301. appoints a publick Thanksgiving, and grants a general Amnesty, ib. perfuaded to take upon him the Title of Emperor, Father of his Country, &c. 302. the Ceremony of conferring it, ib. &c. congratulated thereupon, 304. demands the Title of Emperor from Foreign Powers, 305. divides his Ships among the trading Towns, 306, 324. effectually fettles the Trade at Petersburgh, ib. has the Bible printed in the Ruffian Language, 307. enters Moscow in Triumph, ib. requires an Oath from his Subjects, that they will approve the Successor he shall appoint, 308. Motives of his War with Perfia, 309, & seq. prepares for an Expedition to the Caspian Sea, 313. makes his Will, 314. convokes a Synod to reform Abuses in the Church, 315. fets out on his Expedition, ib. publishes a Manifesto to pacify the Turks, 316. Journal of his Expedition, 317, 318, 319. on his Return, discovers fresh Criminals, 322. orders a Union between the Greeks and Protestants, 323. put Denmark to great Expences, ib. 225. confecrates the Little Grandfire, 326. receives an Ambassador from Persia, 328. Concludes a Treaty with him, 330, and another with the Porte. 332. publishes a Proclamation for the Coronation of his Empress, 333. erects an Academy of Sciences and Belles Lettres, 335. concludes an Alliance with Saveden, 336. assists at the Empress's Coronation, ibid .- 42. retrenches the Monasteries, 342. betroths his Daughter to the Duke of Holftein, 343. falls fick, ibid

dies, ibid. reforms the Courts of Justice on his Death-

Bed, 344. Procession at his Funeral, 345.

Petersburgh, the Defign of it formed, 87. Built, 88. inhabited, 89. attacked in vain, 97. Trade removed thither, 113. 306. fortified, 192.

Priest's, Muscovite, their great Ignorance, 55.

Pomerania taken into Sequestration. 197.

Primate, Cardinal, of Poland, his Character and Intrigues, 76, 77. waits on the King of Sweden, 78. declares the Throne vacant, 90.

Pruth, Action and Peace of, 161, 162. Articles of the Peace, 163.

Pulkona, Battle of, 179.

Pultowa, Siege of, 124. Battle of, 125.

R.

REligion, Muscovite, a particular Account of it, 55,

Renchild, General, beats the Russian at Fravenstad, 101. his Discourse with the Czar after the Battle of Pultowa, 129. returns home, 226

Retinues of the Russian Nobility reduced by the Czar, 73.

Revel taken by the Russians, 149, Revenues in Russia regulated, 62.

Riga described, 41. bombarded, 163. taken by the Ruffians, 148.

Romanzoff, M. his Negotiations with Sweden, 292, 294. Rostoff, Bishop of, his Trial, 236. Execution with several others, 237.

Rugen, Isle of, taken, 200.

Russia described, 1. its Climate, 2. Product, 3.

Ruffians, Enemies to all Innovations, 39. defeat the Swedes at Cronflot, 93.

streams at Grongior, 93.

SChafiroff, Vice-Chancellor, difgraced and banished, 322.

Schools first erected in Russia, 63.

Shift-Sleeves of the Russian Women, 70.

Siberia, a Description of it, 31. how reduced under the Muscovites, ib. Mines there, 293.

Skoropatsky, John, elected Hettman of the Coffacks, 123.

Stetin fequestered to the Czar, 182.

Sophia,

Sophia, Princess, her Character and Intrigues, 7, & feq. plots against her Brother's Life, 19, & feq. sent into a Monastery, 24.

Sotof, the Czar's Jester, his humorous Wedding, 196. Stanislaus Lescinski, elected King of Poland, 91. his Anfwer to Augustus's Letter, 104.

Steinbock, Count, makes a Sally from Stralfund, 172. advances into Jutland, 173. driven into Tonningen, 179.

Stralfund taken, 198.

Strelitzes, Russian Soldiers, rise against Peter, 8. their Ravages, 9. make their Submission, 11. supplanted by a new Company, 29. enter into a Conspiracy, 50. their Name and Order suppressed, 52.

Stroginof, a Russ Merchant, procures the Province of Siberia, 31.

Saveden, King of, See Charles.

Sweden, Queen of, several Powers enter into Alliance with her, 276, 277, 287. answers the Czar's Manifesto, 277. her Country ravaged by the Russians, 278—281. resigns her Crown to her Husband, 287. See Hesse-Cassel.

T.

TARTARS, their Hostilities against the Russians, 157,

Thavastbus taken by the Russians, 181.

Thekevalitau, Prefident of the Strelitzes, undertakes to affaffinate the Czar Peter, 20. delivered up, and put to the Knout, 22. beheaded, 24.

Theodore, the Czar, his Character, 7. Death, 8. Timofewitz, Jeremak, the Siberian Pirate, 31.

Tolfoi, Mr. his Negotiations at the Porte, 151, 152.

Tonningen, Count Steinbock takes refuge there, 179.

taken, 192.

Troitsky Monastery, the Czar Peter conveyed thither, 9. Turks deliberate on a War with Russia, 153. resolve, 154. their Advantage at the Pruth, 161. break the Peace of Pruth, 169. enter into a fresh Treaty, 170. come to a Rupture again, 176. which is soon over, ib. jealous of the Czar's Preparations against Myrr-Maghmud, Maghmud, 316. upon the Point of breaking, 320. pacified, and turns their Arms against Perfia, 321. again dissatisfied with Russia, 331. but reconciled, U.

234.

U.L.A., Fortress of, surprizeed, 198.

Ulbeck Tartars send an Embassy to the Czar, 191.

WATER, Holy, revered in Russia, 60.

Whitworth, Mr. makes up an Affront with the Court of Russia, 139-145.

William III. King of England, diffuades the Czar from a War with Saveden, 68.

Wismar surrendered to the Danes, 205.

Wolfembuttle, Princess of, married to the Czarewitz, 166. delivered of a Daughter, 193. of a Son, and dies in Childbed, 198, 199.

Women, Rufflan, Regulations in their Favour, 71. Wybourg besieged and taken, 147.

YEAR, Russian, the Beginning of it altered, 63.

